Kentucky African American Authors, Musicians and Photographers

By Elisabeth (Lisa) Kone
Introduction

This research paper fulfills the requirement of the Library Fellowship for Undergraduate Students of Color for the 2021 spring semester. It is based on the lives of African American individuals from Kentucky and/or those who have spent several years of their lives in Kentucky. Many African Americans across the state of Kentucky have proven to be educated, skilled and talented. From the 1800s to the last generation, these people lived to become great in their specific domains such as literature writing in its different forms, music as well as photography. They have gone through different challenges to make history and be examples to the generations after them. This research includes 55 African Americans from Kentucky; 22 authors, 26 musicians including two groups of two and four individuals respectively and finally 7 photographers including a group made up of two individuals. This is a total of 50 bibliographies. The cover photograph incorporates some of the authors and musicians discussed in this paper: Lionel Hampton, bell hooks, Frank X Walker, Alice Allison Dunnigan, Valerie Coleman, Houston A. Baker Jr., Suzan-Lori Parks, Charles H. Wesley, Boyce D. Watkins, Crystal Wilkinson, Bobby William Austin, Lyman T. Johnson, Daniel Burley, W.C. Handy, Bryson Tiller and Gayl Jones.

Reflection

This project had ups and downs. Certain times, I got frustrated due to the fact that I could not find the right information to add to every biography; other times, I was happy going through the different articles and websites because I was able to get what I was looking for. During these 120 hours, I learned so much about black people, their struggles and successes as well as how things change overtime. The different generations go through different phases and each individual has their personal struggles also contributing to their progress, failures and achievements. This was a great opportunity for me to do research. Being a psychology major, this project gave me some experience and I developed a greater interest in reading and writing. I hope I become an authoress someday. Seeing the importance of photographers in the Kentucky African American history also motivated me to keep working towards one of my goals which is to eventually become a professional photographer; own studios and make history.
