

A Gift

by Frederick Smock

The blueberry season has ended.
Soon it will be time for pumpkins to arrive at the market stalls.

It is all a gift, no?
And the giver unknown.

The less you want
the more bounteous the world becomes,
when you pass that tipping point.