

Finding Our Angels

by Jane Stuart

When we remember God and when we look for angels in the hearts of those who seek we find God's likeness in an open book with pages turned by angels who forsook another world to build us their triptych.

for guidance in their hearts, a springfresh brook flowing in heavens doorways where they speak
we find God's likeness in an open book that opens to allow our hearts to look at angels' faces and find their mystique.

When we remember God and when we look back into time that rattled and that shook our places then we are allowed to peek.

We find God's likeness in an opened book cradled by angels and their soft uplook at heaven where we find our passion's peak.

When we remember God and when we look,
we find our angels in a storybook.
