Area check up in the works

by Steve Rohs
Staff Reporter

Do you ever feel that you are under too much stress and don't get enough sleep? If so, someone cares.

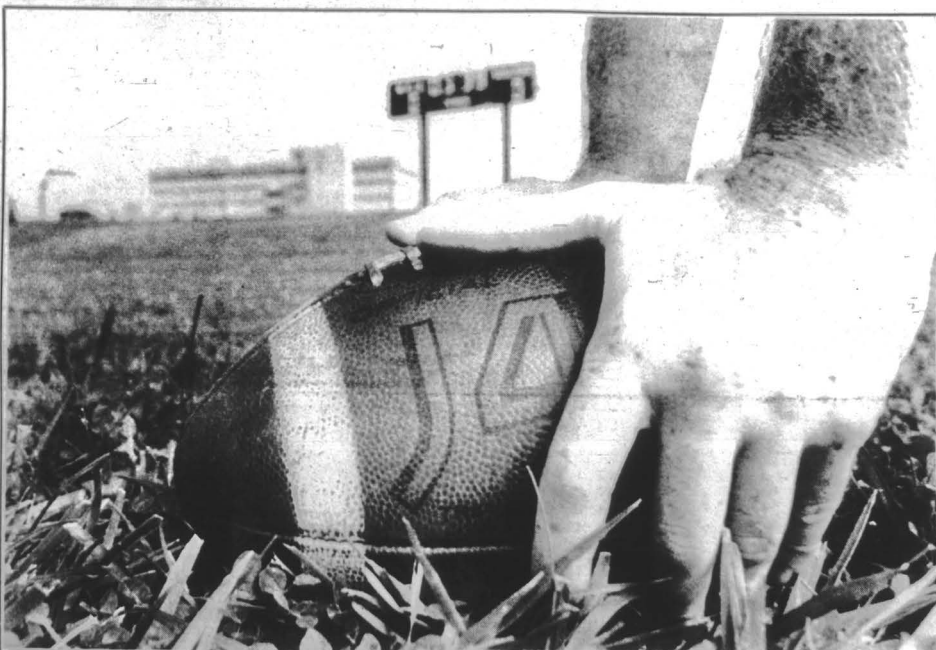

This year, a class in Nursing 409 is studying the health habits and possible problems of the campus community as a class project. The study, to be conducted through questionnaires, will also look at physical and environmental safety hazards on campus.

The study is part of the course's requirements. According to class member Jerry Zerhusen, it "is aimed at helping try to prevent disease and promote health on the NKU campus."

"Every year students in the course assess the health of some community," said Kathy Brinker, the course instructor. "We thought that both the students and the university could benefit if we studied NKU. This way, instead of just analyzing the problems, we can suggest ideas for change."

Nancy Kremer, a nursing student, said that the study is attempting to identify health risks such as stress, nutri-

Thirty years of service and going strong

by Tony Nienaber
Managing Editor

Robert Knauf's ardent and masterful leadership in university relations compares to that of a great maestro who blends the work of numerous units to form one overriding result.

As executive assistant for university relations, Knauf hopes to create a clear and accurate portrayal of Northern Kentucky University's image through the constant and thorough promotion of the school's personage, happenings and events.

With well over a dozen administrators and aids under his direction, Knauf still feels "painfully understaffed."

"The University has grown dramatically, but the number of folks we have to staff it remains pretty much the same," Knauf said.

It will take more than a personnel shortage, however, to shake Knauf from his office. Knauf, 60, has been associated with the university since 1954, first as a part-time music instructor at the University of Kentucky Extension and the University of Kentucky Center before moving to the University College in Covington. He eventually became chairman of the Music Department at NKU before filling his present position.

Knauf was recently presented an award for 30 years of service to the university.

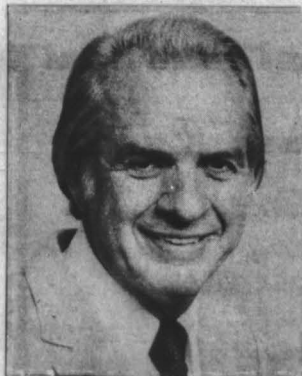

"This award is kind of special," said

President Leon Boothe. "We have given out a number of five and 10-year service awards, but never a 30-year award. Nobody has even come close to 30 years."

It may seem strange that a music instructor would suddenly be given control of the University Relations Department, but for Knauf it was a smooth and logical transformation.

"With my background in music, I spent a great deal of time in promotion of music concerts, selling the tickets, printing the brochures, promoting the sale and acceptance of music concerts," said Knauf.

"I, in affect, have been in public relations type work the whole time I was serving in a music capacity."

Praise sung for musical

What can you say about a show that has everything? Great acting, great dancing, great directing, great music, etc., etc.

All right, I'll admit, it isn't perfect. But, NKU's production of Chicago is as close to perfect as anything you're going to find this far from Broadway.

The imperfections? There is only one scene I have any problems with — the "Cell Block Tango" number. In it, Velma Kelly and five other murderers tell how they landed in jail. For some reason, the number lacks a certain cohesiveness. The monologues are fine, but when the girls have to sing together it just doesn't work.

Now for the good news. Scott Enzweiler and George W. Bellah III should win awards for their performances. Enzweiler's portrayal of the dapper, slick-talking lawyer Billy Flynn is outrageous! Go and see the show if for no other reason than to see him perform in "All I Care About Is Love."

Bellah, as Amos Hart, is simply superb. He plays Roxie's hapless, cuckolded husband in true vaudevilian style, broadly and full of slapstick as in the number "Mr. Cellophane." Women in the audience were "Aww"-ing and "Oohh"-ing practically every time he stepped on stage. I admired Bellah's performance in last year's "Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," but I had no idea he had such talent for comedy.

Julie Ann Griffin, Susan Page Hoffman and Sandra Bussey-Smith were all fantastic, but I was most impressed with Ms. Hoffman.

She gives a standout performance as Velma Kelly, a super-talented vaudeville performer who seems to get dumped on by every one. Hoffman, in addition to being a terrific dancer, can really belt out the songs. Her portrayal of Velma is truly touching, and you come out of the theatre cheering for her rather than Roxie.

As for Ms. Clayborn, who portrays Mary Sunshine, what can I say? There aren't words enough in the English language to express how I feel about her performance. Her voice, her acting and her dancing deserve the highest praise. (A note to Ms. Clayborn: The person applauding the loudest during the courtroom scene was me. Bravo!)

Special mention should be made of the outstanding dancers and musicians. They are the glue that hold this show together and make it sparkle. Jeffrey Pappas does a wonderful job as musical director and conductor of the band.

It may seem that I'm exaggerating about the merits of Chicago, but, I assure you, I'm not. If you don't go see Chicago, then it's you who comes out the loser, not the Theatre Department.

Ray Neufarth, 67, of Southgate, plays his tuba during the Symphonic Band's concert at noon Wednesday on the Plaza. Neufarth, a retired shop foreman, was recently elected to the band council. He is now majoring in music, something he's wanted to do since he was 17.

The Symphonic Band and the Jazz Ensemble Band are open to all students who have some experience playing an instrument. For details, call Conductor Steve Gocher at 572-5284.

tion, habits and safety. She said there are 50 to 60 questions on each survey dealing with these health risks.

The questionnaires, which have already been sent out, will be received by one out of every 20 students, randomly selected, including law students and graduate students. Some faculty members will also receive the questionnaires.

"It is important that these surveys be returned," said student Linda Nienaber, "and it is not too late." All responses will be kept confidential, she said.

Nienaber said the program has received financial backing from the Provost's Office, which oversees all academic matters.

Another student, Hazel Robinson, said that the class is concerned about health risks related to physical, mental and social habits. "We are concerned with anything that might inhibit higher education," she said.

"The results of the survey will be discussed at a health forum on Dec. 6," said instructor Brinker. "Leaders from all parts of the university will be invited, including faculty members and students. At the meeting, we will suggest ideas for change benefiting the health of the people here."

"One important thing," said student Mary McQuire, "is that next year, other seniors can pick up the program. That way, the improvement will be an ongoing process."

"But the main thing is that students tell us what their health needs are, not us tell them. That's why the survey is so important. To have the best health, you have to look at all the aspects of health."

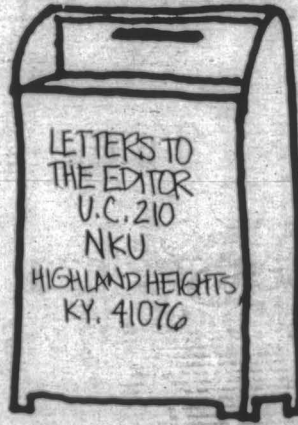

Sports fever is catching

To the editor:

Both last year and this year at least one letter has been written about NKU starting a football team. I agree that it would be great to go to a home game and have the athletic spirit come alive for the Norse, but we already have that spirit. Or at least some of us do.

This is my third year here. Last year's Homecoming basketball game was the first one I had been to at Northern. Since that game I have been to every game I could make; which was all but one. I went to a high school where sports were not a big thing. When I came here and never heard anyone say anything about the basketball, volleyball, or soccer games, I figured sports were not a big deal here. It seems that a lot of you want a football team that would cost a whole lot of money to get started, but you're not willing to support the sports we already have.

If you haven't been to a collegiate sport at your school yet, you're missing a lot. GO! If you're afraid it might be boring, ask some friends to go with you (get rowdy and go out after). Once you get the spirit, it's hard to lose. So if you want to do something but don't know what, go to a game! It can be fun if you make it that way. GO!

Evan Wood

P.S. It's a good excuse to ask someone out.

Spring arrives too early

Well, as some of you know by now, the spring schedules have come out for all of us to fill out and complete.

Well that's insane. There's absolutely no reason for these things to come out this soon.

I've only been in school for five weeks, the start of my senior year and I don't need to be reminded that another lousy semester is on its way.

I'm having enough trouble getting through a Biology class right now which is designed for majors but "open" to non-majors, like myself.

I don't need to be reminded that I have another six months of drudgery to go through.

There's absolutely no reason for schedules to be coming out early. Why can't the Registrar's Office undertake my philosophy "Why do it today when you can do it tomorrow?"

I don't care about if I'm going to be in the History of Mass Communications at 9 a.m. on a Monday in the spring right now.

For freshmen and sophomores, if they want to plan now, fine. They can sit down and plan out their future plans and schedules and continue to dream.

For an old goat like me, who's been in school for over five years, it's a little different.

I just want to get out of school.

If freshmen were smart, they wouldn't sit and worry about their futures.

If freshmen were smart, they'd be doing what I was doing — sleeping in those days in February when the snow was falling a foot deep — not worrying about class.

There is simply no need to have spring schedules coming out in October. Why bog students in the middle of mid-term down with the responsibility of filling out their spring schedules?

Sure, eventually, we all want to know when and where we're all going to be next spring. But not in October!

— Kelly Villiers

It took some planning, but road finally opens

To the editor:

Today [Oct. 5] was the "cutting of the ribbon" dedication for the Northern Kentucky University interchange at I-275 and Three Mile Road.

As I witnessed the ceremonies, my thoughts went back to several years ago when Dr. A.D. Albright, president of the university, and I discussed the possibility of an interchange there to alleviate the tremendous traffic jam at the "Malfunction Junction" (I-471 and U.S. 27) for the university students and our citizens.

We approached the Highway Department and after some review they said it was impossible to have a full interchange there and very improbable for an "on and off" half interchange. At that point in time at County Judge/Executive I threatened to send our Road Department crew and show the department how easy it was to bull doze exit and entrance lanes.

However, through the cooperation of the Northern Kentucky Transportation Committee, which is comprised of the Northern Kentucky Legislative caucus, the three Fiscal Courts, and representatives from the Northern Kentucky Chamber, Unions and municipalities, we were able to convince the Highway Department that the interchange was needed. Many local leaders are responsible in their individual and collective efforts in accomplishing this.

Today, as it was opened, many of us were pleased and proud, but it was evidence that when all of us in Northern Kentucky put our joint and collective minds and energies together, great things can be obtained.

Of course, in time, as the motorists use this interchange, it will become an accustomed way of travel and they will not realize what a monumental task it was for those of us to bring it into being...but we will know!

Huddleston supporters

To the editor:

We the Young Democrats of NKU give full support to the re-election of U.S. Senator Walter "Dee" Huddleston.

Sen. Huddleston has supported Kentucky and the U.S. since first being in office in 1972, and even longer before that. Sen. Huddleston also serves on seven different committees such as agriculture, small business, and intelligence, whereas the average senator only serves on two such committees. And if re-elected Sen. Huddleston will be the senior senator on the agriculture committee. This is Kentucky's main industry beside coal, and to have our man there and as the senior senator on the committee we'll be able to get more for the state of Kentucky than ever before.

Sen. Huddleston will fight for all of us here at NKU and the rest of Kentucky in Washington. His office is always to any questions that you may have concerning any matters that bother you.

As Young Democrats we are part of today's youth. And as you know, today's youth are tomorrow's leaders. And with leadership like Sen. Huddleston you can't go wrong.

4th down and long wait for Northern football

Let's just sit back for a couple of minutes and imagine. What if Northern had a football team. What if? . . .

"Welcome, sports fans, to the annual renewal of the Xavier-Northern Kentucky football match. Hello again, everybody, this is Sam Blowhard coming at you from the horseshoe bowl at Northern Kentucky University.

"Today, the winner of this match will in all likelihood be in the driver's seat for a berth in the Division III playoffs with a possible berth to the Stagg Bowl in December. Man, this joint is jumping, with a packed house of 14,000 screaming Muskie and Norse fans."

What if Xavier and Northern had Division III football teams and were making a run for the title. What if? . . .

"What a first quarter of action that was! That was a great play by Northern's Bucko Kilroy, the nation's leading small-college rusher, to get that into the end zone, wasn't it, Larry?"

"It sure was, Sam. And if Northern can hold this 14-0 lead, it might be bowl time for the Norse."

By now, the fans of the concrete school are going crazy. It looks like the Norse are going to a bowl game, with all the talent coming from area high schools. How about that?

However, leave it to Xavier's quarterback, Flasher McKay, to bring the Muskies back into the game. Throwing two touchdown passes to his favorite receiver, Bill-Bob Bratton, the Muskies go into halftime with a 15-14 lead on the strength of a two-point conversion.

"Look at all these banners flying around here, Larry. Look at that one that says, 'Norsemen go Stagg this year'."

"Yeah, Sam, you never would have thought that all these dyed-in-the-wool Big Blue fans would have switched over to pulling for the Norse, huh?"

"Indeed, Larry. How about that homecoming queen, also, uh, what's her name, Holly Heatherlock? But here come the teams back on the field. Looks like a great second half."

But it was all Flasher McKay and Bratton in the third quarter, connecting for two more long-bomb touchdown passes to give the Muskies a 29-14 lead going into the fourth quarter.

"Looks bad for the Norse now. On their own six-yard line and down by 15 points. Here's Bucko Kilroy into the line. Oh, my, he breaks clear! He's going all the way! I don't believe it! Touchdown!"

It's a two-point conversion attempt now. Quarterback Speed Merchant fades back to pass, and hits Tippy Turner in the corner of the end zone with a perfect pass. 29-22, Xavier, and the fans are going crazy.

"We've got a minute left to play. The Norse are knocking on the door at the Xavier six yard line. A handoff to Kilroy. He's around the left side, touchdown!"

No choice left now. The Norse must go for two. A handoff to Kilroy around the left side. Whoops! Kilroy is sacked by All-American tackle Slammer Smith. It looks like Xavier will win, 29-28.

"That's too bad, isn't it, Sam?"

"Yes, but they still have the onside kick, Larry."

The onside kick attempt is a good one. It bounces high in the air, but Bratton, with the sure hands, recovers it for Xavier.

Xavier runs out the clock and wins the game, 29-28.

"Well, sports fans, it was close and exciting, indeed, but Xavier wins the game, and most probably a playoff berth as well. As for Northern, what if? This is Sam Blowhard saying so long for now. We'll see you next week when Thomas More takes on Cincinnati Technical College. Goodbye."

Well, of course, what if? There are no Bucko Kilroys, there are no Slammer Smiths or anybody playing football for Xavier or Northern. None at all.

But just imagine what could be on a fall afternoon for a minute. The Kilroys and Holly Heatherlocks could be there, and would be there, if there were a football team.

What if? . . .

Joining the NCAA Division II Great Lakes Valley Conference will help cross country in every way but one — financially.

"What the conference will do is give cross country a chance to win a conference championship that is sponsored in the fall at the end of the season," said NKU Athletic Coordinator Mike Beitzel.

Cross country coach Al Ginn said the conference championship will give the team something to look forward to.

"It also gives us some common ties, some rivals," Ginn said.

What the conference will not give the team is money. Cross country is not a sport like basketball which generates revenue for the university. And because of the lack of money cross country brings in, there are no scholarships.

"The position of the athletic council," said Beitzel, "is that team sports take priority over individual sports."

Beitzel said Northern would like to get to the point where all the sports have some financial funding. But right now there just isn't enough money to go around.

Although Ginn knows that scholarships would help recruiting, he understands the council's position. He said that the cross country program is receiving all the support it can right now.

Both Beitzel and Ginn agree that one way for the sport to produce some money would be for NKU to host some meets. But this is easier said than done.

"Right now there is no place to run because of traffic," Beitzel said. "There's not much of a layout on campus to run safely."

Beitzel said that it might be possible for NKU to hold a meet on a Saturday morning when there isn't as much traffic on campus. He also said that in the past Northern held meets at Campbell County Golf Course.

But Ginn said he would rather have the races at Northern. And he's working on that idea right now.

Ginn said he's hoping that the university can hold an invitational next year. The meet would take place at the end of September and he said he would be interested in inviting 25 colleges. He said he would also like to invite the area high schools to participate.

"I would like to have the course on campus to draw more people," Ginn said. "It would really help with recruiting."

With all the talk of future scholarships and invitations, it is easy to forget that the cross country team is presently heading into the homestretch of their schedule. With not being eligible for this year's conference championship, the team has set its sights on the national finals in mid-November.

Despite joining the Great Lakes Valley Conference, the cross country team faces an uphill climb in gaining necessary funds to award scholarships.

"We've never really been able to put it all together," Ginn said. "Hopefully by the regional we can get everybody to run their best race so we can qualify for the nationals."

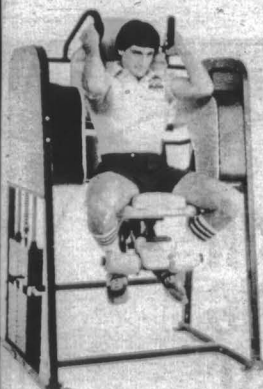

A couple of weeks ago the Norsemen finished eleventh in the 28-team Malone Invitational. Ginn said he thought they would be in the top ten, but that the competition was real even. After looking at the results, he said he was pleased with the way the team ran.

The following week NKU placed fourth at the Hanover Invitational, despite having an improved mile pace for each man on the team. Only nine points separated the top four teams in the race.

Last Saturday, Northern finished second to Eastern Kentucky in the Berea Invitational.

This Saturday Northern will participate in the University of Cincinnati Invitational.
