NKU Dealt Another Budget Blow; No New Science Center

Gov. Brereton Jones delivered more bad news in the area of higher education during last week's State of The Commonwealth Address by announcing additional budget cuts and eliminating NKU's new science building this biennium.

The budget Jones presented during the address is only a proposal. Legislators will meet and discuss areas of the budget and may propose changes before it is passed.

Higher education received a five percent cut during the fall semester of 1991. Jones proposed another five percent be taken out of higher education for the fiscal year 1992.

Jones proposed a three percent increase in the second year of the biennium for higher education.

At press time, NKU officials had not yet met to discuss a plan of how to deal with the additional budget cuts. Vice President for Administration Dennis Taulbee said they (he and other administration) would meet throughout the week to discuss a plan.

"It wasn't unanticipated," Taulbee said. "We were given warning."

"We have no complaints," he added. "We were treated fairly, but it was not good news."

In addition to the budget cuts, NKU will not receive funds for a new Natural Science building during this biennium. This was part of the Council on Higher Education's Capital Projects plan.

Jones stressed in his address there is just no money for new buildings during this biennium.

"It is important to note that the Natural Science building was No. 2 on the list and that the No. 1 item was not funded either," said state Rep. Jim Callahan of Southgate.

The budget request described the current building as lacking proper ventilation, fume hoods, emergency showers and eye wash facilities. The request also states the building has vibration problems.

The current building was the second one built on campus and was not built to be science building, according to the Department of Physics and Geology Chair Michael McPherson.

"Our new building would have been a true science building."

McPherson said the lack of a new building will probably keep the university from offering additional general studies courses.

Mike Moyer, a sophomore biology major, expressed his feelings about the budget cuts.

Reform Bill May Affect NKU Regents

STACEY DURBIN
MANAGING EDITOR

Members of NKU's Board of Regents may find out as soon as this week whether or not their positions are in jeopardy.

It's not because they're doing a bad job, but because of a bill currently being discussed in the state Senate.

The bill, introduced by Ernesto Scorsone, D-Lexington, proposes that regents must vacate their seats by June 30.

A nominating panel appointed by Gov. Brereton Jones and confirmed by the legislature would nominate candidates for the open positions. The governor makes selections based on those candidates. The legislature must then confirm the choices.

All regents may not be affected, however.

Jones told The Kentucky Post he would support an amendment to require the nominating committee to recommend reappointment of 50 percent of current board members. Jones said he could be required to appoint 25 percent of those recommended.

Environment vs. IndustryStudents Battle Kahn's Pipeline Plans

MICHAEL MICHALACK
EDITORIAL ASSISTANT

Students and citizens of Northern Kentucky went to the Campbell County Courthouse in Alexandria last week to protest the state's decision that would allow Kahn's/Hillshire Farms to build a seven-mile waste pipeline directly into the Licking River.

Kahns cools their hot dogs in giant vats of saline solution. What's left over is worthless refuse which is dumped.

Presently Kahns spends thousands of gallons of saline waste into Phillips Creek each day and is unwilling to employ chloride reduction techniques because it is "economically unfeasible," according to speaker Bob Smith.

"The whole of Phillips Creek... has been destroyed," said speaker Bob Smith, representing the League of Kentucky Sportsman. "We have had two major fish kills in Phillips Creek and one in Pond Creek."

"The Licking River must never become another Mill Creek," said Steve Roth of Stop Cross County Highway. "The Kahns pipeline is not the right thing to do. This is not just a directive, it is a moral imperative."

Several speakers discussed various alternatives to dumping raw waste into the waterways.

Reverse osmosis is one such process in which the solution is forced through a semi-permeable membrane and the salts removed. Evaporation was another method mentioned. Such processes are being employed all over the world, especially in countries who have only the sea as a source of water. Massive desalinization plants have been constructed to make the water safe for human consumption.

Presently the water treatment plants in Campbell County are unable to handle such demands.

Also threatened are large freshwater mussel beds which thrive in the Licking River. The mussels are an endangered species and would be jeopardized by the proposed pipeline.

The theory is the extreme dilution that would occur by introducing the waste directly into the Licking River would eliminate the possibility of negative environmental ramifications. Perhaps this is the same theory at Newport Steel where the water's pH is so high that it will eat through the first layer of human skin within minutes. The levels of fecal coliforms, the bacteria in raw sewage, exceeds safety standards more than a hundredfold in some areas of the Licking River. It was noted that when the Ohio River rises, there is often a negative flow into the Licking River. This means that Licking River waste has nowhere to go and instead forms a great cess pool.

The message was loud and clear: "Dilution is not the solution to pollution."

The rally was organized by a group of Campbell County High School students called SAVE - Students Against the Victimization of the Environment.

SAVE has received much media attention in recent months surrounding their activities and the rally. They were apparently successful; several hundred people of

TONY BUCALO

Members of the NKU political science faculty addressed issues surrounding the upcoming presidential race during the Political Primaries and Caucuses Forum held Thurs. Feb. 5, in Landrum Academic Center.

This year's election will depend largely on the state of voter and candidate finances.

According to a recent USA Today/CNN

Gallup poll, Bush's approval rating stood at 47 percent. This is down from his 89 percent rating at the end of the Gulf War.

Due to the emergence of this vulnerability, Political Science Professor Mike Avey said, "The Democrats should focus on the economic issues."

"Americans vote by their pocket book," said Political Science Department Chair Adalberto Pinelo.

He then substantiated that by showing statistics from past elections.

According to Pinelo, when voter's income increased by at least 2.9 percent, the presidential incumbent is re-elected.

According to a recent CNN report, the middle and lower classes have seen a decrease in income over the past decade. Yet over the same period, the upper class of American society has experienced an increase in income.

This set off a debate to determine whose pocket book is more influential.

The middle and lower classes have the majority of votes and the current economy should weigh heavily in their favor at the ballot box. Yet, the upper class finds itself in a better position financially and the flow of campaign dollars could influence some voters.

Pinelo said that banking and funding are more critical to the candidate's agenda.

Avey momentarily put the audience at ease by saying campaigns are funded with public, not private dollars.

That drew a quick response from Frederick Rhynhart. He pointed out that the Willie Horton commercials, which became a factor in the 1988 election, were paid for by an independent organization.

The Horton commercials focused on presidential candidate Michael Dukakis' policy during his tenure as governor of Massachusetts.

Dukakis supported a prison work-release program for that state, which allowed Horton, a convicted felon, to leave prison.

While out of prison on the work-release program, Horton murdered someone.

According to a recent article in The Cincinnati Enquirer, the ads were produced by The National Security PAC, or political action committee, which spent more than $10 million during the 1988 campaign.

Those expenditures were not subject to federal laws limiting campaign spending by candidates because the committee was independent.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton drew strong consensus as the democratic frontrunner due, in large part, to his financial backing.

According to Rhynhart, Clinton is the only candidate with the resources to launch a national campaign.

Ecumenical Campus Ministries: Helping Students Find Religion

KELLY WHALEN
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Most college students are probably most concerned with classes, work and weekends. That doesn't leave much time for religion.

So why does Rev. Stephen Oshman feel that the Ecumenical Campus Ministries (ECM) will be a success at NKU?

"The Ecumenical Campus Ministries included several main line Protestant religions and are supported by churches that are unable to support their own ministries," he said.

Oshman said this allows a student to be involved in religion but not be limited to one denomination.

ECM has been on campus for four years but they do not have a house. All of their activities, such as brown bag luncheon discussions, are frequently held on campus at about 12 p.m. in the University Center.

He said this ministry tries to deal with topical subjects, such as the Thomas - Hill hearings, abortion and the death penalty.

Oshman describes himself as a religious liberal, which he said he feels is rare today. Even though this country was started by liberals who wanted religious freedom, he said he feels now most liberals aren't religious.

ECM would like to provide an atmosphere where a liberal view, as well as other points of view, can be expressed and respected, he said.

ECM also helps students find a church they feel comfortable with.

Most churches don't understand that a 20-year-old isn't going to get up early every Sunday morning to go to church after having partied late the night before. That doesn't mean the student is any less religious, he said it just means that it doesn't fit into his or her present lifestyle.

Dixiana Smith served as nursing department chair from 1967 to 1978. She passed away Dec. 1.

Smith was a graduate of the University of Cincinnati and Columbia University Teachers College. She taught at U.C. before coming to NKU.

She was active in the Arthritis Association and served on the Visiting Nurses Association Board, later known as United Home Care.

Smith loved dogs, cooking, opera and reading Agatha Christie and Robin Cook novels.

"She had a taste for the finer things in life such as caviar, plays and symphony," said Mary Buckman, current chair of the nursing department.

Buckman gave the welcome at a Jan. 27 memorial service in the University Center Theatre. There was a moment of silence followed by a scripture reading by campus minister Sister Janet Carr.

Several friends and faculty paid tribute to Smith. The service ended with the singing of "Amazing Grace," led by voice major Elizabeth Beierdorfer.

Memorials may be made to the Shriner's Institute for Crippled Children.

all ages were in attendance, many of whom were welding multicolored pro-environment and anti-Kahns posters. Passing traffic honked their support.

The magnitude of this issue in the minds of local citizens was evident. "This is the first time un Campbell County's 198 year history that the common people have assembled at this courthouse to give a directive to our business and government leaders," stated Steve Roth.

A huge tax break was given to Kahns when they first came to Campbell County years ago. Many promises were made by Kahns such as hiring 90% of the workforce from within the county. Kahns has failed to live up to their promises and the citizens of Campbell County are angry.

After the rally was over, many voices could be heard echoing a collective satisfaction that an important step had been taken towards public awareness and further action.

"I saw overwhelming support from a high school and adult level. I was surprised at the apathy at the college level," commented one rally-goer.

The ultimate success of the rally will be measured in the courtroom in months to come and at the polls during election time.

A Paradox For Resident Assistants

Leaders Need To Practice What They Preach

KELLI MILLIGAN
COPY EDITOR

A student is put into a position where he or she is supposed to (among other things) encourage students, especially incoming freshman and transfer students, to participate in university organizations.

This person is automatically a role model and the students he or she is guiding look up to this person as an example to follow.

However, this person can't actively show them by example because the very organizations he or she is promoting membership to are prohibited because of the job he or she must perform.

What is this job? Residential assistant (R.A.) for the existing residence halls and the apartments to be completed this summer.

I, for one, was very excited when residential life held its group sessions on what it took to be an R.A. I knew it would mean a lot of work, but I thought if I could budget my time properly, I might be able to pull it off. I could take 15 hours, work for The Northerner, be active in my sorority and be an R.A.

OK, maybe I wouldn't have pulled it off, but because of the qualifications for being a residential assistant, I won't even get a chance to try.

The assistant director for residential life said that being an R.A. is a 20 hour a week job and I don't doubt that. Between paper work, programs, desk hours and dealing with minor and major crises, I'm sure a great amount of time is used up.

I also understand that a student is not supposed to have over 20 hours a week of on campus work, financial aid wise that makes perfect sense. The line has to be drawn somewhere.

However, women who were applying for the R.A. position were encouraged not to go through fall sorority rush because it conflicted with R.A. training. Just how it conflicts, I don't have a clue. Rush is in the evening and training is during the day.

I was disappointed because I did not want to have to choose between sorority, the newspaper and R.A. I don't understand why I can't do all three and still keep my G.P.A. above a 3.0. I would have liked to be given the opportunity to at least try.

I don't know what a solution to this problem might be. All I know is that being an R.A. can make it impossible to become involved in something you may be interested in.

It's not fair to be asked to cease other enjoyed campus affiliations because of this job. Professional business people do both time consuming jobs and extracurricular activities all the time. Who would be in the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club and many others if business people didn't carry the brunt of the tasks that need to be performed.

Unfortunately, there really isn't anyone to blame. This issue would be much easier to gripe about if there were.

Residential life wants to find the best people to do the job that needs to be done in the residence halls. The university can only award so many stipends, especially with state budget cuts coming at NKU and the rest of Kentucky higher education.

What we need is a compromise. Maybe we need to change some of the rules or find a way to make a few exceptions.

I know if I was an R.A. I wouldn't want to talk about The Northerner in past tense or talk about a sorority rush I had taken no part in. Leaders show the best example by doing, not by sitting back and watching. Because of the strict guidelines for being an R.A., it is all but impossible to practice the participation you preach.

Hey Students: Buckling Up Can Save Lives

REBECCA MARTIN
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

I recently conducted a non-scientific, random survey on campus dealing with students' attitude toward seatbelts. Seventy students took part in the survey. Almost half of all surveyed, 46 percent, do not always wear their seatbelts. I applaud those who do always wear their seatbelts.

The problem is that if the pattern found in the survey remained constant throughout campus, almost 5,000 students could be putting their lives in danger by not wearing a seatbelt. Furthermore, if the numbers were representative of the state, thousands could be risking their lives.

According to The American Statistical Institute, automobile accidents in 1989 took the lives of 772 Kentuckians. If any of the 772 could have been saved by wearing a seatbelt, would it be worth wearing a seatbelt? Some members of the Kentucky General Assembly are pondering this same question.

The Kentucky Post reported on Jan. 31 that Kentucky Representative Mike Ward is sponsoring a mandatory seatbelt bill. Ward and House Speaker Don Blandford said they will support the bill.

Many of us hear of an accident and think it could never happen to us. I know this way of thinking because at one time it was my way of thinking. The truth is accidents are accidents and they can happen to anyone.

In July 1989, the Ohio State Patrol filed an accident report about the driver of a truck that had rolled and landed in a ditch. The driver could have been killed had he not been wearing his seatbelt. This accident changed my views on seatbelts because a short time later my family was informed that my brother had been involved in this accident.

I know accidents do happen and if they can happen to someone close to you then one could happen to you. I hope that by reading this, people will realize that anyone can be involved in an accident and more people will wear their seatbelts.

The next time you get into an automobile, remember that the next accident could involve you. I strongly urge all to buckle their seatbelts—if not for yourself, then for someone you love.

NKU Play Takes Audience Back In Time To Tell Story

NKU's theater department will fill the stage with comedy in its presentation of the late 18th century backwoods tale "The Robber Bride Groom."

The play, which takes place in the small town of Rodney, Miss., is based on a novella by Eudora Welty.

Director Joe Conger said the play is energetic and fast.

"One character is like Zorro with a secret life as a robber and a bandit," Conger said.

The play is divided into two acts and is performed by a cast of 26 students.

"It's a play within a play," said Monica Heuser, who plays Rosamund.

"We come out in 1992 style clothing and begin to sing and tell the stories of our ancestors. As we do, we change costumes and actually become our ancestors. We re-enact how their lives were."

Conger said this play is unique because, unlike most plays, it was not originally written for Broadway.

"It was originally written for Juliard students, one of whom was Kevin Kline," Conger said. "Then because of its surprising success it was performed on Broadway with Barry Boswick."

"The Robber Bride Groom" will be performed on the Main Stage Feb. 20-23 and Feb. 25-29 at 8 p.m. Matinee showings will be on Feb. 23 and March 1 at 3 p.m.

What Is So Special About Celebrating Valentine's Day?

KELLI MILLIGAN
COPY EDITOR

Did Hallmark Card Co. create Valentine's Day? No, though it is rumored that the company did begin October's Sweetest Day, it didn't start the valentine tradition.

So, who or what founded the day? The jury is still out on that one.

The Roman history of martyrs said St. Valentine's Day was named for two saints in the early Christian Church who were martyred on that day.

Some people traced it to a Roman festival called Lupercalia (held on Feb. 15), which is linked to Valentine's Day because of the similar date and a ritual Roman women went through to become more fertile.

However, the earliest records of the day in English told that birds choose their mates on that day.

Geoffrey Chaucer, an English poet of the 1300s, wrote "For this was on St. Valentine's Day, / when every fowl cometh there to choose his mate," in The Parliament of Fowls. Shakespeare made similar references to Valentine's Day in Both A Midsummer Night's Dream and Hamlet.

Now we're getting somewhere.

It is thought that people in England probably started celebrating the romantic aspect of St. Valentine's Day as early as the 1400s.

One of the earliest customs was the practice of writing women's names on slips of paper, the men would choose a name and that woman would be his valentine. Then (and this is the best part, ladies) for several days the man would wear his valentine's name on his sleeve. This is probably where the saying 'wearing his heart on his sleeve' came from.

In America, it has been a tradition to exchange cards, flowers, candies and the like on Valentine's Day with friends, family and sweethearts. It's a different story in Europe.

In England, children sing special valentine songs and receive gifts of candy, fruit or money. Also in England, and in Italy, some unmarried women get up before sunrise on Valentine's Day and wait by their windows, sometimes for hours, for a man to come along. They believe that the first man that passes by will be the man they will marry within a year. (How about that one gentlemen?)

But, we are living in 1992 Midwest America and men aren't going to start wearing names on their sleeves and women aren't going to wait for their 'knight in shining armor' to pass under their window.

Then again, the cards, flowers and candies routine can seem a bit boring to some, though charmingly traditional and romantic to others.

However, if you do want a break from the norm, USA Today offers a few nice suggestions.

First of all, if you are dating someone but not necessarily on the road to the big

'C' word (commitment, for those who need an explanation), you could buy that other person a gift certificate for a treat they wouldn't normally purchase for themselves. For example, he could buy her one for a facial or manicure and she could buy him one for a massage.

Second, you could rent a favorite movie of his or her choice, grab some microwave popcorn and have a movie fest.

Now, if you and your significant other are on the road to white dresses, tuxedos and baby carriages, you could go a couple of steps further.

You could arrange for a limousine to take your beloved to and from work or school for the day, or have it take you both to a romantic restaurant for dinner. Also, you could surprise him or her with tickets to a big sporting or theatrical event that has been sighed over frequently in the last few weeks.

So, for whatever reason we celebrate Valentine's Day, it is a special day and has been for centuries. Make it unforgettable for someone you love.

Flashback To The Past

Homecoming Celebration Brings Northern Back To The Past

LORI WILSON
STAFF WRITER

Another homecoming has come and gone and this year's "Flashback to the Past" theme was another big success for the Activities Programming Board, according to Adviser Mary Chesnut.

"This year's... homecoming week has been a big success and a variety of fun for all," said Chesnut.

"The APB, the Student Activities Office and the Homecoming Committee, which consists of representatives from several campus organizations, are all responsible for the exciting events."

The week's schedule included photobooths, tie-dyeing, magazine cover photos, the Star Trax Recording Booth, a Presidential Tea, the annual dance and a Banner Blast.

The week ended Saturday with the men's and women's basketball game victories against St. Joseph College and the King and Queen Coronation during halftime of the men's game.

David Stringer and Amy Arbino were crowned 1992 Homecoming King and Queen in front of a large crowd of students, faculty/staff and community. Students seemed to enjoy the week's events, especially the recording booth, where ordinary students could make an actual tape.

"The Star Trax Recording Booth is definitely a major highlight and biggest turnout of the week's events," said senior Amy Arbino.

"It's fun to watch everyone try to sing and be a star," added junior Rich King.

A number of students were drawn to an event pertaining to the week's theme: tie-dyeing.

"This was particularly special because we saw a mixture of faculty, staff, and both traditional and non-traditional students involved," said Chesnut.

"It was neat to hear the non-traditional students talk about how they used to do this all the time in the '70s," said Arbino. "Some even made their own shirts."

A Flashback At Northern Through The Years

From Northern Kentucky State Community College to NKU

Highland Heights Ground Breaking

Reprint from The Northerner - April 1971

A little lady smiled and waved; an old man signaled, "Peace"; children shouted with excitement and wonder.

A caravan of almost 200 cars proceeded from Northern Kentucky State College to the new Highland Heights site for ground-breaking ceremonies, March 31.

Winding its way through Covington, Newport, Fort Thomas and finally Highland Heights, Northern Kentucky State College students' crepe-paper laden caravan reached the new site of Northern at 2636 Alexandria Pike and joined the ground-breaking ceremonies already in progress.

There, they were treated to performances by nine local high school bands and the A Capella Choir of NKSC, singing the school Alma Mater under the direction of Robert Knaut.

Henry E. Pogue, president of Northern Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the Governor and local dignitaries, and introduced the first speaker of the occasion--Dr. Frank W. Steely, president of NKSC.

Steely reminded the over 2,500 well-wishers gathered on the lawn of the Pompilio house that the dedication of NKSC was "a once in lifetime event" and that, "it has been almost 50 years since a senior state college was founded in Kentucky."

He called for "a rebirth of reason" for the embryonic college and avoidance of what he termed "the froth and gobbledygook of education."

Emphasizing NKSC has symbolized a powerful force destined to unify Northern Kentucky, Steely introduced Governor Nunn when, "Governor, today you are among friends."

Governor Nunn also stressed Northern as a "unifying element" and added that he envisioned it (the college) as a cohesive nucleus for Northern Kentucky.

Campus Hit With Budget Cuts

Reprint from The Northerner - Nov. 27, 1967

As of Nov. 3, the expenditure budget of the Commonwealth of Kentucky was cut by $24.1 million. The University of Kentucky, including the Community College system, share of the reduction is $3.6 million.

An emergency meeting was held on the Lexington campus at which all the vice-presidents, deans and directors of major University functions. At the meeting all were directed to take immediate and temporary steps. These steps are: (1) All unfilled positions are to be held in abeyance. (2) All equipment orders including library books, are to be held (600 accounts) (3) All recruitment is to be stopped. (4) Current budgets (300 accounts) are to be cut 10 percent. Although this action has been taken, Mr. Hauselman assured that all salaries would be met in full.

Various activities around UKNCC will feel the pinch of this budget reduction. For instance, Mr. Helwig's speech and drama club will have to wait for new appropriations.

Northern Can Finish Campus

Reprint from The Northerner - Sept. 8, 1978

"I pledged...I would insure the facility problems will be addressed. Northern now has the ability, as a result of this budget to complete its campus," stated Gov. Julian Carroll in his budget address on Jan. 17, 1978.

Presently, Northern's projects include the Business, Education and Psychology (BEP) Building, located between the University Center and the Fine Arts Building, now in the final stages of excavation phase and a tunnel extension which will lead from the University Center to the proposed Administration Building. The tunnel is also in the excavation phase and the Administration Building itself is in the final stage of design, explained Gary Eith, assistant to the Administrative Vice President.

Next year, ground will be broken for a physical education facility adjacent to Regents Hall. The $9 million project, designed by Newport architect Edward Beiting, will include a swimming pool, handball courts, an indoor running track and classrooms for allied health professions.

The BEP Building, which when complete will be the largest building on campus, is a $7.3 million project and will house the human services and special services programs now located on the second floor of Nunn Hall. In addition, it will contain a 500-seat media auditorium.

The Administration Building will house the remainder of the Nunn offices and facilities to leave Nunn Hall free for the Law Center now at Chase Law School in Covington. The need for the Administration Building's completion is further understood when it is considered that future renewal of accreditation by the American Bar Association for the Law Center on its move to Nunn, according to Eith.

NKU Gets Loan For Dormitories

Reprint from The Northerner - Oct. 6, 1978

In a Monday morning announcement, NKU President A.D. Albright confirmed Northern has received a $4.7 million Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant enabling the university to build three dormitories.

Albright said the dorms, which will house about 400 students, could be completed as early as the spring of 1981.

"This means that the University now can escape the label of a 'community college' and is, in fact, truly a university," said John P. DeMarcus, vice-president of administrative affairs.

Northern was ranked 13 on HUD's priority list among 203 applicants for housing funds, Albright said. Only 25 universities were granted loans.

DeMarcus told the Northerner that NKU was one of only two schools in Kentucky to be awarded the low-interest federal loan. The University of Kentucky was also given a $4.3 million grant.

"NKU received the largest loan in the U.S. It is the maximum we could have requested under HUD guidelines," DeMarcus said.

Details of the dormitories are now sketchy, but current blue prints show them to be three story "low rise" units constructed of wood and masonry. Each of the three buildings will house approximately 140 students.

Pointing to the necessity of dormitories DeMarcus said, "It will enable the university to better serve the needs of all the people, specifically the underprivileged, foreign students, and those in the outlying counties or others including the handicapped who have difficulty with transportation problems."

Anti-Hazing Founder To Speak At Northern

ANGELA EDWARDS
STAFF WRITER

Eileen Stevens, founder of the Committee to Halt Useless College Killings, knows first-hand the abuses of hazing.

CHUCK, Stevens' non-profit organization, is also the name of her son, who was killed during a fraternity hazing incident at New York University.

Stevens since has waged a national campaign to eliminate physical and mental hazing practices and to ensure the safety of students.

Stevens' message is not anti-fraternity-only anti-hazing. NKU fraternities and sororities all follow anti-hazing policies.

"We educate our pledges on hazing," said Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity President Nathan Smith.

"We have a long session in our pledge program on what hazing is and what to do if someone hazes you."

Smith also said that the fraternity established a special board to deter hazing.

"Anyone accused of hazing must go before our court."

If the fraternity board finds the member guilty he receives certain penalties, said Smith. The penalties could include a semester of no parties, no alcohol or even expulsion.

Theta Phi Alpha Sorority President Kelly Whalen said she believes hazing has hurt the reputation of the Greek system.

"I'm afraid people will think if they want to join a sorority that they will have to go through a lot of hazing," Whalen said. "That's just not how it is anymore. We never degrade a pledge."

Stevens has lectured at more than 500 college campuses nationwide and has lobbied for state anti-hazing laws.

She has received numerous recognitions by the Greek system for her efforts.

The University of Southern California established the Eileen Stevens Award which is presented annually to the fraternity and sorority with the most outstanding pledge program.

The New York Daily News named Stevens as their 1983 Woman of the Year. The Red Cross presented her with the Clara Barton Humanitarian Award. She is also listed in the 1988 edition of "Who's Who in America."

Stevens will speak here on Wed. March 4 at 8 p.m. in the University Center Theater.

Lady Norse Down Sixth Ranked St. Joseph's

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

After being down by seven points early in the first half to St. Joseph's College last Saturday, NKU coach Nancy Winstel thought it was time for a defensive change.

"We always felt we could press them, but fouls and our (lack of) depth has always been a question mark for us," Winstel said. "We felt like we could, but we weren't sure we were going to."

But when the Lady Pumas jumped out to an 12-5 lead four and a half minutes into the game NKU had to try something.

"We had to let them know that we were ready to play," Winstel said.

St. Joseph's entered the game with a perfect 19-0 record and ranked sixth in the nation. The Lady Pumas were also 10-0 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference with a two-game lead over closest competitors NKU and Indiana University/Purdue University-Ft. Wayne.

However, the Lady Norse entered the game with a nine game winning streak of their own and ranked 14th in the country. The last time NKU lost was to St. Joseph's 79-71 on Jan. 9.

Once the Lady Norse went to their full-court press defense, they began to get back in the game.

NKU capitalized on St. Joseph's turnovers to pull even with the Lady Pumas.

Junior guard Lori McClellan tied the game at 12 at the 13:48 mark of the first half and the Lady Norse never looked back.

The Lady Norse won the game 75-67 handing St. Joseph's its first loss in its last 23 games, going back to last season.

NKU built an 18 point lead with 12 minutes to go in the game, but the Lady Pumas went to a full-court press of their own to try and get back in the game.

St. Joseph's pulled with in four points with five minutes to go, but that was as close as the game got.

"Their press didn't cause us to turn the ball over, it's just that we took our time, we didn't attack it (the press), and set up our offense," Winstel said.

"They got into the bonus very early and I think their free-throw shooting got them back into the game almost as much as anything else did."

St. Joseph's was in the bonus for the last 10 minutes of the game.

NKU forced the Lady Pumas to turn the ball over 32 times in the game. NKU committed only 17 turnovers.

Amy Middleton led NKU with 19 points. McClellan added 16 points for the Lady Norse.

NKU's victory coupled with Kentucky Wesleyan's win over IPFW put the Lady Norse in sole possession of second place in the GLVC.

Schrand Steps In For Norse

BRIAN BALLMAN
STAFF WRITER

Ryan Schrand is making the transition to college basketball.

Schrand, a 5-foot-11 freshman guard, was one of Cincinnati's leading scorers last year at LaSalle High School, averaging 25.5 points a game.

So far this season he is making his mark at NKU.

Schrand is averaging just over 10 points a game and is one of the top three-point shooters in the Great Lakes Valley Conference. He is currently fourth in the conference hitting 47 percent of his attempts from three-point range.

He says that although he didn't expect to make as big of an impact as he has in his first year, once he was given the opportunity he was not going to give it up.

"My chance came against Lewis in the beginning of the season and I just stepped in and did my job," Schrand said. "Since then I guess I've been doing all right."

The highlight of Schrand's season came just two weeks ago in a loss to Indiana University/Purdue University-Ft. Wayne. He scored a career-high 27 points that night, the most points scored by a freshman at NKU since Derek Fields scored 30 in 1986.

On a team that is dominated by juniors and seniors, Schrand has developed into its most consistent outside shooter.

The confidence he has in his shot makes Schrand want to take the big shot at the end of the game. Twice this season he has had chances to tie games with last second shots but has missed on both attempts.

"Even though I'm a freshman I still like taking it," Schrand said. "I had one to tie the game at St. Joseph's and against Georgetown and I missed them both, so I have to redeem myself if I ever get the chance again."

Schrand said that because he wasn't recruited by many colleges coming out of high school because of his size, he is satisfied to be playing at NKU.

Despite his shooting abilities, Schrand says he still is a long way from being a complete player.

"Defensively I've got to get a lot better because the people I'm guarding are so much more athletic and bigger than me," Schrand said.

Off the court Schrand is an excellent student. He was recently named to the 1992 NKU/Star Bank All-Academic Team.

Svoboda Leads Norse Past St. Joseph's

ROCKY TYE STAFF WRITER

This year's homecoming theme was "Flashback to the Past," but flashing back to the last time NKU played St. Joseph's was the last thing the Norsemen wanted to do in last Saturday's homecoming game.

The last time NKU played St. Joseph's the Norsemen blew a 17 point halftime lead and lost in overtime 95-90.

And even with that in mind, the Norsemen showed signs of the past when they allowed a 10 point lead with three minutes to go in the first half dwindle to one point five minutes into the second half. But six consecutive points by junior Greg Phelia put NKU up by seven and kept the Norsemen up for good.

NKU used tough defense and key free throw shooting down the stretch to pull out an 80-70.

"Our defense and intensity were the keys to the victory," senior guard Nick Pangallo said. "They came into the game with the best defensive average in the conference, and we came into the game ranked 10th in the conference in defense."

In holding St. Joseph's to 70 points, NKU gave up its fewest number of points this season.

Six-foot-eight junior center Todd Svoboda had another strong performance leading the Norse in both scoring, 21 points, and rebounding, 12.

"Todd had his second consecutive great game," NKU coach Ken Shields said.

After trailing by one point with 16 minutes to go in the first half, NKU took the lead on a layup by David Marshall and never relinquished the lead.

St. Joseph's made a late run at the Norsemen and cut NKU's lead to two at 62-60 with five minutes left to go in the game.

But NKU responded by hitting 13 of 14 free throws in the final minutes to seal the victory.

St. Joseph's was lead by Kevin McGuff's 14 points. Mark Scheidler added 13 points and Mike Kosky added 12 points and 10 rebounds.

In addition to Svoboda's 21 points, Phelia added 15 points.

With the victory NKU improves to 10-10, and 6-5 in the GLVC.

Norse Notes

• After his 21 point performance against St. Joseph's, junior center Todd Svoboda only needs 33 points to surpass the 1,000 point mark for his career. Svoboda is also within 132 rebounds of becoming the all-time NKU leader for that category.

• Senior Nick Pangallo is eighth on the all-time NKU assist list with 254.

• Junior guard Craig Wilhoit is ninth on the assists list with 241.

• The Norsemen travel to Southern Indiana on Thursday and Kentucky Wesleyan on Saturday.

• Senior David Marshall currently has 849 points in his career at NKU and could score 1,000 points if he averages 19 points a game in the team's last eight games.

Mr. Thoughtful

3 smart ways to help pay for college.

Here's how the Army Reserve Alternate Training Program can help you pay for college.

If qualified, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $5,040 for current college expenses.

If you obtain a qualifying student loan, you can get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $500, whichever is greater - up to a maximum of $10,000. Selecting certain specialty training can result in a $20,000 maximum.

And here's how you can make even more part-time money while in college. Take Basic Training one summer. The next summer, complete skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $1,250 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll train with your Army Reserve unit near college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll earn over $85 a weekend to start.

Think about it. Then think about us. Then call us today:

There in lies the problem for some NKU regents.

"The more he (Jones) talks about the bill to take it out of politics, the more he talks about . . . more politicians being involved," said NKU Regent Charles Lester.

Lester and other regents from NKU and across the state late last month attended a briefing at the Governor's Mansion to discuss the new bill.

The regents discussed the briefing at January's Board of Regents meeting.

Lester said Jones wasn't helpful about answering regents' questions.

"Somebody asked him yesterday (at the briefing), 'Now why do you say it's going to be non-political? Would the involvement of 138 other politicians make it any more non-political?' (Jones gave) No answer."

That's not the only problem regents found with the bill.

"How can you assure me it's not political?" asked NKU Regent David R. Duncan Jr.

"There must be some kind of plum there that makes it so important to be on the Board of Regents and Board of Trustees at various universities other than trying to help the university, because that's what I'm trying to do."

Legislators have mixed views on the bill.

"I am 100 percent opposed to it," said Arthur Schmidt, R-Cold Spring.

Schmidt also said the bill could discourage qualified and willing people in the community from submitting their names for fear of rejection.

On the flip side, Joseph Meyer, D-Covington, said he has no problem with the bill and said higher education needs a break from the past.

"We have needed a nomination process for a long time."

Meyer said even though most board members care about the institution in which they were appointed to serve, there are a few board members who are only serving for the prestige of being on the board.

Editor's Note: News Editor Michael Bunzel contributed to this story.

"I personally think that nobody's getting anything and that we're all getting, well, you know."

"Obviously I think higher education will have the biggest hit as related to the total cut," said Callahan.

The plan Jones approved for the University of Kentucky's library was money collected by private funds and none of it came from the state, according to Callahan. The university needed Jones' approval to go ahead with their plans.

Callahan said he will prioritize design plans for Northern's Science building for the next biennium.

NKU was awarded a new ceramics building. This was one of NKU's priorities for this biennium because the current ceramics building does not meet safety regulations.

Jones also set aside $1 million for design of a $25 million Northern Kentucky Convention Center in Covington. University officials decided to drop plans of a convocation center and back plans for Covington's convention center because administrators felt both plans would not be approved.

"Medicine Man" from pg.6

unlock the mystery is a tribal medicine man. But Campbell had driven him out of the village in humiliation with the "magical" Alka Seltzer.

It then becomes a race against time to find the proper formula before lumber companies reach the area.

Bulldozers uproot the rainforest around the clock, as civilization edges closer to the Indian village where Campbell and Crane's outpost is located.

Dynamic film angles and precious scenery showcase the film style of Director John McTiernan ("The Hunt for Red October" and "Die Hard").

McTiernan said he would have liked to film the movie in the same area he shot the movie "Predator." But, as McTiernan said in a recent press release, "The places are not there anymore. There's no jungle left and that was only five years ago. The world has gotten smaller."

The environmentally based drama ultimately pits the progress of man against the progress of man.

It's a good movie that showcases two of today's hottest topics: the environment and the search to cure cancer. "Medicine Man" is worth the price the admission.
