Men Willing To Serve With U.N. Forces

DAVID DOWNARD
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

According to a recent non-scientific survey conducted at NKU, 73 percent of the men students would be willing to serve with the U.N. forces in the Middle East as opposed to 24 percent of the women students surveyed.

Even though the men would be willing to serve, 76 percent of the 97 people surveyed did not feel it was necessary to bring back the draft.

Results from an Atlanta Journal survey, conducted in 1989, revealed only 54 percent of the people surveyed felt it was necessary to reinstitute the draft.

Recent events may account for the larger percentage of people opposing the draft.

In 1975, President Gerald Ford eliminated the requirement to register for the draft, but following the invasion of Afghanistan and the Iranian Hostage crisis in 1980, President Jimmy Carter reinstated the registration requirement.

The College Press Service reported draft registration has "skyrocketed since the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait." The number of men who registered for the draft after the invasion reflected a 67 percent increase over the number who registered before the invasion, according to the College Press Service.

All men must register with the selective service within 30 days of their 18th birthday. Failure to register can result in a felony charge, imprisonment and a fine.

NKU Considers Hotel Development

"University Inn": To Be Or Not To Be?

NKU is considering a hotel for commercial development.

Herbert R. Booth, chairman of the Board of Regents, confirmed the Board of Regents has talked seriously about a hotel complex to be affiliated with Northern.

Other university officials say NKU is cramped for conference space and has no place to lodge visitors for special events.

Mayor Herbert Kenter of Highland Heights recently said NKU plans to build a hotel on seven acres of land located behind the Alumni Reception Center. Jack Morris, a private developer, is heading up the project, Kenter said.

When asked about the proposed hotel, Morris replied, "So far, everything is oral. The proposal has been sent to Frankfort. Talk to me in four weeks."

Peter Hollister, vice president for University Relations and Development, said, "There is no proposal to build a hotel, Wendy's, laundromat or anything."

However, Hollister added, "We've talked about a hotel, but no formal proposals are being dealt with right now."

The Board of Regents, upon request by the NKU Foundation, declared the seven acres located between the Alumni Reception Center and University Center Drive as "surplus," Hollister said.

Dennis Taulbee, acting vice president for administration, stated, "No papers have been filed to declare the land surplus."

Taulbee said the university is bringing someone in to look at the site. "If the land is suitable for development," stated Taulbee, "we (NKU) will surplus it."

"The university is interested in commercial development that serves the university directly."

Minutes of the Aug. 13 Board of Regents meeting read, "President Boothe recommended that the University administration be authorized by the Board to begin the process of requesting approval for the transfer of seven acres of University land located on the south side of Nunn Drive between the Alumni Reception Center and University Drive.

This transfer would be made to the Northern Kentucky University Foundation, Inc., for development purposes."

The motion passed unanimously.

According to Hollister, the property is not in NKU's master plan as part of the university setting.

Although seven acres of university property are being considered for "surplus," NKU recently acquired two acres of land on Johns Hill Road to "protect their borders," said Taulbee.

Taulbee added, "There is no contradiction between buying land and declaring land already owned surplus."

According to Taulbee, the state gave the university approximately $475,000 in funds to acquire new land, which the university will have to match.

Meanwhile, the seven acres has "tremendous potential for commercial development," said Taulbee.

While Taulbee and Hollister said no hotel proposal has been filed, both said such a commercial development would bring in substantial income and benefits.

Although Taulbee said the university has been interested in a hotel-conference-management facility for some time, he said he was also unaware of such a proposal.

Hollister said, "There are no hotels close to the university. We're cramped for conference space and have no place to lodge visitors for special events."

He also stated, "I see lots of potential money for the university. We don't want to give up ownership. We're looking for a long-term lease."

Booth said the hotel proposal still faces hurdles in Frankfort.

"If the proposal has been sent to the state, it will still have to receive the state's blessing," said Booth.

According to Booth, transferring the property to the foundation allows them to use a method of acquiring economic development the university can't.

The land in question is currently zoned as single-family residential. The NKU Foundation would have to file a petition with Highland Heights to change the zoning from residential to commercial.

Alleged Rape Victim Calls The Northerner With Story

DIANE GOETZ
ASSISTANT MANAGING EDITOR

Last week a story was run about the Department of Public Safety. In that story, Lt. Don McKenzie made the following statement: "We've never had a murder or reported rape." Upon running the story, The Northerner decided to assign a reporter to investigate this statement. Meanwhile, two Letters to the Editor were received informing our staff that rapes have been reported to several offices at NKU. Attempts were made to contact the letter authors. Shortly after contacting them, an anonymous rape victim came forward voicing her concerns about student safety and last week's Department of Public Safety article.

Although NKU has the lowest crime rate in the state of Kentucky, alleged incidents have occurred on campus relating to students safety, including rape.

Lt. McKenzie of the Department of Public Safety said, "Incidents of rape or murder have never been reported to our office."

McKenzie added this does not mean NKU students may not be victims of these crimes. It either means the incident occurred out of their jurisdiction or simply was not reported to DPS.

An anonymous rape victim said "We've never had a murder or reported rape," was not true. She went on to say that indeed she was raped last February.

The victim said she had reported the incident to the Director of Residential Life, who informed the Women's Crisis Center, Counseling Center and the Dean of Students office. However, she stated she did not want to press legal charges.

The Department of Public Safety said they cannot recall any such incident. The victim admitted that DPS was not informed.

She believes there should be a system set up to inform DPS of such an incident.

"College campuses are breeding grounds for this kind of violence. What appeared in last week's article is lethal. Students should not be led into a false sense of security," stated the victim.

Kimberly Wade, a sophomore theatre major, said she knows of at least one rape in the dorms and several sexual assaults. "I want women to be aware that these incidents are happening on campus. It's really very scary," added Wade.

A national college survey found that 90 percent of rape victims never report the incident to the police. The survey also reported that one out of every six females are a victim of rape or attempted rape.

The victim added that NKU is no exception to any other university. It may be smaller but these incidents do occur.

DPS reported they know of only one incident where a student was leaving campus and was grabbed by a man. He was stopped before anything happened.

"NKU may not have higher crime rates than other surrounding universities have," commented Wendi Staubitz,

NKU Working To Improve Education Program

RAY GRUNER
STAFF WRITER

NKU, along with colleges nationwide, is working to solve the problems of inadequate teacher training and teacher shortages.

A special task force, established by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) in Washington D.C., reported that poor teacher training programs may be to blame for U.S. students falling behind their peers in other industrialized countries.

The task force also said by the year 2000 there will be an additional 4.3 million elementary and secondary students but only 500,000 more teachers.

The result will be future American students continuing to fall behind because there will not be enough teachers.

According to Stephen Walker, a special education professor, the problem has already forced changes at NKU.

"NKU is doing a lot to improve our education program," Walker said. "Just this past year we have raised our grade point average requirement for education majors to 2.5."

Walker stressed that those students who want to be teachers but have less than a 2.5 grade point are allowed to take other non-education classes to raise their grade point and apply for readmission.

NKU is also involved in "recruiting" education majors. Walker traveled to many area high schools last spring to talk with students about a possible teaching career.

Walker added that his area of special education is experiencing an acute shortage of teachers. Many schools have resorted to giving "emergency" teaching certificates to unqualified people for special education classes.

Walker is optimistic about the future of education not only at NKU but in the U.S. as well.

"I know we are doing things and I hope we'll see more," said Walker.

Recycling Program Started

NKU wants students, faculty and staff to help save the earth.

Last week, NKU began a system to collect paper for recycling, but volunteers are needed to make the program work.

Environmental Safety Director Anthony B. Hall, who is directing the recycling program, said each office on campus now has two boxes in which recyclable paper is placed. One box is for "mixed paper" and the other is for computer paper. When these boxes are full, office personnel will dump them in the yellow canisters located on each floor of every building (including the dorms).

Hall said the volunteers are needed to notify him when the yellow canisters are full. The canisters are then emptied at a central location for pick-up by Jefferson-Smurfit, the paper company handling NKU's recycling.

After some training, volunteers will

Karenga Says Cultural Literacy Needed

ANNE STEER
STAFF WRITER

Maulana Karenga, chair and associate professor of the California State University's Department of Black Studies, stressed the importance of being culturally literate during his workshop and lecture held on campus, Friday, Sept. 7.

"People who are culturally illiterate cannot function in today's world," said Karenga.

Karenga pointed out two things necessary for colleges and universities to maintain cultural literacy.

First, they must maintain the ethnic and women's studies departments currently in existence.

Secondly, they must infuse women's and ethnic studies in every subject and class.

Karenga challenged NKU staff, faculty and students to respect human rights and embrace diversity.

According to Michael Washington, NKU's director of Afro American Studies, Karenga's visit to NKU resulted from President Leon Boothe's call for a mandatory class on racism and sexism at NKU.

Washington said the workshop, "The Challenge of Curriculum Integration: Race, Gender and Class Consideration," focused on multiculturalism in relation to teaching methods. The lecture, "The Value and Vision of Multiculturalism: Ethical, Intellectual and Social Dimensions," was an extension of the workshop.

According to Karenga, his lecture and workshop were created because of the recently emerging debates in colleges and universities over the content of liberal education and the need for the curriculum to reflect the American culture.

Karenga said educational adequacies cannot be achieved without multiculturalism.

"Human diversity," he said, "is human richness. The school or community that understands this can benefit from that."

According to Karenga, real multiculturalism should include:

- strength and values of cultural diversity.
- human rights, the respect for each other's right to exist as individuals and groups.
- respect for alternate life choices.
- social justice and equal opportunity for all people.
- equitable distribution of power among members of all groups (educational as well as cultural).
- greater emphasis on race, gender and class.

• appreciation for intellectual richness of human rights.

Karenga said the challenge of implementing multiculturalism in schools as well as society lies in the hands of the educators.

His statement compliments a recent statement made by Boothe in his August 22 State of the University Address.

Boothe said: "... one area which needs considerable improvement is the perniciousness and persistency of racism in our society. I hoped that time, combined with education would resolve this problem. That has clearly not been the case."

"We have tried to resolve our dilemma by delegating it to the individual student to become better educated regarding gender and race. ... that approach has not worked. Because racism and sexism continue to permeate our society, this university needs to be in the forefront of trying to eradicate these problems."

"... I am, therefore, challenging the faculty of this university to develop a broad-based course which will focus primarily on the cultural, political and economic contributions of women and non-Caucasian segments of the American pluralistic society."

Karenga capsulized his ideas with the following statements: "Most see freedom as a matter of choice. It should be a matter of responsibility. Make the ruling class responsible for their actions. Challenge them. America is a multicultural, unfinished project. Cultivate those young people who will determine your future."

A Look Back: Access Road Wanted

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT
1977

NKU President A.D. Albright threw the proverbial wrench into Highland Heights' plans for an access road connecting their proposed Civic Center with Louie B. Nunn Dr. at a dinner given by the city Feb. 20 said John Nienaber, Student Government president.

The dinner was planned months ago by the city, explained Nienaber, as a means for government officials and university administrators to get acquainted.

When the controversial access road was brought up, Albright cited two reasons for halting it, at least temporarily, according to Nienaber.

First, the president noted that the university master plan is currently being reformulated. "It will take nine to twelve months to complete," explained Nienaber, and it may turn out that the access road would conflict with those plans.

"The second reason is the school wants to see what traffic changes occur when I-275 and I-471 open up," he added. Most of the faculty, staff and students now using the back entrances to the university will probably be using the Circle Freeway which exits on US 27 by West Shell Realty, said Nienaber. If this happens, the proposed access road would encourage tremendous congestion on Nunn Dr., he suggested.

The city of Highland Heights will go ahead with the Civic Center on the proposed site, said Nienaber, in order to hold on to the federal grant for the project.

Albright's opposition is a formidable block to the city's plans. The only way the mayor and city council can bypass Albright is by directly seeking the support of a university regent to introduce a proposal to the rest of the board.

The Look Back column is a weekly excerpt from past editions of The Northerner dealing with issues still being addressed today.

be eligible for federal student aid, federal jobs and federal job training assistance.

When asked, "If the draft were brought back, women should be drafted," 41 percent of the NKU students surveyed agreed.

These figures are relatively smaller than the Atlanta Journal's finding that 52 percent of those surveyed thought that both men and women should be drafted.

"Although there is a law protecting the jobs of workers who are called to duty, there is no law protecting students," said Joe Hanley, spokesman for the U.S. Army reserves, in a College Press Service release.

However, Norleen Pomerantz, NKU assistant vice president for Student Development, said, "If we had students called up, something would be worked out."

Face-to-face interviews with 97 students were conducted by precision journalism students on Sept. 4-6. The interviewers, planned and supervised by Penny Summers, associate professor of journalism, covered seven of ten buildings on NKU's campus.

Students were asked, "Would you be willing to serve with the U.N. forces in the Middle East?"

Students were also asked to respond to the following statements on a scale of one to five, one being strongly disagree and five being strongly agree: "The United States should bring back the military draft;" and, "If the draft was brought back, women should be drafted."

director of Student Government's Escort Service, "Yet to be kept in the dark about such violations makes me feel vulnerable. It could happen to anyone."

The victim went on to say it bothers her how DPS is not informed of such an occurrence. Even if they don't press charges, DPS should at least know about them in a confidential record file, she said.

The victim reported that the guilty person confessed to what he had done in a meeting with the Dean of Students. He was told to leave her alone and not to have any contact with her, stated the victim.

"It didn't happen elsewhere," said the victim, "I'm an NKU student and it happened at the resident halls here on campus."

Both Wade and the victim agree that the escort service started by Student Government is one way that these crimes can be prevented. They also agree that students should not walk around campus at night alone.

"What happened to me was wrong," said the victim, "I went through hell and it got written up like it didn't happen at all."

Policy On Rape Stories

HOLLY JO KOONS
EDITOR

Rape is a touchy issue to deal with whether your The Northerner or another newspaper. Keeping the names out of an article such as the one appearing in this week's edition is a decision made by the editorial staff that we will continue to follow for the victim's protection.

Although an anonymous caller is one source used in The Northerner article, keep in mind, it does not always mean the anonymous source is telling the facts as presented. However, it will be up to each of The Northerner staff members to use their judgment about such a circumstance. The reporter assigned the story believed the caller, asked questions and decided to use the story upon consent of the editor.

We hope to continue writing stories concerned with campus safety, including rape. By keeping the names out of articles, it allows the staff to obtain stories they may otherwise not obtain.

We hope our readers realize the terrible crime involved in a rape case. By running crime stories, we can let students know they must take precaution to guard against such incidences.

Students Support Professor DeMarcus

Dear President Boothe:

Recently in your State of the University Address you state that "...and that..." In the university, we discourage lying, (and) cheating..." Your remarks are quoted as they were reported in our campus newspaper on Aug. 29. Many Northern students sincerely hope that your words do not represent meaningless rhetoric, but that you truly mean what you say.

As you doubtless know, last semester John P. DeMarcus was elected by a majority of the faculty of the Department of History & Geography as chair of the department. The election was supported by both Provost (David) Jorns and Dean (Darryl) Poole. Dean Poole conducted the selection process from beginning to end. He actually drafted the ballots and counted them with his own hand. After he realized what the results were, according to several witnesses, he seemed to go into what could best be described as a mild state of shock.

It was only after the results were known that any objections whatever were raised by anyone to DeMarcus' candidacy. It is a perversion of the democratic process to conduct secret meetings, bring secret charges and compile secret files after the votes have been counted. All of this we understand has actually taken place. Are these the values you want the university to leave its students with? Secret meetings, files and charges, perversion of democracy—could not this kind of behavior also be appropriately called "lying and cheating?"

The vast majority of DeMarcus' students consider him a brilliant teacher. He is always kind, compassionate and understanding without being weak and coddling. He is gentle, but at the same time, strong. His classroom is exciting and at the same time challenging. He is, in our opinion, a great teacher who constantly demonstrates his concern for his students. To maintain that he is anything else would certainly violate the spirit and letter of your State of the University Address.

As you might imagine, many of us are history majors and, as such, know something about the history of our University. DeMarcus was the first administrator of Northern. He can be considered one of, if not the actual founder of Northern. To judge his administrative skills you only have to look around you. Look at the building dedications plaques—the most common name engraved on them is John DeMarcus.

Deeley Gives Feelings On Annexation

Dear Students,

On Sept. 13, I met with Highland Heights Mayor Herbert Kenter and spoke to the Highland Heights City Council. I asked the council to remember that annexation, if approved, would directly affect students and invited a Highland Heights representative to speak to the SG General Assembly.

While Kenter stated he wanted to cooperate and work with the university and students, his actions were different.

When I first received the newspaper clipping describing the annexation, I was disturbed that students opinions were not discussed. The reason for this, I learned, was because Highland Heights never bothered to tell the university of the possible annex or ask for student opinion. I would hardly call that cooperation.

At the council meeting, Kenter stated that he had thought of sending a letter to Student Government but failed to do so. He did give me a copy of a letter he sent President Boothe over a month ago.

The General Assembly passed a resolution to declare Oct. 24 and 25 AIDS Awareness Days at NKU. The events will be sponsored by APB and Human Development with the AIDS Volunteers of Cincinnati and Positive Peer Posse'.

AIDS Awareness Days at NKU will respond to the students needs and concerns with the disease. For more information, call Jonathan Kollman in the SG office.

SG is considering selling one year Enjoy the Art memberships to NKU students for $15, the regular membership costs $24.50. If you would be interested in SG pursuing this project, please contact University Affairs Chairperson Rachel Klink.

Vice President Christy Franzen is working with Director of Residential Life Patty Haden to organize Resident Hall Council elections. Any resident hall student who wants more information, please contact Franzen at 572-5737.

MusicFest was held on Sept. 14, and was very enjoyable. I would like to thank APB and WRFN for working with SG to make the event a success.

Congratulations to Scoot Sparks and Trisha Stanton for winning the Student Government waterballoon toss during MusicFest.

The Student Escort Service was started on Sept. 12. We have received six calls for escorts and expect the number to increase dramatically. Escorts will be available Monday through Thursday, dark to 10 p.m. To request and escort, call 572-5149.

There has been a change in the aluminum recycling project policy. While the proceeds will still go into SG scholarship fund, physical plant will be emptying the aluminum recycling canisters.

If you wasn't to register a grievance dealing with the University, please use one of SG's fifteen campus Suggestion Boxes or contact Grievance and Affirmation Chairperson Sean Lehman.

Michelle Deeley
SG President

How could he be a poor administrator as the Dean maintains? Does any fair-minded person believe that? Many on campus who read the Dean's charges in our campus newspaper refer to them as "trivial and trumped up." Are these the values the University wants to imprint on student minds? Does this entire fiasco reflect the truth or does it reek of "lying (and) cheating?"

Not all of DeMarcus' students like him. He can be challenging, and beneath his quiet gentle manner there is great courage. Not all faculty support DeMarcus. Anyone who has done as much as DeMarcus has over the years has made many enemies. But most of his students consider him a brilliant teacher with both an ear for his students and a heart. He truly seems to understand students—our many problems and dreams. Does the treatment accorded DeMarcus represent "A renewed emphasis on teaching and learning" which, as you said in your address...The university prides itself on?"

We understand that you, Provost Jorns and the University Board may even have been involved in the subterfuge that resulted in Dr. DeMarcus' re-jection. We sincerely hope this is untrue. But we call on you to correct this injustice—an injustice perpetrated against someone to whom we all, including you personally, owe a great deal.

May we respectfully add that as students of history we feel the Pontius Pilate act of hand washing and dis-claiming responsibility for injustice was old and hard to believe more than two thousand years ago. We most strongly urge you to right this injustice.

Michelle Deeley:
SG PresidentFRED SORINO
STAFF WRITER

Michelle Deeley, president of Student Government, is the voice of the students for the 1990-91 school year.

Deeley said she is willing to discuss any problems and suggestions to make make NKU a better place.

"I want students to realize that my door is always open and I'm willing to discuss any concerns and inquiries that they have," Deeley said.

Here at NKU, each executive member of Student Government has an individual project. Deeley works to get Chase Law School students more involved on campus.

"I want them to apply for book grants and participate in Student Government events, such as Gripe Days," Deeley said.

Deeley is also concerned about the large number of non-traditional students on campus everyday.

"Since we have the highest percentage of non-traditional students in the state, our students needs are much different than they are on other campuses," she said.

Deeley, a junior with a double major in speech and journalism, is planning to graduate in the spring of 1992 and then go on to receive her master's and doctorate in communications. She hopes to teach someday at the college level.

Deeley is no stranger to Student Government. In addition to her NKU office, she is also the Board of Student Body Presidents public relations chairperson. Deeley has also served as special activities chairperson and representative-at-large in 1989.

Deeley said she is close with her family and attributes her accomplishments to them.

"I would not have had the confidence to run in Student Government and be so active in speech, if it were not for the love and support of my family," Deeley said.

She spends a lot of her free time with her family, but she also has some hobbies. She has a brown belt in karate and enjoys going to the theater.

She also likes spending time with friends and coaching local junior and senior high school speech teams. She also volunteers help run and judge Kentucky High School Speech Leagues regional tournaments.

Deeley's list has a long list of honors and awards. She was the Student Government Outstanding Representative in 1989-90, and she received Outstanding Service to NKU's Communication Department honors last year.

Deeley has received 41 speech and debate awards. She was named the Sixth Best Overall Speaker in Kentucky and earned top 20 in the impromptu speaking and dramatic interpretations contests at the Pi Kappa Delta's 1989 National Tournament.

Promotional Video On NKU

ANNE STEER
STAFF WRITER

University Relations Department and Media Services are creating a promotional video featuring the daily activities at NKU.

According to Ron Ellis, director of University Relations, the video will feature footage of various departments, general shots of students engaged in campus activities and interviews with several NKU professors.

Ellis said the idea for the video grew from a need assessed by many people, including Peter Hollister, vice president for University Relations.

Hollister said the video will run 12 to 15 minutes and depict every day life at NKU.

"We want to begin to communicate more with off-campus audiences," he said. "It will be a visual image of the campus. We have a difficult time because our campus is not on everybody's pathway."

Hollister added the only people who see NKU are people conducting business here or people wanting to be here.

Hollister said the video will be used by the Alumni Affairs Department and by recruiters to encourage prospective students to attend NKU.

"The film will feature footage of alumni talking about NKU and the good job NKU did in preparing them for their careers," he said.

Hollister also hopes to show the video to potential benefactors and legislators.

"The legislators are people who have never been to our campus," he said, "and they're the people who cast the vote on whether or not to give us support."

Ellis said Mike Mimms, television production coordinator of Media Services, is supervising the filming and technical portion of the video.

The first department to be captured on camera by Mimms was the NKU Dance Company.

Ellis said plans are underway to video activities at The Northerner, WRFN and the Music Department. He said the video has a targeted completion date for October.

The Cooperative Center for Study in Britain (CCSB) is offering a study program in Ireland next summer for the first time.

Michael Klembara, executive director of CCBS, said the program will run May 13-28, and there is space available for 25 students. The program's focus is Irish literature, and it will be based in Dublin. Joe Florry, an Eastern Kentucky University professor, will teach the class.

Plans for the trip include visits to the Irish Republic's National Gallery, Trinity College Library, Abbey Theater, St. Patrick's Cathedral and Christ Church.

One special highlight will be a trip to Wicklow County, a stronghold of Christianity during the Dark Ages.

"It's a tremendous monastery area," Klembara said.

He added there may also be a pub tour.

"Many of the Irish authors frequented the pubs," Klembara said. "Many wrote about the pubs in Ireland."

Klembara said CCSB officials decided to initiate the program because previous CCSB trips that included a side trip to Ireland were successful.

The program costs $1,500 per student, which includes airfare from Cincinnati, bed and breakfast and trips throughout Ireland.

CCSB, based at NKU, is a joint effort of several colleges and universities that provides programs of study in Great Britain.

CCSB regularly offers programs in London during summer and Christmas break. A fall semester in Oxford is also offered.

More than 20 NKU students studied in Britain last summer, said Sandra Jacobs, assistant to the director of CCSB.

"A lot of students who make the initial inquiry about the program do go eventually," she said. "And a lot go back. Some have even gone back three times."

Gary Clayton, professor of finance, is one of four NKU professors who spent five weeks this past summer living in a college dormitory in Britain.

Clayton, along with his wife and five children, were in London from July 5 to Aug. 9 while he was teaching a class in international business at King's College of the University of London.

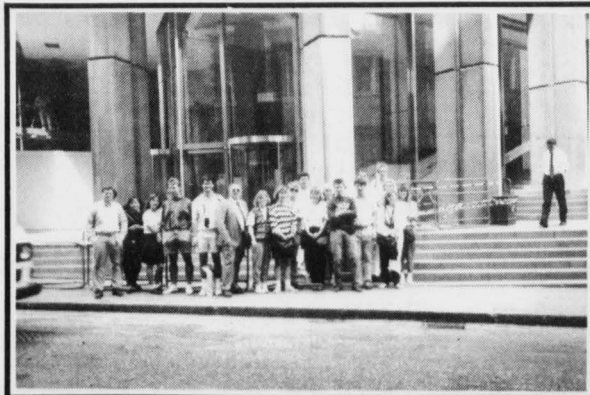

"We ate breakfast in the cafeteria, and we lived on the third floor and shared a bath and showers with the students," Clayton said.

Classes and field trips were scheduled for three days each week, said Clayton, who taught under a program called Cooperative Center for Study in Britain (CCSB). All the students in Clayton's class came from American universities and studied under the CCSB program, he said.

"We (my class) toured some of the leading financial markets of the world," Clayton said, "including the Bank of England, the Metal Exchange and Lloyd's of London." Each field trip consisted of a tour, a talk and a film.

A planned tour to the London Stock Exchange was canceled because it had just been bombed by the IRA.

"We saw the gaping hole in the visitors' gallery," Clayton said, "but we didn't get to go inside."

When they were not in class or on field trips, faculty and students did sightseeing on their own.

"I was amazed at the number of things to do in London," Clayton said. "We were a five-minute walk from Kensington Palace. We had passes for virtually unlimited travel on the London underground (the subway), and there was no rain. We saw something of interest every day. We even saw Lady Di."

Clayton said he visited the Tower of London, went to Piccadilly Circus, climbed to the top of St. Paul's Cathedral, toured Westminster Abbey and visited Hampton Place (the summer palace of Paula Collins, a senior, has made the trip twice. During the July trip, she studied the history of London under NKU professor Jeffrey Williams. Her field trips included several walking tours.

"We tried to imagine what life was like there during the period of time we were studying about, and we looked at the architecture, too," she said.

Collins' field trips included Whitehall, an area of government buildings, the Houses of Parliament, and the Inns of Court.

"Being in London and being a student, you get discounts," Collins said. She used a special rail pass to go to Canterbury. One day she took a 35-minute trip in a hovercraft across the English Channel to France.

"Just to say I'd been to France," Collins added.

Collins hopes to go back again.

"CCSB is a great program," she stated. "You meet people from other universities, and you see how other cultures live."

"It's a very, very good program," Klembara said. "It has tremendous value for the money in it."

The application deadline for the Christmas break study in London is Oct. 24. Classes will run from Dec. 26 through Jan. 8. A passport is required.

For more information about the program or courses of study planned, contact Klembara at BEP 301, phone 572-6512, or contact Williams at LA 438, phone 572-5135.

Henry VIII). He also went to Scotland and Wales and visited numerous castles.

"The best castle is at Dover," he said. "It's a Norman castle with all passages open to the public."

"It was a great trip, even better than I thought it would be," Clayton said, "I'd like to see every student on this campus go for at least one semester."

"Basically, there are two kinds of people who travel internationally," he said. "The first are students, the second are retirees. And you don't want to wait that long for this much fun."

According to Clayton, CCSB is the most affordable study-abroad program in London. "Last summer, it cost about $2,500. That included round-trip air fare, lodging, and most meals," he said.

Other NKU faculty who taught in the program were: Linda Dolive (political science), Frank Steely (legal programs), and Jeffrey Williams (history).

Clayton said the faculty propose classes to be taught. Each proposal then goes to the CCSB board members for approval.

Clayton said he will teach an international business course in the summer of 1991 in Madrid, Spain, under another program, KIES (Kentucky Institute for European Studies). The central theme for the class will be the European Common Market.

Coach Says Schnetzer One Of Best Athletes

JOHN REITMAN
STAFF WRITER

When Linda Schnetzer was deciding where to go to college, being a two-sport athlete was important to her.

She was a standout softball, basketball and volleyball player at Mother of Mercy High School in Cincinnati. Ever since her freshman year at Mother of Mercy, Schnetzer wanted to play volleyball at the collegiate level.

Linda Schnetzer

Schnetzer, now a junior at NKU, is a middle blocker on the volleyball team and an All-GLVC shortstop on the softball team.

Volleyball coach Mary Biermann called Schnetzer "one of the best all-around athletes I have ever seen."

Last year Schnetzer had 161 kills, and 221 digs and 31 service aces, and led the team with 47 block assists. On the diamond she was an All-GLVC selection at shortstop, posting a .336 batting average.

This year she finds herself playing the role of team leader on an inexperienced Lady Norse volleyball squad. She is one of only three players returning from last year.

After losing seven letter winners from last season, Biermann sees a lack of experience as a problem this year, despite the volleyball team's current 3-0 record.

"We have to get a ton of experience in a very short time," said Biermann, who is in her second season at NKU.

Biermann stressed leadership comes from the best players and from those with experience. This year she is looking to Schnetzer, along with senior Paula Glazier, to provide this leadership.

"We're going to depend on her a lot in clutch situations," Biermann said.

Biermann said Schnetzer's hard work is one of her best attributes. Biermann added the younger players must emulate her attitude towards practice and winning.

Schnetzer agrees she must be a role model for the eight freshmen on the team, and she feels well qualified for the responsibility.

Physical ability and consistency, is a key to Schnetzer's game, her coach said.

"She's very fast, has good jumping ability and is very strong," Biermann said.

Equally as important as physical ability, according to Biermann, is Schnetzer's hard-work ethic.

"Linda is very intelligent and very motivated," Biermann said. "She is also very level-headed and does not go through periods of 'ups and downs.' She has a very aggressive, winning attitude in everything she does. She is a winner."

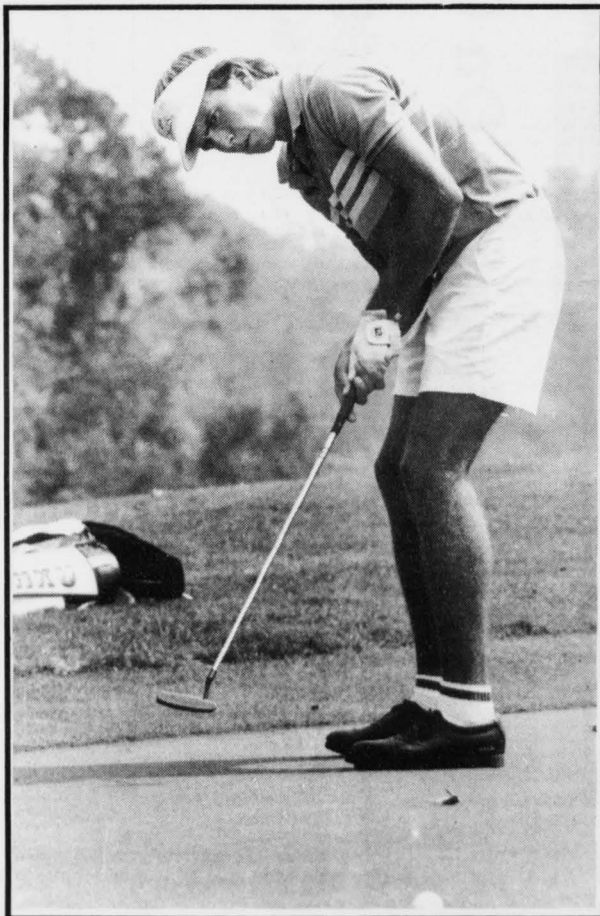

At 5-foot-7, Schnetzer sees her height as her biggest disadvantage in volleyball. She said at her middle blocker position she must consistently play against opponents 6-feet or taller.

Although she chose to attend NKU so she could play two sports, Schnetzer recognizes the need to excel in the classroom as well as on the court.

"It means a lot to me to do well in school, and it means a lot to my parents too," Schnetzer said. "Besides, I want to make a lot of money when I graduate, and good grades are the best way to do that."

The schedule of a student athlete keeps Schnetzer very busy. If she is not attending classes, studying or practicing, chances are she is participating in her favorite hobby—catching up on her sleep.

Cheerleaders Plan Hawaii Trip

KEITH SHERMAN
STAFF WRITER

How would you like to spend part of your Christmas vacation in Hawaii? The NKU cheerleaders are raising money to do just that.

According to cheerleader sponsor Sandy Hasson, the cheerleaders are trying to raise money so they can travel with the men's basketball team to Hawaii, Dec. 19-22, for a tournament.

She said that if there was not enough money to send the whole squad, then she would like to send at least two or three cheerleaders to represent NKU.

Athletic Director Jane Meier said the team and the cheerleaders had to raise money on their own because there wasn't any money in the athletic budget to pay for the cost of the trip. Meier said, "It's really neat that they have taken the initiative to raise the money."

Head basketball coach Ken Shields said that the team was able to raise money through contributions and donations to the Gold Club, which is the athletic booster club for NKU.

Hasson, who has been the assistant sponsor for the past two years, took over as sponsor in mid-July. She said, "The cheerleaders are selling candy bars for $1 to help raise money."

She went on to say they sponsored a couple of car washes and raised money through their own Gold Club drive. However, Hasson added, "The fund raising isn't going as well as I would like."

"There are some fund raising projects in the planning stages, but nothing is definite."

Sophomore cheerleader Rachel Wright said she was excited about the possibility

Tennis Team Splits GLVC Matches

NKU Defeats Kentucky State

REGAL SUMMERS
STAFF WRITER

Despite playing with only four players, the NKU women's tennis team defeated Kentucky State and played well in a losing cause against Bellarmine Saturday at Bellevue High School.

NKU had to forfeit four matches because of a lack of players, but still won 5-4 over Kentucky State. Susan Frommeyer, Julie Goodridge and Jami Branham all won their singles matches easily in straight sets. Frommeyer and Goodridge teamed up for a doubles victory as did Branham and Jenny Toebben.

NKU suffered a 8-1 loss to Bellarmine in their second match, forfeits accounted for three of the eight losses.

When asked if he was happy with the progress of the team, first year coach Dr. Willie Elliott responded, "Considering the circumstances; taking over in August, practicing sporadically and dealing with player's schedules, I'm ecstatic."

Elliott added that the team is playing well, but they need to keep their concentration more during matches and become more "match tough" and that will come with more experience.

Frommeyer agreed with her coach. "I feel we played well, but we haven't had enough practice yet and we haven't played enough matches yet."

When asked if it affects her play when she knows that the team will have to forfeit matches, Frommeyer said, "Yes it does, we are used to having a team out there and right now we are not a team. We lose a lot of matches by just forfeiting, so it makes the matches seem more individual."

Coach Elliott believes that if all six of his players are in action, his team can be very competitive in the league (Great Lakes Valley Conference). Frommeyer added, "If all our players show up, we might be able to win the league. Individually we should do well because of what we have (players) compares well with other players in the league."

Coach Elliott would like anyone interested in playing on the team to contact him through the athletic office.

In other action, Bellarmine defeated Kentucky State 9-0.

of going to Hawaii. "It makes me get chills everytime I think about it," she said. Wright explained that the candy bars are not selling that well because she thinks students aren't willing to buy one for a $1 when they can buy one in the bookstore for 50 cents.

Pam Baute, a sophomore cheerleader, said she was also excited about the chance of going to Hawaii, but agreed that the fund raising wasn't going well. "I don't think we can go to Hawaii on car washes and candy bars," said Baute.

Hasson said that if not enough money is raised to send everyone and they have to choose just two or three to go, they will choose from the returners from last year's squad. They are Baute, Wright, Ginette Bolin, Julie Gantly, Sonja Newman and Bobby Rabe.

NKU Norse Weekend Roundup

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

Two top 20 NCAA Division II men's soccer teams rolled onto campus for the NKU tournament this weekend.

Oakland University, the 11th ranked team in the country, opened the tournament Saturday against Lockhaven, the 18th ranked team, 2-0.

Lee Davison and Paul Phillips scored goals to lead Oakland to the victory. In the second game, Great Lakes Valley Conference rivals, NKU and Southern Indiana matched up.

NKU's Tim Lawson scored to knot the score 1-1 at halftime but Joe Lattner and Eric Schoenstein scored second half goals to lead the Screamin' Eagles.

On Sunday, Oakland won the tournament when they shut out NKU 2-0. Phillips and Dominic Sciluna scored the goals. In the other game, Lockhaven beat Southern Indiana 1-0. With the two losses, NKU fell to 1-4-1 (0-1 GLVC). They host Indianapolis Saturday at 1:00 p.m.

The NKU men's cross country team finished second to Rio Grande in the Wilmington Invitational Saturday by edging out Xavier by one point.

Freshman Ernie Brooks finished fourth in the men's race with a time of 28:12 to lead the Norsemen. The women's team finished third behind the running of senior Angie Carson.

Football Anyone?

FRED SORINO
STAFF WRITER

NKU Community Education is ready to kickoff a new season of non-credit classes.

If you feel your gridiron knowledge needs a little brushing up or if you're totally clueless come Sunday afternoons, you can enroll in a Monday Night Football Workshop for a mere $35.

Mary Anne Yurko, Coordinator of Community Education classes at NKU said, "I came up with the idea in relation to women who become football widows on the weekend."

However, the class is not only offered to women; men interested in learning a little more about the game are welcome to sign up.

The course offers people a chance to learn about football and feel a part of the group on Sunday.

The class will cover a brief history of football. Then it will move onto the basics such as how many men are on the field, what is a first down, and the difference between offense and defense.

"You would be surprised at how many people in the area have no knowledge of the game what so ever," Yurko said.

She hopes the class will teach people the terminology of football so at least these people can sit down and understand what is going on; they might even enjoy it.

Yurko is not yet sure if the class can be held.

"We've had a lot of phone calls about the class, but not enough people have signed up yet," Yurko said.

The class will be offered on Monday nights starting on Sept. 17, 7-9:30 p.m. and will continue every Monday for four weeks.

The class instructors are not going to be your everyday teacher. Yurko has lined up a few interesting speakers. Paul Keeles of WCKY Radio, John Popovich of Channel 9 news, and Greg Hoard from Channel 5.

She decided to ask these professional sports announcers because they are "sports enthusiasts" and it would make the class a lot more fun.

"Besides they were happy to be of help," Yurko said.

Crawford: Men's Tennis Coach

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

Geoff Crawford has been named the new men's tennis coach at NKU.

He replaces Jeff Zinn, who resigned this summer to become the head men's and women's coach at Arkansas-Little Rock.

Crawford inherits a team that returns all but one player from last year's squad which captured its third Great Lakes Valley Conference championship in five seasons.

A 1970 graduate of the University of Cincinnati, he played college tennis for the Bearcats from 1965-69.

In addition to his coaching duties,

Crawford also serves as the director of tennis at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center and at two City of Cincinnati recreational facilities. He is also the teaching professional at Harper's Point Racquet Club.

His experience includes coaching several nationally ranked junior players in the area and many former and current collegiate performers. For the past 12 years, he has been a member of the United States Professional Tennis Association and was president of its Southern Ohio chapter from 1987-89.

In addition, he coached Withrow High School from 1971-76.

"No Reported Rapes" Is Untrue

Dear Editor:

In the Sept. 12 issue of "The Northerner," an article appeared stating that, according to Lt. Don McKenzie, DPS received no reports of rape on campus for the 1989 - 90 fiscal year.

Although DPS may not have received any reports, I urge you to be more thorough in your investigations. There are several other places that rape can be reported (i.e. The Women's Center, the Dean's office, etc...). Living in the student dorms, I know of several reported cases of sexual assault, and at least one reported rape.

I am writing to make sure that no one gets a false sense of security about campus safety from the article. Everyone needs to be aware and especially careful, even at NKU.

Jennifer Qemling

Rape Does Happen At NKU Too

Dear Editor,

I am writing in regards to the front page article in the Sept. 12 issue on NKU's low crime rate. Lt. Don McKenzie is quoted as saying, "We've never had a murder or reported rape." Unfortunately, he is very much mistaken.

I know of several reported sexual assaults and, at least, one reported rape that was taken to The Women's Center and to the Dean's office.

It really bothers me to know that DPS are not receiving these reports. Shouldn't they know the truth about what's going on? I strongly urge you to be more thorough in your research of the articles that you print. NKU students need to be aware of what's happening on campus even if our Department of Public Safety doesn't!

Thank you,
Kimberly Wade

Right Decision When Elected Bush

Dear Editor:

An important part of decision making is to review your past decisions to ensure that they were correct.

Let's contrast the decision of the American people in choosing George Bush over Michael Dukakis. Presently, George Bush is consolidating the free world against Iraqi aggression. While Michael Dukakis is trying to mend a mutiny against his administration led not by a foe, but by his own Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy. Dukakis's administration is in disarray—could you imagine what would have happened should he have won the White House? God forbid.

I applaud the decision that the American people made when they put George Bush in the White House. To ensure that correct decisions are made in the future I would encourage all those interested to attend the Campus Republican meetings held on Mondays at 5 p.m. in UC 108. Membership drive will be in the UC lobby Sept. 24-28.

"I don't know how anybody gets through college today without a Macintosh. Sometimes I have so many assignments that I barely have time for sleep. Yet my Macintosh allows me to get my work done on time—without making sacrifices.

"Working on my dissertation and field studies means collecting an incredible amount of information. So jumping from one program to another with ease is imperative, as is quickly making charts and graphs. By enabling me to do these things, Macintosh probably saves me an hour and a half each day.

"Another great thing about the Macintosh is that it makes you feel technically confident. Remember putting toys together when you were a kid? Who reads the directions? Nobody. You look at the picture of the bike and you know exactly what to do. The Macintosh operates the same way. I actually taught a friend to use one in two minutes.

"What would my life be like without a Macintosh? Scary."

program tries to make the learning fun and easier," said Mallot.

There are currently 13 students enrolled in the program. Students are chosen for this program by first applying at the ReEntry Center. From there, students undergo IQ tests, personality tests and other testing to determine the most qualified students for the program. The program is open to both men and women.

After the 14-week program, students enter classes that correspond to whatever career they choose.

The program is funded by the Job Training Partnership Act. This act allows students to attend many cultural events in the area such as the Cincinnati Symphony and Playhouse In The Park.

Angela Taylor, coordinator and instructor of the program, said the program is a success.

"My students love it!" she said. "The college environment is exciting to them."

They are adapting well to the program."

Taylor said, "This program is unlike any university classes in which the classes are clerical by nature. This program finally gives life to the students' dreams. These students have an enthusiasm for life, but they have encountered a lot of shut doors. They are a special group."

The Kaleidoscope Program ends in December. A new group of students will be considered for entrance in the program for the spring semester. For additional information about the program, call Karen Mallott at 572-6361.

also answer questions and train others about recycling.

Hall said Jefferson-Smurfit pays NKU $20 per ton of paper collected. Before the recycling project was in full swing, 1,720 pounds of papers were taken from NKU by Jefferson-Smurfit.

"It would be good to get students involved because it could have a great value to go back to Student Government or where ever we decide the money should go," Hall said.

He added there has been no final determination where the recycling funds will be appropriated.

Hall explained there will also be savings in waste collection. The university pays for the amount of trash hauled off. Since NKU's garbage contains a large amount of paper, there will be less garbage hauled off, and garbage collection will cost less.

Hall said all types of paper are not recyclable, so there are lists on the yellow canisters describing what paper can be placed in each canister. For example, glossy paper, laser paper and carbon paper are not recyclable, Hall said.

Hall said he would like to see students get involved in the program and put their waste paper in the canisters.

"It is important all students should be aware they're not only saving the environment, they're also making the university a success in saving the earth," Hall said.

Hall said President Leon Boothe first suggested the paper recycling program. For some time the university has recycled such products as oil, batteries, cooking grease, scrap metal and wood chips, he added. Eventually, officials hope to extend the recycling program to glass and plastic.

Kathy Dawn, manager of printing and copying services, said NKU is also using recycled paper. She said 35 percent of university publications are currently printed on recycled paper. Recycled paper will soon be available in the university's copy center.

Some publication currently using at least some recycled paper include: Chase Law School's "Continuing Legal Education;" "Campus Digest," NKU's staff and faculty newsletter; event invitations; the university's annual budget report; and WNKU brochures.

"It's increasing in popularity at the university, because everyone likes it better than other paper," Dawn said.

She also noted printing services' scrap paper is given to elementary schools for use or made into notepads for university use.
