AAUP Reports On History Department

LESLIE C. FARRIS
NEWS EDITOR

An investigation of John DeMarcus' nonappointment as chair of the Department of Geography and History has concluded the chair search was conducted improperly and the university should conduct a full hearing into the issue.

The Kentucky Conference of American Association of University Professors conducted an investigation of the situation Aug. 30 on campus. A report issued last week states five conclusions:

- "The matter of appointing a Chair in the Department of History and Geography was mismanaged by the Dean from the beginning."

- "NKU administrators denied charges DeMarcus' nonappointment was caused by his involvement in collective bargaining, and investigators were not able to definitively prove the charges were true.

- However, the report states, "The perception among many with whom we discussed the matter remains that Professor DeMarcus' campaign for collective bargaining was the underlying basis for the decisions made."

The investigating committee also suggested, "A full airing of this issue might be in the best interest of the University."

- University officials did not obtain student input in the chair selection process. "Where matters of teaching are involved it is essential that all members of the University community have a say in the matter," the report states.

- Every search should "attend and adhere" to Affirmative Action principles.

- Until the matter of a department chair has reached a conclusion, the history and geography department will suffer further damage. "The present atmosphere of confusion, distrust, instability within the department is a real one and contrary to the best interests of the University," the report states.

The investigation of the situation was conducted by Rose Dagirmanjian, professor of pharmacology and toxicology at University of Louisville, and Paul Oberst, retired professor of law at University of Kentucky. Dagirmanjian and Oberst also authored the report.

The report notes the university's "Handbook for Department Chairpersons calls for a search committee (consisting of four full-time, tenure-track faculty and one student) when a chair position is vacant."

The report states, "Instead Dean Poole

Poole Deals With Cases Of Sexual Harassment

The administrators at Northern have a difficult role in dealing with harassment issues because they need to protect both students and faculty.

Darryl Poole, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, oversees various academic departments at NKU. He said he has dealt with only 10-15 sexual harassment cases.

He said NKU does not condone sexual harassment.

Sexual harassment can be a frightening experience for a student of any age or sex, said Dean Poole.

Poole suggested the following steps for anyone who believes they are being harassed:

- Detail the offensive behavior right away. A supervisor needs details of what has occurred.

- Be ready to follow through with a formal complaint.

- A complaint received by an anonymous victim is difficult to pursue.

"The university should not and can't try to control relationships between people," said Poole, "The university should ensure that a non-threatening environment exist inside and outside the classroom."

There is no clear way to handle it. We don't want to risk giving students the flexibility they need in reporting or discussing these incidents to whomever they feel comfortable. So there is no central reciprocity for these incidents, said Poole.

"It's a troublesome thing when you know something's going on and you can't do anything about it," added Poole.

Poole said he can't speak on any of the

An Apology . . .

The Oct. 3 issue of The Northerner focused on the international nature of our campus community.

As stated in an editorial, The Northerner hopes to shed some light on the issues addressed in President Leon Boothe's State of the University Address: racism and sexism, multiculturalism and internationalism.

The issue included a syndicated cartoon from College Press Service that The Northerner felt focused on economic and war issues. Reactions to the cartoon made it clear that others read a different message. They saw offensive racial stereotypes in the cartoon.

That clearly was not our intent and represents a setback in our efforts to promote multiculturalism. Consequently, we diverge from usual editorial policy and issue a front-page apology to make it clear we are firmly committed to that goal. We apologize to those offended by the cartoon.

wrote to the Department on January 22, 1990, suggesting that the faculty as a whole constitute the Search Committee, that he be the Chair of the Search Committee, that he would receive the applications, that he would conduct the secret ballot from the nominations from the department, announce the choice, reach 'suitable' terms with the department's choice and that he would recommend the appointment to the Provost and President."

The report adds no student or Affirmative Action Office involvement was sought.

"In this regard, fault can be found with Dean Poole for not following the written guideline and to some degree with the faculty for accepting the deviation from the policy at the start," the report states.

The report continues to state once the process began, the faculty members were under the impression the candidate receiving the majority of votes would be offered the chair. The only candidates for the position were DeMarcus, professor of history, and Robert Vitz, professor of geography and acting-chair at the time.

"However, once it was determined that Dr. DeMarcus had received the majority, the process seemed to be totally

Education Enrollment Up

MARLENE KINMAN
STAFF WRITER

Despite a large increase in enrollment and a small increase in staff, the quality of education in NKU's Education Department remains high, said Dale Lawver, education department chairperson.

According to figures provided by Lawver, enrollment in the teacher education program increased from 145 in the fall 1989 to 183 this fall—a 26 percent increase.

In addition, two faculty positions were vacated during the summer due to "geographic liking," Lawver said.

One new faculty member, Valeria Amburgy, was hired this semester. "And we are in the process of hiring five additional faculty," he said.

"In the interim, we're using part-time and temporary faculty. We've been very fortunate in hiring individuals with doctorates and retirees who are teaching in their area of retirement.

"There is no gap in students' education. Class size has been kept intentionally relatively small," Lawver said.

Lawver cited the high quality of NKU's teacher education program as one probable reason for the surge in enrollment at a time when "many other colleges are experiencing declines in their teacher education programs."

According to an informal report Lawver recently sent to President Leon Boothe, 97.3 percent of NKU's teacher trainees passed the National Teacher Exam, a proficiency test, last year on their first attempt.

"These are bragging figures," said Lawver. "Statewide, the average of successful completions was 90 percent."

Data released last month showed NKU outranked the seven other Kentucky state institutions in percentage of teacher trainees passing the exam. Only three of the 16 private colleges in the state ranked better than NKU.

"Our graduates are well prepared," said Lawver. "And they are sought after just because they are NKU graduates. They will get interviews quicker than graduates from other schools."

NKU's high standards draw students who are committed and motivated, Lawver said. "Our admission standards are higher than ever," he said.

Last spring, 20 secondary education students were admitted to the program while 29 were denied. Thirty-seven elementary students were admitted; 31 were denied.

"But we don't tell these people who were denied that they can never be teachers," said Lawver. "They can remediate the deficiencies, then reapply."

Counseling Center Addresses Rape Issue

DIANE GOETZ

For the sake of simplicity, "he" is used when referring to an offender and "she" is used when referring to a victim. According to the Counseling Center, this is typically the case.

There is a distinctive difference in the after effects of acquaintance and stranger rape, stated the NKU Counseling Center.

When a person is raped by a stranger, their primary concern is fear. When they are assaulted or raped by an acquaintance, they experience a loss of trust and a sense of guilt, said Ann Richards, personal counselor.

She added, victims also experience a sense of devalue and a loss of self worth and self confidence.

Victims of acquaintance rape, find it difficult to establish good relationships where they feel safe, Richards said.

They also may experience a number of physical problems such as nightmares, eating and sleeping problems, head and back aches. An experience like this always interferes with personal relationships, health and even studies, added Richards.

Acquaintance rape is hard to talk about because the victim does not know who to talk to. She feels the burden of proof is on her. She is often afraid to talk to someone because she doesn't know who to trust.

"A victim tends to assume a lot of responsibility in cases like this," said Richards, "the fact of responsibility to the defender is much clearer in stranger rape."

She often feels the way she dressed, looked, acted or maybe something she said resulted in this behavior. The victim must be able to externalize this problem in order to heal, added Richards.

On a small campus community, the victim is afraid of being marked or identified, so she will often not come forward.

There needs to be measures preventing this form of offender protection, Richards added.

Mike Meier, another personal counselor, said the offender is desensitized of the harm he has caused another person. Because he has gotten away with the crime once, he becomes immune to the effects on the other person.

Often the offender could be looking for attention. An exhibitionist often wants to be caught, Meier said.

What offenders fail to realize, Meier said, is they devalue themselves. The person usually doesn't even realize they need help.

Both the victim and offender are harmed by this form of depersonalized sex, said Richards.

Both counselors have dealt with rape victims and offenders. On-campus victims and off-campus victims have come to their office for counseling.

Our office deals with these matters in confidence, Meier said. "I do get permission from the victim to go beyond this office," he adds.

Richards and Meier agree students should be aware of their options in these matters.

One option in an assault case may be

$1.4 Million Faith Center

RAY EGAN
STAFF WRITER

NKU is currently adding a $1.4 million faith center to its Highland Heights campus.

The center, sponsored by the NKU Interfaith Association, Inc., will house three campus ministries—the Catholic Newman Center, the United Methodist Wesley Foundation and the Episcopalian Canterbury House.

Association President Mary Ann Weiss said the group signed a lease with the state in early 1989 which provides that the center will be built by the association using private funds on land determined by NKU.

When the building is completed, the center will be given to the university, and in return, NKU will provide utilities and lease space to the association for $1 per year. The lease is good for 40 years.

"The development, according to the lease, must be started before Jan. 31, 1996," said Weiss. "We are hoping it will be much sooner, though it takes time to raise this amount of money."

The center is at its developmental stage. According to John Cahill, campus minister at the Newman Center, "We have received the architect's sketches for the center. We must approve them, and then go ahead with the fund-raising part of the project."

The architects, Roger Short Associates and Muller Associates of Cincinnati, were chosen in July 1989 after screening ten applicants for the position.

The center will consist of a small sanctuary, small and large meeting rooms, offices for counseling and administrative work, and a lounge for students.

"The center is more or less a core of student activity, with a religious dimension. It will offer an opportunity for easy access to the student," said Anne Easton, campus minister for the United Methodist Wesley Foundation.

The building will be located between the dorms and the main part of the campus across the street from the Natural Science Building.

"The center is designed in a way that the church will have a more visible presence on campus," said Cahill.

The center, when completed, will be open to the NKU community, yet priority is given to members of the Interfaith Association. The association is also interested in extending its membership to other denominations.

Information concerning the Interfaith project or membership into the association is available from Mary Ann Weiss at 572-5475 or 491-3507.

NKU Tuition Low Compared To Average

GLEN N. GILMORE
STAFF WRITER

NKU's tuition for the 1990-91 academic year is considerably lower than the 1989 national average.

Northern students, who reside in Kentucky, pay $645 per semester for tuition. The average 1989 full-time rate for in-state students was $1,657 each semester.

NKU students experienced a 12.56 percent tuition increase over last year's cost.

The national average increase, according to AASCU (American Association of State Colleges and Universities), was almost 8 percent.

The national tuition average for out-of-state college students in 1989, according to AASCU, is $4,563. Out-of-state tuition for undergraduates at NKU cost $1,800 per semester. Out-of-state undergraduate tuition has increased 9.42 percent from last year's $1,645 cost.

AASCU attributes the increases of tuition for a few reasons. The lack of financial support coming from the national basis. AASCU stressed that more money was needed from the states to alleviate the monetary burdens. Other elements of tuition price hikes are salary increases for professors and other staff members, maintenance and inflation.

changed... Every faculty member with whom we discussed this matter felt the Dean altered the procedure once in motion," the report states.

The report notes there was "a state of instability, confusion and continued skepticism" within the department.

"We are disturbed to hear that there may be a 'secret' file on Dr. DeMarcus in the Administration," the report adds.

The report also comments on the investigators' meeting with President Leon Boothe, Vice President and Provost David Jorns and Dean Darryl Poole.

"We were assured that Dr. DeMarcus' involvement with efforts in the past to secure a collective bargaining agent via the AAUP had no effect on the decisions pertaining to him," the report states.

"Furthermore, we were assured that Dr. DeMarcus had been given due consideration of his grievance by the Peer Review Advisory Committee."

The investigators also discussed the matter with Frank Dietrich, chair of the Peer Review Advisory Committee, and James Thomas, president of Faculty Senate.

"...it was determined that the finding by the Committee that it did not see any basis to the grievance without providing a hearing and airing of the case does not render sufficient assurance that Dr. DeMarcus was given due process and that his academic freedom was not denied."

The report was preliminary and no action has yet been taken by the national AAUP organization. If the national organization does investigate and finds DeMarcus nonappointment was caused by his work to attain a collective bargaining agreement, the AAUP may censure NKU.

AAUP discourages professor members from accepting a position at censured universities and colleges.

In a cover letter to the report, Dagirmanjian and Oberst stated, "We are hopeful that our efforts will help to resolve the situation at Northern without further attention made to it beyond the Kentucky Conference level."

Peter Hollister, vice president for university relations and development, said Boothe gave copies of the report to Jorns and Sheila Bell, NKU's attorney.

"(Boothe) asked them to review the report and asked for a recommendation for what, if anything, should be done," Hollister said.

Acting as the only university spokesperson on the matter, Hollister said he could not comment further.

"This is a personnel matter and we don't talk about that in the media or elsewhere," he said.

DeMarcus said he believes the report was objective and the matter will soon be resolved.

"I hope the administration will do something about the situation—not only for me personally, but for the department as well," he said.

student relationships at all. None of the student incidents are reported to him. Only student-faculty relationships.

Poole's duty is not only to the students but also to the faculty. If something has been misinterpreted, it puts that faculty member in an uncomfortable position.

As a supervisor one must listen carefully, get all of the facts, find out if a formal complaint is possible, let your own supervisor know what you are handling, then handle the situation.

"This is difficult. Most cases of sexual harassment involve males being aggressive toward females," said Poole. "Because of the nature of our society, it is difficult for women to come forward."

"Unless they can be courageous, we will never be able to help them. In the long haul, the student will be better off herself if she comes forward."

Greek Letter Addressed

Dear Editor,

In response to the remark "schizophrenia" made by James Lidington, insinuating multiple personalities in the Greek System. Mr. Lidington, do you know what schizophrenia is? In this statement you have implied that schizophrenia is a multiple personality disorder. You have truly shown your intelligence. Multiple personality disorder and schizophrenia are two completely different mental disorders. If you want a quoted definition consult the DSM-III.

In response to our secrecy, we are not secret organizations. The public is more than welcome to observe our meetings or anything else we involved in. Many times we have been involved in events on campus and NEVER has it been cited in The Northerner. Whose fault is that?

I have one final comment to James Lidington: Until you know what you are writing about, I suggest you hold your pen silent.

Respectfully,

Sorority Writes About Letter

Dear Editor,

In response to the letter regarding Greek Rush: Please make sure you verify facts before making accusations. Obviously you have not researched the process of rush or you would have uncovered a wealth of information. There has never been any secrecy about rush; it is open to every college student at NKU. Every year a rush booklet is distributed outlining aspects of each fraternity and sorority. Rush is not a social process but an educational one which allows college students to see what Greek life offers. Furthermore, sorority rush has always been dry on this campus, so it is not impossible to have dry Greek functions.

Cartoon Was Not Funny

Dear Editor,

I don't find your cartoon on page 6, of the Oct. 3 edition funny. There are too many black male students and staff and faculty, for that matter, who are an application or paycheck away from being in this condition. We see you can show the worst, next time try and find a more positive depiction of blacks. Then we'll be even.

SG Discusses Resolutions

Dear Students,

The past two weeks have been very productive for Student Government.

The General Assembly passed two resolutions at the September 24 meeting.

The first resolution was introduced by Amy Conrad relating to sexual harassment. The resolution reads: Whereas 30% of college women are harassed each year, as reported by the American College Association; whereas under current procedure the harassed must confront the accused offender before taking further action; and whereas it has been proposed that the harassed first go to the Vice-President of Student Development in an effort to resolve such matters as opposed to leaving them unnoticed; be it therefore resolved that we endorse the revision of this procedure.

The General Assembly also passed a resolution introduced by Rachel Klinsk relating to the Residence Hall Council Chairperson.

The resolution states; Whereas Resident Hall is another committee of Student Government; whereas all other chairpersons are paid of our four standing committees; and whereas the Resident Hall Chairperson should be paid; be it therefore resolved that $212.50 per each semester for a total of $425 a year will be paid to Resident Hall Chairperson which is the same amount as other chairpersons.

Resident Hall elections were held on October 9.

The Resident Hall Council consists of eight members. There is one representative form each of the six wings and each common.

While in the past, the Resident Hall Council has not been successful, we have changed a few aspects to make it work.

First, the chairperson was not elected. Instead, he was appointed by the SG president. This year I will appoint the student who wins the Resident Hall Chairperson election. This gives resident hall students a voice in this important position.

Also, the chairperson was not paid. Thus, there was not enough incentive for the students.

If you are interested in the Resident Hall Council, please contact Vice-President Christy Franzen at 572-5737.

SG sponsored Voter Registration Days with the Young Democrats and Campus Republicans on October 2 and 3 in the University Center Lobby. SG actively seeks to register all citizens to vote. We also keep a supply of voter forms in the offices in case someone wants to register spontaneously.

Students may have noticed bright, neon plastic cups across campus. The cups are part of a new recycling program sponsored by Professional Food Management and SG.

The cups are to be reused each time a student buys a drink in the cafeteria. The cup saves students money and cuts down on the use of styrofoam. A student can purchase a 28 ounce drink for only 83 cents, a dime off the cost of a 24 ounce cup. This saves the student approximately a quarter each time the cup is used.

We distributed 450 cups during Voter Registration Days. Please remember the cups are to be reused in the cafeteria not to keep at home. We will order additional cups only if the cups are reused.

On October 9, I represented NKU as a member of the Student Advisory Committee, which consists of the student body presidents of each of the eight state universities, in Frankfort. We discussed a number of upcoming incidents affecting students in the state of Kentucky including the methodology for setting tuition and set a task group on Tuition Policy Review. Debbie McGuffey, associate director for Kentucky governmental affairs, discussed with the group the proposed student health insurance bill, which is House Bill 239.

Congratulations to Shafique Hague and Sonia Phillips for being appointed Representatives-at-Large.

SG is considering sponsoring a Rape Awareness Day. If you feel this would be worthwhile, please contact Special Activities Chairperson, Jonathan Kollman at 572-5149.

Cordially Yours,
Michelle Deeley

Greek Letter Debated In Favor Of Reinhardt

Dear Editor,
I'd like to respond to the letter by James J. Lidington attacking fraternities and the Greek system.

Mr. Lidington admits he has never been to a Greek function and then takes it upon himself to speak for all non-Greeks. If it's true that non-Greeks aren't present at Greek events, I hope this will change.

Mr. Lidington compares the IPC to inmates running an asylum. Don't students run student government? Don't doctors run the AMA? I find it offensive for someone to say my contributions are futile. Additionally, may I not speak candidly to members without being quoted in a scandal rag?

I totally disagree with Mr. Lidington's statement that it's unreasonable to expect people to socialize without alcohol. If you cannot function socially without alcohol, then perhaps you need to contact the proper agencies to deal with your problem.

As I have come to the end of my 200-word allotment, which The Northerner's staff graciously allowed Mr. Lidington to exceed by approximately 290 words, I'd like to express my desire to debate Mr. Lidington on any of the remaining points.

Dear Editor,
Have you noticed there are often two kinds of candidates for public office. One kind surrounds himself with hard core political rejects and other negative people. They usually have virtually nothing positive to offer about themselves and often cannot speak or write for themselves. These people start out in the garbage heap and usually wind up there when the election is over. They collectively get together. They write and speak half-truths or just no truth at all. In fact, they see life that way. They are willing and will say and do anything. They actually believe, we the people, the positive solid majority cannot see through them. But we do.

God forbid we elect this type individual. They are everything the vast majority of Northern Kentuckians are not. In Frankfort they would be a total embarrassment to the people of Northern Kentucky.

Fortunately, there are the quality candidates who have the talent, ability, courage, and good sense it takes to represent our area. These candidates put forth the facts. They are positive. They can speak. They can write. They tell the people as much about themselves as possible. They walk with their head up high. They are like the majority of Northern Kentuckians—family oriented, dedicated, hard working, intelligent. These people make you feel good about government. They make you feel proud when they go to Frankfort.

Am I ever thankful that Jon David Reinhardt is one of these quality individuals. A Representative you, I, and every Northern Kentuckian can take pride in.

Thank you,
Barb Hofstetter

Lidington Questioned

Dear Editor,
In response to Mr. Lidington's letter we would first like to say that we are sorry that Mr. Lidington is ignorant to the innerworkings of the Greek system.

We do not purposely have a secretive nature and everyone does have the right to know what is going on but, of course we haven't seen Mr. Lidington trying to get involved in the Greek system. He is more than welcome.

Greeks take a very active role in campus life and Rush is a very important part in maintaining the legacy. There are many more parts to a fraternity or sorority than merely socializing. Once again these are things you would find out if you were involved.

In closing, we would just like to say Mr. Lidington, "Don't knock it until you try it!"

Student Writes On Rape

Dear Editor,
I am writing to you concerning the recent articles on rape. Although I myself was not raped on campus, I was a victim of sexual harassment in broad daylight.

Between noon and 12:30 on Tuesday, Sept. 11, I was sitting in my car doing some studying before going to class. There was an empty parking space beside my car and a beat-up, white, two-door hatchback pulled in next to me. I turned to see who pulled in, and I didn't know the man. I thought nothing of him and continued to read my book.

As I continued to study, the bizarre movements of the man caught my attention in the corner of my eye. After a few seconds I turned to see what exactly he was doing and much to my surprise he had exposed himself and was masturbating.

I was quite upset after the incident happened, but I did not report it at the time. But after reading the recent stories I thought this incident was worth reporting and hopefully it won't happen again.

Omega Forum Outraged

Dear Editor,
We, the members of the Omega Forum, were outraged and deeply offended at the severe lack of tact used in the decision to publish the racist cartoon on the opinion page of The Northerner's International Edition. Simply, the fact that this cartoon is printed in the "International" issue shows the hypocrisy behind the judgment of the editorial staff.

We feel that an apology is in order to the students of Northern Kentucky University. Education is a tool for us to rid America of bigotry. A newspaper should be a prime example of ethical behavior. We sincerely hope that The Northerner will use better judgment in their printing of articles and a better understanding of the possible repercussions thereof.

Cartoon Found Insulting

Dear Editor,
I am writing this letter in regards to last week's issue of The Northerner— The International Issue.

In this issue was a cartoon which read: "No Job? No Hope? No Future? Quit Worryin', There's a war on the way..." I found this cartoon to be very distasteful on your staff's behalf, very disrespectful and insulting.

Let me refresh your memory. The cartoon was one which showed African Americans sitting in a "slum" being depicted as poor, helpless, jobless and wasteful. Then there was an older African American "advising" them not to worry because a war is on the way which will give aid to them finding jobs.

I can't begin to tell you how many instances have occurred in your newspaper which are just outright tasteless. This has to be among the worst. Your thoughts are very primitive. There are people, mind you, from all walks of life in this predicament. Not African Americans alone.

If this issue was dedicated to the International students, then why is it that no students from Africa were interviewed? Is this cartoon supposed to represent them? I certainly hope not!!!

So tell me...what does this picture have to do with the International Issue? Better yet what does it have to do with anything? This picture is a human thing not a BLACK THING YOU MUST UNDERSTAND.

CORRECTIONS: In the Sept. 26 issue of The Northerner, a mistake appeared in the annexation story. Steve Franzen, city attorney for Highland Heights, said that although it has been said that the road annexation would give the city a foot in the door to annex the entire college, this was not the city's intentions. He later said that the city planner has been suggesting the city annex the university roads, but the council is just now addressing the issue.

On page 4 of the Oct. 3 issue, a picture appeared with two mistakes. The correct name of the student is Htin Kyaw, and he is from Burma.

NKU Honors Club Takes Active Role In Environmental Week

JENNIFER OVERHULSE
STAFF WRITER

The NKU Honors Club is becoming more environmentally aware by sponsoring Environmental Awareness Week, Oct. 8-12.

Carrie Clifton, president of the Honors Club, said, "Last year everyone was becoming more and more concerned with environmental issues and we decided we needed to become more aware."

The club will present several speeches and events during the week.

On Monday, Ken Cook, who runs Kentucky's Water Watch program, gave a public lecture at 2 p.m. in Landrum 506.

The Earth Company from the University of Cincinnati gave a presentation in Landrum 506 at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

At 2 p.m. Wednesday in the University Center Theater, Danny L. Whitacre, the Honor's Club treasurer, will be showing a film entitled, "Kentucky— This Is My Land."

The film depicts Jesse Stuart's view of Kentucky, said Whitacre.

"His view is an agrarian view that is quickly vanishing. The film shows scenes from Greenup County, which is along the Ohio River about 30 miles west of Ashland, in the late 1920s, '30s and '40s," he said.

"I'm not an environmentalist," Whitacre said. "I'm just an ordinary human being who is interested in preserving Kentucky."

Water, Air and Vital Earth, NKU's environmental group, will give a presentation in the University Center 108 at 4 p.m. Thursday. This will be followed by an organic potluck dinner in UC 232. Reservations are being accepted by the Honors Program.

Doug Baker, a senior in the Honors Program, will present a lecture and discussion session about his research this summer in Yellowstone National Park and other environmental issues in Landrum 506 at 2 p.m. Friday.

The Honors Club has also volunteered to clean up the plaza level of the campus for all of October.

"The physical plant employees have been spending about six hours a day cleaning up after (the students)," said Clifton.

"The Honors Club would like to challenge all other campus organizations to take a month or a week to clean up the campus," he said. "We hope that other organizations will not only accept this challenge, but will be more conscious of taking care of the campus."

WAVE and the Honors Club are selling T-shirts in conjunction with Environmental Awareness Week. The shirts are available in the Honors Club lounge, Landrum 429, for $7.50.

Campus Cups Promote Environmental Concern

NKU is following a nationwide trend among college campuses in becoming more environmentally conscious.

In a cooperative effort between Student Government and Professional Food Management (PFM), SG is hoping to reduce the amount of styrofoam products used on campus and save the students money at the same time, said Michelle Deeley, president of Student Government.

On Wednesday, October 3, SG passed out 450 28-ounce plastic cups to students free of charge in the University Center.

These free cups are to be used and re-used by students and faculty members at NKU. They can purchase a 28-ounce beverage for 83 cents. This is a 25 cents saving per drink.

PFM liked the idea and was willing to work with SG on this project, said Deeley. She worked on the project throughout the summer. She added that similar programs have been quite successful on other college campuses.

"We wanted to get to know people on campus and wanted them to be aware of us," said Judy Long, associate director of PFM. "We thought this would be one way of becoming part of the campus."

PFM ordered the cups and took monetary responsibility. SG promoted the cups and distributed them to the students.

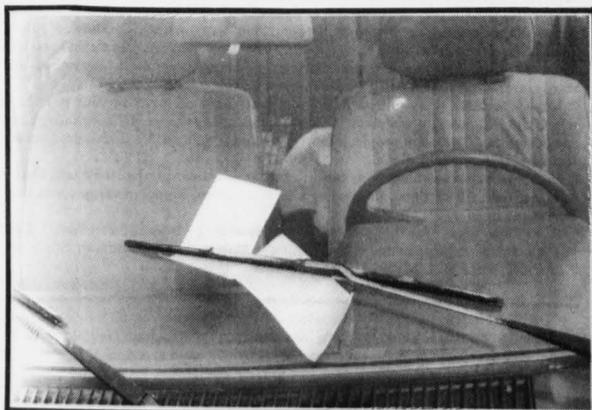

"I think it went well. The students seem to like it," said Tom Wynn, representative to SG.

Students have approached SG a number of times about the excessive use of styrofoam in food service. This is one way to cut down on this use of styrofoam, said Deeley.

SG and PFM are waiting to re-order the cups to see if students actually re-use them, added Deeley.

"The Boys From Syracuse" An NKU Musical Comedy In The Fine Arts Center

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

If one set of singing twins is confusing, imagine the potential for confusion when two sets of singing twins take the main stage of NKU's Fine Arts Center in the musical comedy, "The Boys from Syracuse."

"Syracuse" features music by Richard Rogers and lyrics by Lorenz Hart, including songs like "Sing For Your Supper" and "Falling in Love With Love."

The book, by George Abbott, based on Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors," follows the antics of twin servants and masters in Ancient Greece.

A student cast of 32 is directed and choreographed by theatre faculty member Joe Conger.

Other NKU faculty contributing to the production are musical director Gary Johnson, scenic designer Ronald A. Shaw, lighting designer Bill Braksdale and costume designer Gretchen H. Sears.

Produced jointly by the Department of Theatre and Department of Music, the production opened Thursday, Oct. 4, with 8 p.m. performances nightly through Sunday, Oct. 7 and repeating Oct. 11-13.

Two Sunday matinees at 3 p.m. on Oct. 7 and 14 were also scheduled.

General admission tickets are $5 with a $3 rate for students and senior citizens. For reservations, phone 572-5464.

for the offender and the victim to sit down with a counselor and the Dean of Students to work it out verbally. Admitting the wrong doing and apologizing may be enough in some instances.

In a case such as rape, the more appropriate option may be to press charges and take legal action, Meier said.

"If this is unwanted sexual activity, it is rape," said Richards. "They have to be supported and must know their options."

Richards said in her experiences at NKU, she has had two people take their cases through the criminal system.

However, Richards said, in many instances the students don't want their families to know.

When a student is sexually threatened in any way, their largest after effect is fear. They may feel frightened, intimidated and victimized. A sexually threatened individual is also a victim, Richards added.

A victim of sexual assault came forward to The Northerner. According to a report filed with the Department of Public Safety, a male student took off his sweatshirt and proceeded to take all of his clothes off.

He then began performing disgusting activities in front of the victim, the report continued.

The victim said he then tried to grab her. DPS is still investigating the incident. The victim went on to say, since the incident occurred, she has lost her sense of trust in other people.

"I'm always looking around me to see if someone is behind me," the victim said.

She said she wants others to know it is not safe to walk around campus alone. There was no one around when she was victimized.

She added, DPS is willing to work with students and they were helpful to her. It is important for all students to know the telephone number for DPS (572-5500) in an emergency situation.

Soccer Team Wins Four Straight

REGAL SUMMERS
STAFF WRITER

After scoring 12 goals in its last three games, the NKU men's soccer team had to rely more on its defense to defeat Kentucky Wesleyan, 2-0, on Saturday.

NKU and the Panthers battled to a 0-0 halftime score. The game was a physical match that featured warnings (yellow flags) to players from each team and the ejection of a Kentucky Wesleyan player.

"They were using cheap shots," said coach John Toeppen. "Every time we went to attack they would foul somebody to stop the attack." Toeppen added that most coaches don't rely on such tactics but some will go to any length to win.

Then at the 19:12 mark of the second half, NKU's Lary Runge scored the first goal. Junior Tim Lawson finished up the scoring with a goal late in the match.

"We played well enough to win," said Toeppen. "We didn't play at the intensity level that we can sometimes, but I'm happy with it. The defense played well, the keepers (goalies) get the stats but our whole defense played well by constantly putting pressure on them and we shut them out."

When asked about his team's performance, junior George Senfner said, "We played fairly well but we need to control the ball better. It took a little time to build our patience up. Sometimes we are impatient because we want to score, score, score."

the Norsemen by playing physical. But NKU showed they can play tough also.

"We are used to physical play, we expect that," said Toeppen. "That's why you have officials."

Runge agreed with his coach, "Everybody was ready for a physical game after playing the Bellarmine game."

Goalie Marshal Loneman shutout the Panthers, his third in his last four games, with 10 saves. The win pushed Northern's winning streak to four. NKU, 4-1 in the GLVC, remains in second place in the conference race behind Southern Indiana which has a perfect 5-0 record.

"In the beginning, we had some bad luck," said Toeppen. "You have to get lucky sometimes in this game. We could just have easily won three or four of our first games, but it's all coming together now."

The Norsemen now head to Wilmington for a game against the Quakers on Wednesday and then to Lewis for a conference game on Saturday.

Golf Team Prepares For GLVC Tourney

Consistency Is Key To Winning

MATT BOHMER
STAFF WRITER

The NKU golf team feels consistency will be the key to success in the upcoming GLVC tournament.

The tournament takes place in Lafayette, Ind., at Purdue University on Oct. 14-15.

The golf team has struggled, finishing no better than third in any tournament this season.

However, some of the players have had their moments. Junior John Steinbrunner finished second in the Kentucky Wesleyan Invitational with a score of 73. Senior Radford Cox shot a 74 in the same tournament.

Coach Jack Merz said a player will play really well in one tournament and then will not even finish in the top five on the team in the next one.

"It's not ability," said Merz. "They're all capable of playing good golf. It's just playing the course and thinking."

Sophomore Brian Schlueter said, "We can't have mental lapses in the middle of a round. We have to stay away from big numbers. The hardest part of the game is mental. It's not getting down on yourself and keeping your confidence up."

"It's snowballs," Merz said, "they make a bad shot and try to make a great shot to make up for it and end up making another bad shot."

Schleuter added, "Our problem is getting four good scores together. We have the ability to do really good, but we just have to avoid mental breakdowns."

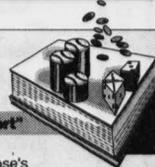

The team is confident in preparing for the tournament. They are practicing as much as possible and hoping they can upset the tournament favorite—Lewis University.

"There's not a tournament we go to that we don't think we're going to win," said Merz.

"Lewis is the team to beat," Schleuter said. "But I really think we can win it. We have to not put any pressure on ourselves. The only pressure is self-imposed pressure."

What Shall We Do?

Shall We Paint?

Nicolas de Stael in America is the first North American exhibition in twenty-five years to feature the works of this French modern master. The 75 paintings, drawings and collages range from an early abstraction of 1943 to a view from the artist's window in Antibes painted in 1955, one of his last efforts. Nicolas de Stael in America was organized by The Phillips Collection in Washington, D.C., where it was first shown, and includes a number of works lent by Cincinnati collectors. This is the only other opportunity to experience this exhibition of a most remarkable artist, October 17th through December 30th.

Shall We Dance?

Art of Indonesia is a rare opportunity to experience the art and cultural traditions of a land made up of over 13,000 islands and 350 ethnic groups. In addition to the textiles and jewelry on display, we have scheduled "An Evening in Indonesia"—tours, music, dance and refreshments—for Wednesday, October 31st. It is open to the public with no charge beyond regular Museum admission. However, a very special dance performance is included that does require tickets. The internationally known Nani Devi, who travels and performs extensively as an official representative of the Indonesian government, will present a program of traditional dance from the island of Bali. Use the coupon in this ad to order dance tickets, Wednesday, October 31st at 7pm in the Museum's auditorium.
