Hunger problem exists in Northern Kentucky

BARB BOLENDER NEWS EDITOR

"The Myths About Hunger in Northern Kentucky" is a 44-page report released at a news conference at NKU Monday, Oct. 16.

The study, released in conjunction with "World Food Day," is a joint Diocese of Covington/NKU report concerning the problems of hunger in Northern Kentucky.

Rev. Bishop William Hughes of the Diocese of Covington and Karen Weber, project coordinator addressed common myths about hunger.

We have a tendency to blame hunger on laziness, said Hughes. "The belief persists that poor are poor by choice, that anyone can escape poverty by hard work, and that welfare programs make it easier for people to avoid work.

"This punitive attitude blinds us to the simple fact: It is the system that has failed, not people."

The study originated with the hunger sub-committee of the Justice and Peace Commission. The social work students at NKU devoted a semester to the project.

The 23 students conducted a total of 229 anonymous interviews at 11 different agencies providing food assistance. Of those interviewed:

■ 55 percent need food assistance at least once a month.

less than 4 percent were transient

 $\blacksquare 51$ percent lived in this area for over 10 years.

■ 62 percent were members of households with children.

■ 67 percent were female.

■ 44 percent had someone in the household employed.

■ 56 percent were unemployed, disabled or retired.

The group also researched federal assistance used by residents. They found that only 53 percent of the people receiving food assistance were getting food stamps. In the general population of the area, only 48 percent of people eligible are using food stamps.

"Changing the hunger situation in our area means changing the conditions which give rise to it," said Weber. "Specific measures can be implemented at each political level and together provide a unified approach to ending hunger in Northern Kentucky."

At the local level Weber suggests that city officials concentrate efforts on protecting and expanding the low income stock of their respective cities.

At the state level; she endorsed expanding on Aid to Families with Dependent Children programs. At the federal level, she suggests raising the minimum wage and increasing federal spending on low-income housing from 1 percent to 3 percent.

Above all, Weber said, elected officials "must recognize the pervasive effects of poverty on the entire nation and realize the willingness of our citizens to use tax dollars to reverse the damage done to our country by leaving a large segment of our population in a state of hopelessness."

Student Forum addresses campus issues here at NKU

MELISSA LAUER EDITOR

Changing the school colors is just a small piece to the change for the better of the University's image, said University Relations Vice President Peter Hollister.

Hollister was among the four administrators who answered questions at the Student Forum held on Tuesday Oct. 17.

The forum, sponsored by Student Government, was the second of its kind, and the color change was the main issue for this semester's forum.

"We are coming very close to a conclusion on this," Hollister said about the color issue.

But he still has some of his own questions:

Do the colors gold and white represent NKU well?

Will there be a color change again in 10 years?

What is the new image?

What is the university's (as a whole) emotions on the color change? What do the colors mean?

Is the change worth this much of a dilemma?

Hollister said NKU is a non-traditional school, and the colors blue grass green

Early registration begins

BARB BOLENDER NEWS EDITOR

Early registration began this week and according to Registrar Jerry Legere, it is the "students' best opportunity to get the classes wanted, at the times wanted, with the professors wanted."

Schedule request forms may be picked up this week, and submission begins next week. Request forms may be submitted as follows:

Monday, 10/30

Post Baccalaureates

Tuesday, 10/31

Seniors .

Wednesday, 11/1

Thursday, 11/2 Sophomores

Friday, 11/3 Freshman

If submission dates are met, this represents the only time in which a student may register with priority. "No lower classifications will be processed before upperclassmen as long as they turn packets in by deadline dates," said

Legere said there are many advantages to early registration including registering by mail, dropping off the form without having to stand in line, and having the schedule mailed to your home.

In addition, students will be able to drop/add immediately to get their desired schedules.

Speech team director wants more participation

Northern Kentucky University's Individual Speech Team placed 6th overall October 13, and 14, in the Otterbein College Speech Tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

Durrell Hamm, Director of Forensics, said, "I was well pleased by the results."

Northern's speech team competed with 25 other schools representing the East coast, Southeast, and Midwest regions.

"My number one goal," said Hamm, "is to have more participation from the student body."

"There are many positions open for anyone who is interested in either the Individual Events Speech Team, or in the Debate Team," said Hamm. Listed below are the individual won from the Otterbein Tournament:

... Jody Borge, freshman, has won awards for her 1st place finish for Novice Dramatic Interpretation, 3rd place finish for Novice Poetry, 4th place finish for Open Dramatic Interpretation, and 4th place finish for Novice Prose.

In addition to the individual awards, Hamm said, Borge was recognized as being the 5th best novice speaker at the tournament.

-- Michelle Deely, sophomore, had finished 3rd place in the event of Communication Analysis.

-- Brian Clayton, freshman, finished 7th place in the Novice Impromptu Speaking event.

"Minority Student Collegiate Day" for high school seniors and graduates will be held at Northern on Monday, October 30 in the University Center.

Registration will be held at 8 · 9 a.m., and the potential students will be assigned a host or hostess for the day's activities.

This day is part of NKU's expanding effort to inform African-American students of the opportunities for undergraduate study at Northern. Prospective students will explore the opportunities offered in NKU's Colleges of Professional Studies, Business, and Arts and Sciences.

In addition, students will examine admissions and financial aid procedures, intercollegiate athletics, and the nationally recognized Honors Program.

A luncheon panel discussion, "NKU - From the Student Point of View," will be presented by NKU undergraduates and alumni to examine various aspects of campus and career life.

This free program is limited to the first 200 senior students who register. For more information, call 572-5220.

"There is no right or wrong answer," he said. How the colors are used is what's important."

Cost is the biggest problem the color change produces. Hollister estimated about $47 thousand could be spent on the new colors with the principle area of cost occurring in the athletic department.

The gym floor will have to be repainted, new uniforms will be needed and all new vehicles will be blue grass green and gray, said Hollister.

"The new image, what is it?" Hollister asked.

The institution needs to decide what it stands for; its certain values and qualities, Hollister replied.

"It's not a new image; we want to take the really strong points of the university that makes it good and different and enhance the message NKU is trying to convey," answered Hollister.

Workshop focuses on Japanese teaching methods

PAUL McGUE STAFF WRITER

"Focus on Japan" is the topic of a one-day workshop for elementary and middle-school teachers of social studies on Saturday, October 21, in NKU's BEP Center, 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.

Dr. Jeff McMahon of Local School Services said, "about 150 teachers are registered. This is our fourth year for the workshop and the teachers already registered have been on a waiting list."

The workshop will focus on materials and methods for teaching about Japan on the elementary/middle-school levels.

The workshop includes lectures and discussions on modern Japanese family, language, and culture, also hands on activities useful in the classroom.

Cost of the workshop is $10. The event is sponsored by the Cincinnati Chapter of the Japanese American Citizens League, Consulate General of Japan, and Northern Kentucky University's Department of Education.

New doors revolving around Administration building

LEM DAVIS STAFF WRITER

The construction on the main entrance of the Administration Building has caused much inconvenience over the past few weeks.

What's being done? According to Mary Paula Schuh, director of campus planning, a revolving door is being installed along with two single doors for handicap usage. Joe Gimpel, superintendent construction trade, said replacing the old doors was necessary because it was costing N.K.U. $2,000 every six to nine months in repairs. Schuh said the old doors were to tall (nine feet) and heavy which made it difficult to open by hand. This caused a lot of people entering the building to use the handicap doors, which automatically open and would remain open allowing the cold air in during the winter and the cool air out during the summer. This situation made the lobby area unusable because of the uncomfortable cold draft. Schuh went on to say that with the new doors, energy savings could be as much as 90 percent. With the energy saving and the saving in repair cost, hopes are that the new doors cost of $22,690 will pay off in the long run.

Why weren't the doors installed over the summer? Schuh explains that the approval process took much longer then they had anticipated and they did not want construction going on during fall registration period. This is the time period when the Administration building experiences the most traffic.

Students, faculty, and staff can look forward to the week of Oct. 23-27 for the new doors to be in full operation.

School colors: what are they going to be:

The administration wants to create a new image for Northern Kentucky University. Part of the creation could include changing the school's colors.

First of all, there is too much vagueness about what the colors really are.

Right now NKU's colors are white and gold accented by black. Many people think the colors are gold and black.

University Relations Vice President Peter Hollister said that this misconception occurs because the colors gold and white are so hard to work with. White can't be used for letterhead, etc and gold never comes out looking metallic. It usually looks yellow. So black is used as an accent because it's easy to work with.

The suggested color change is to bluegrass green and gray. White and gold are academic colors. Bluegrass green and gray look corporate. Is NKU a school or a business?

To some, academics are more important - so let's stick with white and gold. For others bluegrass green and gray are more appropriate.

Which ever colors they decide upon, NKU will be stuck with them. (Unless they change them again in 10 years.) But right now ,we're in limbo waiting for their decision.

Let's not delay this decision too long. NKU needs colors. As students of NKU, we need to have an image we can stand behind. By not even being able to grasp on to the identity of our own colors, how are we supposed to know who we are or what we stand for as a college. There's a need to decide what the colors are or will be and to do this promptly.

Being a new institution, NKU hasn't developed many traditions. It's still young. The school colors are part of NKU's tradition. So should they be changed at all? That's a question the administration is dealing with

But if there is a change let's do it soon and develop a tradition before it's too late. Either change the colors to bluegrass green and gray, gold and black or leave them as white and gold.

Sometimes things are best left as they are. Sometimes change is for the better. But we'll never know until a decision is made. Maybe a scientific poll should be conducted to test out the colors here at NKU. We need to see what the whole school, students, staff, faculty, etc. think about the issue.

Along with the color change, the administration is also thinking about a logo change, and Hollister mentioned a possible change of the school mascot. He asked the students who attended the Student Government Student Forum how they felt about going from Norsemen and women to Vikings because "What's a Norse?" Hollister asked. (The mascot change is just a suggestion Hollister brought up at the meeting and has not yet been fully considered.)

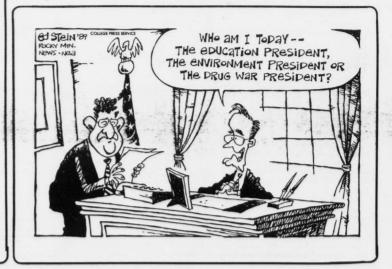

Change might be in NKU's best, or it might be for the worse. The scary part of this dilemma is how much it's going to cost. Hollister estimated $47 thousand for just getting the colors changed in the athletic department (new team uniforms, painting the gym floor, Imagine what the total cost will be for a total change over. Vans, letterhead, T-shirts, and other NKU souvenirs. Pretty scary, huh? Well it's just in time for Halloween. BOO!

Readers' Views beneficial

Alcohol ads need changing

DEAR EDITOR.

I believe most advertisements of alcoholic beverages should be banned or modified because television presents only a positive nature toward drinking. A second reason I propose a ban is that ads in leading magazines portray alcohol as a tool in seduction. A third reason I suggest this halt is that advertisers want to portray alcohol as a cure for loneliness; they offer alcoholic beverages as the nucleus for social events.

Shouldn't the truth about the effects of alcohol consumption get as much equal time as the advertisement of beer and liquor commercials? Upon completion of an alcohol awareness course at Christ Hospital, I learned that a person may see some 60,000 beer commercials by the age of twenty-one. Why not have a printed message flashing across the bottom of a beer commercial that would warn the viewer of some of the negative sides of drinking? Our Surgeon General has several years now; why not apply this to alcohol?

Wine coolers are marketed as a beverage made with a beautiful array of whole fruit thus portraying it as a fruit-flavored drink. Retailers have reported that as a result of this kind of advertising, children have been trying to purchase the coolers. They think the coolers are a new kid's treat. Should this kind of advertising be tolerated?

The beer and wine companies are not allowed to show customers drinking on television commercials. They don't have to. In a recent Miller draft commercial, I saw a beer being poured into a glass. The camera zoomed in on the beer showing recognized and welcomed. A church off its color and richness while mentioning how good it would taste at the end of a hard day's work. There are and welcome? If so, can't a person the advertiser was talking about? Is it wise to drink everyday?

required warning labels on cigarettes for sharing a cognac. The couple were dressed and posed in a way that suggested the drink would be a fabulous vehicle for seduction. Is it the drink itself, or the effect of the drink that made it a good tool this ad?

The media portray alcohol as a cure for loneliness, and they seem to make alcohol the center of social events. Many commercials and ads show a party with people moving through the crowd while they are immediately recognized and welcome by others in the group. The people in this group are shown with alcoholic drinks in their hands. How is the drink being sold here? Obviously there are other places where people are gathering might be such a place. Does the drink contribute to a person's recognition seven days in a week. I wonder what day socialize just as easily while drinking a cup of coffee?

The newest fad in the advertising of In a recent magazine ad I saw a man alcohol is the sports bar. The slogan is: and a woman in a very intimate setting "Don't go to the game, watch it here on See ALCOHOL page 13

University 101 found for student

DEAR EDITOR.

I am a freshman at NKU. Like any college student, I came to Northern not knowing very much about the campus, or what to expect from my classes, but one thing has really helped me adjust.

I enrolled in the University 101 course. In the beginning, I didn't want to take the course. I assumed that it would be a waste of my time, and that I just didn't need it, but my advisor convinced me that it was a good choice and I finally agreed.

Eight weeks later, I am happy to say that it was definitely a good choice. It has helped me more than I ever would have imagined. It has made me more aware of things that the campus offers. It has helped me schedule my time more successfully, and I have also picked up a lot of new study skills from the course.

The course is in all ways beneficial, and has made my adjustment to college much easier. I would recommend this course to all freshman. Although you think it may be a waste of time, it could very much be the most important course of your college

Readership drops for the Lost Cause

DEAR EDITOR.

Has anyone else noticed that readership of the Lost Cause appears to have slipped drastically, even from last

It has been on the stands for about three weeks and issues are still available in abundance

Why does it seem no one is reading the Cause ?

Now, before I get accused of attempting to divert readers from The Northerner to the Cause, let me say that these two campus publications are not interchangeable. They present different perspectives on stories and trends. Neither can be substituted for the other. The Northerner is published weekly to provide local and national campus "news" news. The Lost Cause is published quarterly and brings perspective to that and other kinds of news. It even has a

"In the belief that free and open communication between viewpoints is essential in the university setting, the says, you don't know until you read it. Lost Cause serves the NKU student body by providing a forum for alternative views and opinions." (author's emphasis).

So the Cause is here to serve the students. You pay for it, just like you pay for The Northerner. They are complimentary because you've already paid for them. The university funds them, in part. And you fund the university with your tuition.

So why cheat yourself? You paid for it.

Editor Wylie Jones knows why the Cause is still on the stands. He said the staff wasn't "shocked" that it is.

"Northern's students are often not intellectually inquisitive ... and open to diverse viewpoints," he said, adding that some students -- and even administrators -- are hostile to some of the viewpoints presented."

That's easy enough to believe. People in general are often hostile to views they disagree with. But you can't disagree with the Cause if you don't know what it says. And no matter what you hear it

So you don't like "alternative views." You don't even want to be exposed to them. But you should. You can't beat the enemy if you don't know his game plan.

And after all, it may be just an illusion that Cause readership is down. It may be stable. Or stagnant, depending on your perspective.

Jones, a co-editor last year, said that 4,500 copies of the first issue were available this year. Only 3,000 of each issue were printed last year, and that was twice as many as the previous year.

So actually, the number of copies taken seems to be consistent simply because there are more Cause 's around to not pick up. Several of those 3,000 copies stayed on the stands as long as they have this semester, Jones said.

So if people are reading it, why am I so riled up about the ones who aren't. Because they aren't.

Out of over 10,000 students, faculty, and staff, less than 3,000 read it. While not a dismal percentage, it's pretty poor. This is a university, and it's community should be engaging in "free and open" exchanges of philosophies and viewpoints.

Cindy Strong, editor during 1987-88, said the lack of readership is not so much caused by flooding the market as by the new format of the Cause .

"It looks like The Northerner ... everybody knew to look for that different colored paper (it used to be printed on). It's image went along with its content as an underground press.

The word "underground" has certain negative connotations -- leftist, radical, subversive, communist, anarchist, or any other label you wish to apply in definition. I would say a better one is "not mainstream." Can't the political right have an underground too?

The Cause has been the black sheep publication at NKU since its inception. Its advocates may be naturally limited by personal politics and philosophies, but that doesn't mean its readership should be so limited.

So if you haven't read the first issue of the Cause, do it. Disagree. Rant like all get-out. Then compose yourself and sit down and write Wylie Jones a rebuttal or a letter. Soapbox for your own cause. But at least know what you're disagreeing Maribeth Lienhardt

Film series honoring anthropology professor begins

"Violence, Conflict and War" is a six week film series

JARED BARLAGE STAFF WRITER

NKU's Museum of Anthropology is honoring Dr. Christopher Boehm, a professor of anthropology at NKU, with "Violence, Conflict and War", a six week film series.

The free film series began last Tuesday with a lecture by keynote speaker, Dr. Boehm. Dr. Boehm is a Harvard graduate and the author of numerous books and articles or conflict, resolution and the evolution of morality.

The first film in the series was at 12:15 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, October 24. The film, Among the Wild Chimpanzees, updated the work of Dr. Jane Godall. The film focused on everything from the rearing of the young chimps to hunting and dominance hierarchies.

The Feast, a film focusing on two villages of the "Fierce People" and their attempts to make peace, will be shown the following Tuesday, October 31.

On Tuesday, November 7, Dead

Birds will be shown. Dead Birds focuses on the Dani people of New Guinea. Enemy villages are seen in a seemingly endless cycle of revenge warfare where the murder of a friend or relative requires retaliation against the enemy until one of their number has been killed.

The final film of the series is Gang Cops, a film about the notorious gangs of Los Angeles and the police who patrol the gang-ridden areas. The film can be seen on Tuesday, November 14.

The last presentation of the series is a panel discussion by distinguished guests. Tuesday, November 21, Dr. Boehm will join Dr. Jerald Richards of philosophy, an expert on the nuclear movement, and U.S. Attorney D. Michael Crites, an expert on drugs and gangs, who will discuss societal violence and war and ways of reducing such aggression.

All the films can be seen at 12:15 p.m. in LA room 110, except Among the Wild Chimpanzees which was shown in 320 Nunn Hall, and was shown again at 7:00 p.m. in LA room 506.

Bulow chosen as fraternity sweetheart

JEFF BOHR FEATURES EDITOR

For those uninitiated to the Greek life experienced by members of sororities and fraternities, many customs must seem strange.

Most people, however, know that fraternities are for men and sororities are for women. And once in a while, a fraternity will specifically honor a woman, or a sorority will do the same for a man.

Such an honor was bestowed on Heather Bulow, 21, by the Alpha Delta Gamma fraternity at their national convention. Bulow, a member of the Phi Sigma Sigma sorority at Northern, was selected as the 1989 Alpha Delta Gamma National Sweetheart at the convention. The convention was sponsored by Northern's own Tau chapter of Alpha Delta Gamma, and took place August 24 - 27 in Covington.

Bulow was selected for the honor from a group of women representing ADG chapters from across the country. According to Mike Chumbley, member of Alpha Delta Gamma, approximately 100 members from chapters as far away as California, Massachusetts, and Louisiana were represented at the convention. Each chapter nominates its own sweetheart and final voting is done at the convention.

Bulow became involved with the fraternity three years ago when she began dating a member. She has been "around the fraternity ever since."

Although the fraternity does not currently have an established national "Little Sister" program, such a program is being renewed after a long absence from ADG chapters.

Bulow said that the convention weekend was "a really great time." Between the fraternity's conferences and meetings, Bulow and the other nominees took part in the social activities with the visiting ADG's. "(We were at) King's Island all day and night," Bulow said, "and going out at night was a lot of fun."

Bulow is entering her fourth year as a member of the Phi Sigma Sigma sorority. Currently, she holds the position as alumni relations officer. She has also been Pledge Mistress, preparing pledges for initiation; and has also held the scholarship office to uphold the GPA's of the Phi Sigma Sigmas. Bulow has also helped the sorority with many fund-raising activities.

Off campus, Bulow likes to go water skiing and boating in the summer, and snow skiing in the winter. When inside, she likes to watch old black-and-white cartoons or Monday Night Football with her friends. And last but not least, another of Bulow's favorite activities: " ... of course-party!"

Bulow expects to finish at Northern in the fall of 1990. Her major field of study is business management, and Bulow plans to put her personnel administration skills to use in a corporate human relations department after graduation.

Three days of concern about eating disorders

MICHELLE WILLOUGHBY STAFF WRITER

NKU's Activities Programming Board and Women's Center are presenting Eating Disorders Awareness Week October 24, 25, and 26, 1989.

The Eating Disorders Awareness Week s concerned with the eating disorders of Anorevia Nervosa and Bulimia Nervosa.

"Anorexia Nervosa is an intense fear of weight gain, characterized by self-induced starvation and a distorted perception of body appearance," said the Christ Hospital Eating Disorders Unit. The symptoms to look for include:

- ¶ A significant loss of body weight (15 reant or more) ¶ A compulsion with exercise and
- ¶ Alternate hyperactive and depressed
- ¶ Low self-esteem, moodiness, social
- isolation, insecurity and a denial of the
- ¶ A tendency to be a perfectionist and an overschiever.

The Eating Disorders Unit said if anorexia is not treated, it can lead to low blood pressure, severe electrolyte imbalances, high cholesterol levels, sterility, osteoporosis, intellectual impairment, arrested growth, permanent organ damage, and even death.

"Rulimia Nervosa is also an obsession with weight gain, but instead starving themselves, bulimics 'binge' on food, and then 'purge' themselves by vomiting or using laxatives diuretics," said Christ Hospital's Eating Disorder Unit. "Bulimics are ashamed of their behavior and hide it from others." This makes it harder to detect, said the Eating Disorders Unit, especially since it is not usually accompanied by drastic weight loss. Other symptoms of Bulimia include:

- ¶ Use of alcohol or mood- altering chemicals.
- ¶ Low self-esteem, loneliness, and
- ¶ Feelings of incompetence ¶ Dishonest behavior
- "Bulimia's effects can be extremely serious, causing digestive tract problems, damage to the esophagus and depletion of body substances that can lead to heart failure and death," said the Christ Hospital's Eating Disorder Unit.

The schedule of events include:

Generally, the person with the eating disorder denies that she has a problem. Therefore, it is up to the friend and relative to make the first step. The following questions by the Christ Hospital Eating Disorders Unit are important because it is necessary for friends and relatives to be able to recognize the symptoms of eating disorders as the first step to receiving proper treatment. The questions are the following:

Questions about Anorexia:

- 1. Do you know someone who is intensely afraid of gaining weight, even when others are concerned about how little she ests?
- 2. Does she weigh herself several times a day?
- 3. When she can't exercise, does she panic at the thought of gaining weight? 4. Does she prefer to eat alone so you
- won't notice how little she eats? 5. Has she cut herself off from friend and family who have expressed concern
- over her eating habits? 6. Have you noticed her hoarding concealing, or throwing food away?
- 7. Is she obsessed with thoughts about what she will and won't eat? 8. Does she experience dizziness of
- 9. Does she use laxatives or self-induce vomiting as a means of weight control? 10. Have her periods stopped or
- become irregular? 11. Is gaining weight one of the
- overriding fears in her life?

Questions About Bulimia:

1. Do you know someone who frequently "binges" on large quantities of food within a short period of time?

Lady Norse ready for NCAA encore

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL PREVIEW

DON OWEN SPORTS EDITOR

The 1988-89 basketball season ended too quickly for the NKU Lady Norse.

Coach Nancy Winstel watched her team record a fourth straight 20-win season (21-7) and advance to their fifth consecutive NCAA tournament. The Lady Norse overcame a mid-season swoon, in which they lost three straight conference games, to catch Bellarmine and finish second in the Great Lakes Valley Conference, assuring themselves of another postseason trip.

Unfortunately, the Lady Norse were pitted against Oakland University on the Pioneers' home floor in the first round of the tournament. Even more unfortunate was the fact the Lady Norse's old nemesis decided to show up again ... overtime.

For the third consecutive year, NKU was eliminated in overtime, this time at the hands of Oakland, 95-93. Missed free throws and a game-tying three-pointer by the Pioneers late in regulation broke the backs of Northern, as the Lady Norse never recovered during the overtime. NKU had entered the tournament winners of eight straight games and appeared to be on a roll, but in a year of continuing steaks, the O.T. bugaboo bit them again. And in the process, many fans were left wondering "What if?"

Winstel, who owns a 129-40 won-loss record at Northern, may have the GLVC right where she wants it this season. While Lewis and Bellarmine have been tabbed preseason co-favorites to win the conference, Winstel is doing her best Lou Holtz imitation and lamenting her youthful guard situation. Obviously, the NKU coach enjoys having the onus of favorite placed on someone else, but the rest of the league isn't shedding tears for Northern. The Lady Norse are picked third, and with a talented front line returning, NKU will be a team to be reckoned with. A look at the strengths and weaknesses of the 1989-90 NKU Lady Norse:

STRENGTHS: Stenciled on the back of NKU's practice shorts are the words " Defense Wins," and for good reason. The Lady Norse led the GLVC in defense last year, limiting the opposition to 63.6 points per game. Rebounding is another area Northern excels in finishing second in the conference to Lewis with 45.6 rebounds per contest and a rebounding margin of +8.9.

Although leading scorer and rebounder Cindy Schlarman is gone, the Lady Norse return more than enough talent and experience inside to compensate for her Senior Linda Honigford (13.7 ppg.) shot .541 from the field during an injury-riddled junior year. Versatile enough to play all three inside positions, the 6-0 Honigford can power underneath for points or bury opponents with a deadly outside jump shot. Also returning is 5-11 junior Christie Freppon (12 ppg., 7.7 reb.), who led Northern with 19 blocked shots. Holly Cauffman, a 5-11 junior, was effective as both a reserve and starter in '88-89, averaging 7.6 ppg. and 5.2 rebounds, while leading the Lady Norse in free throw percentage with .742. Add in Amy Middleton, a 6-1 sophomore, who could be the answer at center, 6-1 junior Kristy Wegley, plus 6-3 walk-on Kim Smith, and the Lady Norse have plenty of size.

Middleton's development could make the NKU inside attack difficult for any GLVC team to cope with, and even Winstel admits few teams are capable of stopping her post players once they are isolated.

WEAKNESSES:

Inexperience at guard and three-point shooting. UTEP coach Don Haskins once remarked, "Our guard situation is so bad that the buzzards are circling above practice everyday." That's exactly what Winstel is hoping the other GLVC teams are thinking in regards to NKU's young backcourt. Although the loss of Natalie Ochs took over 15 ppg. and left the backcourt void of leadership, Melissa Slone and Annie Levens each have starting experience. Slone, a 5-0 junior, led Northern in three-point shooting a year ago, hitting 7-18 (.389). Levens can be a n explosive scorer, averaging 5.5 in Val Gaerke, a 5-10 sophomore, can play guard but may be better suited at small forward. Freshmen Gayanna Wohnhas and Lori McClellan bring impressive high school credentials with them and could make an impact.

How little did Northern use the three-pointer last year? Let's put it this way: St. Joseph's scoring machine Jeanette Yeoman made 49 three-pointers, or 35 more than the entire Lady Norse squad. Winstel promises her team will utilize the three more this season.

We're going to run some special plays for the three this year." she said. " I'm not real good at math, but you get three points instead of two, and it can kill a team if someone hits a couple in a row. If 5-0 Melissa Slone hits a three, the fans go nuts ... and so does the other team."

Slone can hit the trey, but Levens or one of the other guards must also find the range in order to keep defenses from packing it in on NKU's inside people.

SUMMARY: A rugged non-conference schedule, featuring a season-opening road trip to Tampa and should get the Lady Norse prepared for overtimes) come to a screeching halt.

the GLVC.

The inside game is solid, and in the multi-talented Honigford, the Lady Norse have one of the premier players in the conference. During an 87-71 victory over Lewis last season, Honigford racked up 26 points and yanked down 12 boards against the Lady Flyers' vaunted Chris Toscas. If the Cloverdale, Ohio, native remains healthy, such a performance could become the rule rather than the exception in 1989-90.

The backcourt is a question mark, but Levens could be the solution. She handles the ball well and showed signs of becoming a big scorer during her freshman year. If the guards produce, Northern can win the GLVC. If not, Florida Southern, not to mention home 1989-90 could be the year all of the games with Louisville and Central State, streaks (NCAA, 20-win seasons and

NKU WOMEN'S TENNIS FINISHES SIXTH AT GLVC TOURNAMENT

The Northern Kentucky University women's tennis team finished sixth at the Great Lakes Valley Conference championships October 12 - 14, in Romeoville, Ill.

TEAM RESULTS: Bellarmine 27, St. Joseph's 26, Indianapolis 23, Kentucky Wesleyan 19, Southern Indiana 11, NKU 7, Lewis 3, IP-Ft. Wayne 1, Kentucky State 0.

Soccer team wins two key matches

HEATH NORTHCUTT STAFF WRITER

NKII senior Herbie Kunz became the all-time scoring leader over the weekend as the soccer team won two key matches.

The Norsemen edged St. Joseph's (Ind.), 3-2, and Lewis, 3-1, to take over sole possession of third place in the GLVC race. Bellarmine and Southern Indiana stand atop the GLVC with 5-1 records heading into the final week of GLVC

Kunz, a 5-8 forward, had an assist against Lewis giving him 68 points (20 goals, 28 assists), one better than Mark Fisher's 67 point total achieved between

In the Lewis game, two freshman and a sophomore provided the offense. Freshmen, Kevin Wolff and Todd Gruenwald scored goals, as well as Marko Milicic.

Against St. Joseph's, junior Doug Niemczyk scored on a corner kick from freshman Larry Hutzel with only 1:11 left to give the Norse the victory.

Hutzel and senior Dave Winstead both scored in the first half.

NKU's record now stands at 5-9-1 overall and 4-1-1 in the GLVC.

The Norsemen have a chance to take over Southern Indiana in the standings when they travel to Evansville on October 20 for a 7 p.m. showdown with the Screaming Eagles.

"I felt good about our win over Lewis," said NKU coach Paul Rockwood, "We didn't play as well against St. Joseph's, but we won. I think for us to beat U.S.I., we'll have to play with more consistency."

The Norse rebounded from a slow start to post a strong showing in the GLVC. If they can keep it up they should make some noise in the tournament.

Amy Middleton, Gayanna Wohnhas and Christie Freppon battle for a rebound during Ashland stifles NKU's title hopes

KEITH SHERMAN STAFF WRITER

The NKU women's volleyball team suffered a major blow in their quest to win the Great Lakes Valley Conference championship, losing to Ashland in four games, 2-15, 16-14, 15-5, 15-7 at Regents

Northern fell to 7-7 overall, 5-2 in the GLVC, while Ashland upped its 1989 record to 15-8, 5-2 in the conference.

Earlier in the week, the Lady Norse had defeated Indianapolis, 13-15, 15-12, 10-15, 15-9, 15-13, and Southern Indiana, 15-6, 15-11, 15-13 at Indianapolis.

Gorge Mush here. Today's topic: Elevator permit registation.

Too many Americans are in grave danger when they step into an elevator which has no permit or a permit that has as expired.

Inadequate inspection of such elevators poses as a threat to our society, we must fight this problem in Congress now!

Next wæk: DamN Fayle does something.

I propose that we pass a bill that will increase federal funding to $8 billion for closer and more thorough elevator inspection - without raising taxes !!!

our wide TV screen." These new bars advertise hot food, shelter from possible foul weather, mixed drinks and fast service. What is the main idea of such advertisements? The sport or the alcohol? I've never seen Boomer Esiason blitzed at half time. If these two ideas are jointly related, why can't Boomer drink alcohol during the game?

As I stated earlier, all types of media portray a one-sided view. Children have a 35% chance of being an alcoholic if their parents were alcoholics. Responsible drinking is knowing when and being capable of stopping before a person becomes a danger to himself or to others. Why doesn't the media show a fight breaking out in a bar? Have you ever seen a beer commercial that showed a person being arrested for DUI after drinking that company's product? Maybe if we saw some of these commercials, we viewers might think before we drink.
