Students May Be Paying More Up Front

Proposed Changes In Payment Plan

KAREN MCGLONE
STAFF WRITER

A proposed change in NKU's Tuition Installment Payment Plan (TIPP) could help reduce the $80,000 in bad debt expenses still outstanding from the fall of 1991.

Currently, students attending NKU in the TIPP are required to pay one-third of their tuition and fees (including a $30 application/processing fee) at the time of registration with the remaining two-thirds spread over two other payments.

According to Michael Baker, assistant vice president of Business Affairs at NKU, the proposed change in the 1992 fall tuition installment plan would require students to pay 50 percent of tuition and fees at the time of registration with the remaining 50 percent due in two equal installments, 30 and 60 days after classes have started.

"We look at this plan every year," Baker said. "We believe that good business decisions include looking at the needs of the consumers."

The "consumers" Baker refers to are the students at NKU.

The "good business decisions" are the proposed changes that will affect students participating in the TIPP because some students do not adhere to the university's 50 percent refund policy.

According to Baker, 3,057 students during the 1991 fall semester and 2,737 students during the 1992 semester have used or are now using the TIPP to attend NKU.

During fall 1990 and spring 1991, $41,439 was outstanding in bad debt expenses in the TIPP. Even though these bad debts have been turned over to a collection agency, there is still $78,302 in bad debt expenses outstanding from the fall of 1991. Baker said that these debts will be turned over to a collection agency this month.

Under the TIPP policy now in effect, students who officially withdraw from

Dating 101 Explores Gender Usage & Date Rape

LARA KALLMEYER
STAFF WRITER

The definition of "slut" and "stud" are assigned by today's society.

"Men who are considered studs are looked up to in this society, even envied," said philosophy professor Beth Perkins.

"If a woman is labeled a slut, she is looked down upon as a whore," Perkins said.

That was to be the focus of last week's first Dating 101 lecture, sponsored by the Women's Center.

When Perkins spoke in front of about 100 students in the UC Theater, her lecture did not focus on gender usage and language, she spoke about a separate issue - date rape.

Perkins told the students that children and men are raped as well as women.

"We have a lot of information about women who are raped and almost no information about men who are raped," she said.

Perkins, therefore, had to focus her lecture on a woman's point of view.

Perkins said our perception of gender is based on how we were brought up in society.

"We live in a culture that teaches us about sex, about what it means to be a man (and) about what it means to be a woman."

Men and women learn they are different from birth. Men and women learn that authority figures are predominantly men and masculinity has a higher value than femininity, according to Perkins.

Men learn to be the aggressor or pursuer, whereas women learn to be passive, she said.

Perkins explained that a man/woman relationship needs to begin with friendship.

"Dating in this culture is absolutely backwards," Perkins said.

A couple needs to become friends and learn about each other before they become sexually active, she said.

Perkins said neither women nor men should ever have sex forced on them.

She said the problem lies in communication and asked whether "no" means no, or whether "no" means try harder or a different approach.

"Everyone is confused," Perkins said.

Men and women need to clarify what they want or expect out of a relationship and the confusion will disappear, she said.

"Seventy-five percent of all rapes occur between two people who know each other," said Perkins.

Perkins said most of the time the victims blame themselves for the incident and are afraid to report the rape because others may blame them as well.

"That's what happens to the victim - you become afraid. Your sense of basic trust is taken away from you. Your basic feeling of safety has been taken away from you," she said.

Perkins said a victim is terrorized and this terrorism defines their entire existence.

"It takes away our freedom, I can't identify a potential rapist," she said.

Perkins said the only way to make the pain of rape go away is to report it, talk about it and become educated on preventing it.

"We have to move to the point where we can accept what has happened to us."

Perkins offered suggestions for finding a purpose, acceptance of what has happened, and alleviation of fear and guilt. She also suggested helping those who have been raped by being compassionate.

"Strong is what we make each other," said Perkins.

Amy Pohlgeers, a junior at NKU, attended the lecture.

"I thought it was a good learning experience," said Pohlgeers.

The Strategic Planning for Rape Prevention Task Force was introduced to NKU this year.

"We have the support of a lot of different offices," said Katherine Meyer, director of the Women's Center. "We deal sensitively with issues when students want to report it."

The task force is developing programs for the residence halls and student organizations to educate students on rape prevention, Meyer said.

Examining Consensual Relations

KELLI MILLIGAN
COPY EDITOR

"Can men and women have consensual sexual relationships?" Speaker Clark Goslee from St. Elizabeth Hospital attempted to answer this question Thursday, Feb. 13 in the UC Theater.

Goslee said he stressed that "we are members of a single species and not members of the opposite sex."

The word 'opposite' is the root of what is wrong, according to Goslee.

"The differences (between men and women) become conditions," he said.

Instead of concentrating on the differences, Goslee concentrated on what he said were "human qualities."

Some of these human qualities include making everything universal for men and women and treating men and women unconditionally, he said.

Goslee said that from birth conditioning between men and women starts.

"Boys and girls learn that 'boys are the best' and that girls can cry more than boys because they're girls," he said. "The boys are called 'cry babies.'"

When it comes to dealing with sex, Goslee said that for some men sex is a compulsive act.

"It's goal oriented, self-centered, manipulative and done to prove manhood," he said. "It's not with consent, it's rape."

He then said that women are intimidated by men because of conditioning.

Today, he said, there is a pressure on men to act non-sexist because of the renewed awareness of sexual harassment.

Men have to learn to relate to others and become more aware of who they are

New Organization Allows Students To Give To The Community

STAFF REPORT

A new organization is forming at NKU. The group is called Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity.

Membership is open to all students, regardless of membership in other organizations.

The purpose of the group is to do community service, develop leadership and promote friendship among college students. The group recently planned and participated in renovating a Cincinnati food and clothing center operated by Common Ground Ministries.

The group also plans to participate in the Boy Scouts' food and clothing drive, and Spring campus clean up.

In addition to students, the organization needs three advisors from the university staff or faculty.

Interested students can contact Mike Schrader at 922-8985 or Jason Howard at 341-2347. Or, students can leave their name in the Student Activities office.

The group usually meets at noon on Wednesdays in the University Center.

Alcohol Awareness Week Begins Next Week

STAFF REPORT

Student Government will present Alcohol Awareness Week during the week of Feb. 24-28.

Student organizations and individuals can participate in a number of activities that week including a poster contest and saloon mocktail competition.

Any organization wishing to participate in the mocktail competition can pick up a registration form in the SG office, University Center, suite 208.

Students interested in participating in the poster contest must follow specific rules. Posters must be approximately 20" X 30" and must be received by Feb. 24. Entries must have a theme showing the consequences of poor choices from alcohol abuse.

All entries must be received by 4:30 p.m. Feb. 24 in the Campus Health office, U.C. 300.

Entries will be judged on creative ability and interpretation of theme.

inside, he said.

Goslee said that he became involved in "men's liberation" after he went to a counseling class. He said he realized that consensual sexual relationships "didn't seem to make much sense."

"I became aware of sexism by having a daughter," he said.

He said he thinks women are more aware of who they are on the inside and that men need to work on finding out who they "really are."

Also, because of the court cases involving Mike Tyson, William Kennedy Smith and Clarence Thomas, people have a heightened awareness of sexual harassment, but not so much on a personal level but on a legal level.

"It makes people look a little bit deeper," he said. "There's a lot of fear and concern."

CORRECTION: Due to editing mistakes, last week's story entitled "Student's Battle Kahn's Pipeline Plans" contained a number of unattributed paragraphs. The story should have read:

According to speaker Bob Smith, "(Kahn's) A company that was supposed to hire 90 percent of its employees from this (Campbell) county, a company that was given 20 years total tax abatement by our fiscal court as an incentive to locate here. A $350,000 extended waste water treatment plant was built with federal funds . . . expressly to handle the waste stream from Kahn's."

The promise to hire 90 percent of their workforce was not kept, according to Smith. "Of about 400 employees it is estimated between 50 - 75 percent reside in Campbell County," Smith said.

The statements made concerning the current pollution levels in the Licking River, specifically the fecal bacteria and pH near Newport Steel were from a 1990 Earth Day article in The Kentucky Post; the data was provided by the state.

Attempts by The Northerner to contact Kahn's were unsuccessful.

We sincerely apologize for any confusion this article may have caused.

NKU after the last day of registration, but before the last day to drop without a grade appearing on record, are entitled to a 50 percent refund of the total tuition and fees charged.

However, those students who have entered into the one-third up front payment plan and then drop out of school during the 50 percent refund period do not make the additional 17 percent payment as agreed to in the plan. Because these students default on the additional 17 percent, those students who do pay their tuition at the time of registration and then withdraw during the 50 percent refund period are being penalized.

By requiring the additional 17 percent in the first installment of the plan (from 33 percent to 50 percent), NKU hopes to bring into accord the TIPP policy and the tuition refund policy for those students who have made full payment.

"Up front, it has an affect on those (TIPP) students," Dean of Students Bill Lamb said. "So many of our students come here on a shoestring."

"On the other hand, the plan is still a tremendous advantage to students. It was pointed out at the Student Government meeting that most other institutions in our area don't have this plan available (to their students)."

Research conducted by NKU's Bursar Office found that NKU and Murray State University might be the only universities in the Kentucky area that offer tuition installment payment plans to their students.

Students who enroll in most other area universities and cannot afford the full tuition payment or do not qualify for financial aid, must seek assistance from an outside lending institution to pay the full tuition at the start of the semester.

"Most of our students couldn't afford to do that," Lamb said.

"Some members of SG felt it was needed, but some felt it would keep some of our out-of-state students from coming to Northern because of the amount of money those students who have to pay up front," said SG's Secretary of External Affairs Rachel Klink. "Students should bring their comments to SG. They will be looked at very carefully by Dave Stringer (SG president and student representative)."

It's Money That Matters

What Happened To Putting Students First?

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

This university does so many stupid things to keep students away. Now, someone in the administration got the idea that fewer people would actually use the tuition installment plan if students had to pay half of their tuition in the first installment.

The university has wanted fewer people to use this plan for at least a year. Last year when they raised the cost of using it, administrators justified the increase by stating this would keep fewer students from using it.

They actually expect students, most of whom are not on financial aid, to come up with half of their tuition up front. I think some of the people making these decisions have too soon forgotten their own college days.

This will keep fewer people from using the plan - that's for certain. But, it will also keep students, especially non-traditionals and those out-of-state, from returning to Northern.

When this university was founded more than twenty years ago, it was dedicated to serving those students of Northern Kentucky who could not receive a higher education otherwise.

Approximately 40 percent of NKU's student population is non-traditional.

These students are already struggling. Most of them work full-time and attend in the evenings and/or have families at home to care for as well.

I understand that the university is having a rough time right now with budget cuts. Everyone (yes, even the students) is suffering the after effects of them.

Of course the university has incurred bad debts from this tuition installment plan. I don't see how this would be a surprise to administrators. Every other university that has a plan like this one has suffered the same problems.

Anytime you establish a credit system, bad debts should be expected.

I'm not excusing those who have jilted the university, but it seems there could have been another alternative. Maybe, a change in the refund policy is what needs to take place.

I honestly believe that this move will keep students from attending Northern. A large number of students use this payment plan and would not be able to attend NKU without it. It's convenient to pay up one-third of an out-of-state tuition. Next year, Ohio and Indiana (and other states) students are looking at a hefty sum of money being put up front.

And, what about those students who live in Northern Kentucky and can barely afford the payments now? College is getting too expensive due to state and federal budget cuts already. Why do individual universities have to make it even worse?

NKU is not the only institution in the area to have an installment plan. As a matter of fact, almost every university in the Greater Cincinnati Metropolitan area has a payment plan.

At Miami University and Thomas More, students pay their tuition off in five payments per semester.

Mount St. Joseph has a quarterly system in which students pay off their tuition in four payments during the semester.

Even a large school like the University of Cincinnati has a payment plan for their students. NKU is not unique.

These universities will also tell you they have experienced loss, but plans like this are for the benefit of students, not the university.

NKU officials may look to other alternatives like changing their withdrawal policy. Xavier University has a very strict withdrawal policy.

Higher education is a way to better the lives of the citizens of Northern Kentucky. A move like this one will make the dream of an education an even more unattainable one.

Give us a break! Students have already suffered enough with budget cuts and cuts in federal financial aid in recent years.

There are dozens of students just like me who will not be able to finish an education here at Northern if forced to pay half of a tuition up front that is too high to begin with. I am both a non-traditional and out-of-state student and there are many more out there just like me.

It is not too late! Students who need this plan to finish college must write and call both David Stringer (Student Government president, 572-5149) and our Board of Regents at Northern and plead with them not to pass this proposed plan.

There is an assumption out there that all students who have a need for financial aid get it. That is just not true anymore. Federal cuts in this area are preventing more and more people from receiving financial aid.

Without an affordable way to pay for college, many people couldn't go. Don't discriminate against those with thinner pocket books! Give all qualified people a chance to have a college education.

A Victory For The Judicial System

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Rape is a violent crime that makes me absolutely sick. It is a complete violation of another person. Acquaintance rape has got to be the worst of all.

To trust a person and then to have that person violate you in sexual way must be terrifying.

Last week, heavyweight boxer Mike Tyson was convicted of raping an 18-year-old beauty pageant contestant. After the verdict, I began hearing comments like, "a judge had to convict him because women were upset with the outcome of the Clarence Thomas hearings and William Kennedy Smith trials."

That is true. A number of women were upset with the outcome of those two incidents, but Tyson's verdict should not have been an appeasement for American women.

When people are guilty of a violent crime like rape, they should be convicted. That doesn't happen in our society. A lot of victims are put on trial themselves.

We treat our victims worse than our criminals. Now, I agree that some women come forward with charges when nothing has happened, but the reality of rape is that men and women have two definitions.

When a woman says no, and she is violated anyway, that is rape. We have this vision of rape in our society being this very violent crime where only someone who actually beats or injures their victim has been raped.

If a person is violated, then they have been raped. I'm not ruling out the possibility that men can be raped too. It happens and even fewer of those victims come forward.

Perhaps now that someone with name recognition has actually been convicted of rape, more victims will have faith in the system.

That was the problem with the Smith trial. Many people felt that it was a blow to victims of both sexes. Telling them that even when you come forward, it doesn't mean that justice will be served.

I'm not suggesting that we crucify and torture all people charged with rape. Don't misunderstand me. I still believe that people are innocent until proven guilty.

But, in the case of rape, too many guilty parties get off. We've all heard things like "well, she dressed in a way that I thought she wanted it." These stereotypes have got to stop!

I loved Mike Tyson's defense. His lawyers could only come up with, "Tyson is a womanizer and she should have known better."

I believe that Tyson should go to jail. Pampering those people who commit crimes does not show society that we are a nation tough on crime.

I don't think this is only a victory for women. It is a victory for our justice system. Maybe now more people will have faith in it and we can thank those jurors from Indiana for that.

Top Ten Reasons Mike Tyson Should Go To Jail:

10. So he can print his own custom license plate.
9. A few years in "C" block might deepen his voice.
8. So Robin Givens and her attorney can't just drop by for a chat anymore.
7. To keep professional boxing from getting a criminal reputation.
6. Buster Douglas won.
5. Dissatisfied dates from the "bighouse" can't sue.
4. Jeffrey Dahmer needs a roommate that will keep him in line.
3. If Leon Spinx violates parole, he'll need a spurring partner.
2. It's a great opportunity to meet some of Don King's former business associates.
1. The showers will offer plenty of the type of social interaction Mike seems to enjoy.

Potluck Dinner Celebrates International Culture

MARY K. HENRY
STAFF WRITER

The world became a little bit smaller for some last Saturday night as NKU's international community gathered to celebrate cultures and lifestyles at a potluck dinner.

"By you being here (NKU) we can hopefully make there (the rest of the world) a whole lot closer to this campus," Director of International Programs Michael Klembara said to the soldout audience.

The international students are our best resource to internationalize the campus said Klembara, who is also director of the Center for Cooperative Education.

The dinner included dishes from all over the world. Entrees served were Te-Maki Sushi from Japan, Mandu (flour, meat and green onions) and Tagin (meat and potatoes) from Morocco.

Food wasn't the only way international culture was celebrated.

The program included a fashion show full of color with representatives from Botswana, Zimbabwe, Bangladesh, Kenya, Morocco, Mexico, Uganda, Pakistan, Germany, India, Ghana, Indonesia, Nigeria and Japan.

Popular music and dancing were also included in the festivities. Takashi Hattori and Keichi sang two Japanese popular songs, and Sun-Sak Lee sang a traditional Korean song.

The end of the evening was capped off by dancing to both Arab and Pakistani music.

Mary Ann Weiss, assistant coordinator of international students said "I love the spontaneity, but that comes after a lot of hard work."

NKU student Pandi Ingah said he gave Weiss a lot of the credit for the success of the evening. "She has done

NKU's Kentucky Cancer Center Offers Support And Tips on Early Detection

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Most students are not aware of the Kentucky Cancer Center or that it has an office on the NKU campus.

The Kentucky Cancer Program is designed to enable all Kentucky citizens to have a resource for cancer control. It has nine regional offices, including one on John's Hill Road near Skyline Tavern. The program is funded by the Kentucky General Assembly.

The center provides services and can be a support network for those who have discovered they have cancer, according to Director Katherine Rack.

One of the things that Rack said she feels is important are early detection programs. The center coordinates community and school based cancer prevention and early detection programs, according to Rack.

"We go to local schools to educate them on all kinds of cancers, including detection and cures," Rack said.

The center can also arrange health screenings for early cancer detection. It can also assist in finding cancer screenings and care for low-income families, Rack said.

A nationwide computer network to assist physicians in locating and providing proper care for patients in Kentucky is also a part of the center.

The center provides support groups for cancer patients and their families, according to Rack.

Cancer is Kentucky's second leading cause of death, according to literature produced by the center. The program not only helps patients, but it also collects information to discover why Kentuckians get certain kinds of cancer.

Rack said women should begin to have mammographies at age 30 if cancer runs in the family.

"There are so many non-traditional students and faculty members here (at NKU) that need to be aware of the advantages to early breast cancer detection," Rack said.

According to the U.S. Department of Health, one out of every 10 women will develop breast cancer sometime during their lives.

Campus Nurse Mary Rosenfeld said she has had some students and faculty members come to her office for support when they discovered they had cancer.

"There are a number of support groups that can help patients through their difficult time," she said.

Rosenfeld said she urges all women to begin self examinations at 18 years of age. "Not all lumps are cancer, so women should have them checked."

Both Rosenfeld and Rack said they think that self examinations and regular visits to the doctor are the best ways to detect it early. Early detection leads to early cures. Medical studies have proven that early cures will enable minimal damage by the cancer and will many times save a cancer patient's life.

Women and Cancer will continue next week.

NKU's Prince Charming Is Named During Valentine's Day Contest

Once upon a time, there was a frog with a crown on its head, four handsome gentlemen and an NKU sweatshirt.

Where did these three things come together? At the NKU Bookstore's prince charming contest Feb. 14, Valentine's Day.

Jackie Baker from the bookstore asked contestants Thom Roose, Shawn Miller, David Eschenbach and Adrian Marcel Williams two questions. First, she asked them what they would say to their girlfriends on Valentine's Day, and then she asked them what their most romantic experience was.

After answers such as 'I love you' and 'talking with my girlfriend under the stars all night' the judges made their final decision.

After a few 'tense' moments of deliberation, Williams was declared the winner.

"I'm flattered," Williams said. "I was on my way to get something to eat and Shawn (Miller) told me to come over and enter."

Williams won a gray NKU sweatshirt with a university emblem on the front and back. The runners up and judges were awarded a large plastic cup with a Norseman emblem on it.

After answers such as "I love you" and "talking under the stars all night with my girlfriend," the judges made their final decision.

The judges said their decision was a hard one.

"It came down to contestants one (Roose) and four (Williams)," judge Angie Gumm said.

Missy Rosing, one of the deciding judges, said the judges picked Williams because of his answer to what he would tell his girlfriend on Valentine's Day.

"He said he'd make everyday the best day' (with his girlfriend) and that won it," she said.

To cap off the contest, the crowned prince charming drew the name of the winner of the bookstore frog. For several days, NKU students had been entering the contest to win the bookstore's crowned frog.

The winner of the stuffed amphibian was NKU student Holly Riley.

Islam said the dance and the music were his favorite parts of the program.

NKU Sociology Club Delivers Treat To The Welcome House

RENEE ROELL
STAFF WRITER

What would seem like a normal dinner or late night snack to most people was a treat to the women and children at the Welcome House Shelter on Pike Street in Covington, when the NKU Sociology Club delivered pizzas.

"Everybody looks forward to Tuesday night," Shelter Coordinator Jane Mynatte said from the cramped kitchen where she usually prepares meals.

Delivering food to the shelter on Tuesday nights began with last fall's Welcome House Outreach project. Different organizations, such as Taco Bell or Burger King, usually deliver and sometimes donate food to the shelter.

The Sociology Club purchased pizzas with money it earned through bake sales.

"The students really liked the idea of helping women and children as a part of a community project," said Barbara Merz, Sociology Club adviser.

Last year the club also became involved with the shelter during a canned food drive it sponsored.

"We brought seven boxes boxes of canned food, and we even rearranged the half-empty shelves for them," said President Bob Mains.

The club has been involved in various other projects ranging from talking to West Virginia Coal miners to holding lectures on the Gulf War.

"The club not only holds academic types of sociological projects such as lectures, but also likes to be helpful within the community," Merz said.

Merz also serves on the Board of Directors for the Welcome House Shelter. The pizza delivery was a community service idea she gave the club.

"By being in the Sociology Club we should do projects like this for the community so we can gain experience and insight," said Vice President Kevin Stuart.

"I wish social workers were as involved as students were," Mynatte said, who remembers last year's canned food drive.

Mynatte, a NKU graduate, worked at the shelter while she was in school and continued after graduating.

Approximately 35 homeless women and children live in the shelter. The shelter is always full, Mynatte said, especially in these economically hard times.

The shelter provides some prepared meals for its occupants and a dorm-like room. It also tries to help the women find a source of income. People can stay from three weeks to one month, but they always have some exceptions.

"It is too stressful to turn people away, so we always try to bend the rules we have," Mynatte said.

The shelter is supported by Community Chest, area churches and by private grants and fund-raisers. It does not receive state funds.

DEAN'S SCHOLARSHIPS 1992 - 93 ACADEMIC YEAR

Each year, numerous Dean's Scholarships are awarded to recognize and honor outstanding academic accomplishments of students currently enrolled at NKU. Each scholarship will cover full in-state tuition for the academic year.

Eligibility criteria are as follows:

1. Completion of no fewer than 60 credit hours.
2. A minimum cumulative GPA of 3.50.
3. A declared major at NKU.
4. Attendance in fall and spring semesters of the current academic year and completion of at least 18 credit hours over two semesters.
5. Enrollment as a full-time student throughout the fall and spring semesters of the award year.
6. Students holding full-year tuition scholarships are not eligible.

Beginning March 2, 1992, application forms may be obtained from departmental offices. Student must submit applications to a faculty member of their academic major on or before March 27, 1992. Awards will be announced on May 16, 1992.

Recreational Program Serves Northern Kentuckians With Disabilities

NKU graduate Steve Schwierjohann saw the need for a recreation program for the physically disabled. He put the program into action.

The American Hospital for Rehabilitation-Edgewood is establishing a recreational program open to all physically disabled persons in the Northern Kentucky area. Schwierjohann, who is also physically disabled, coordinates the program.

The program started Jan. 31 with the goal of promoting the well-being of handicapped persons through physical activity. The hospital is a short term care facility serving those people with physically debilitating conditions, whether brought on by injury, stroke or disease. They try to help clients overcome the challenges of everyday life.

Schwierjohann said they hope to reach out to the entire area disabled population with the new recreation program. Possible sports will include wheelchair basketball, football, racquetball, tennis and volleyball.

"In the past if you wanted to compete in physically disabled events you had to go all the way to Dayton, Ohio, to do it. We would like to get enough people involved so we can start leagues in Northern Kentucky."

Kim Martin is the assistant coordinator of the program and is a graduate student at NKU. She competes internationally in wheelchair basketball and will compete this summer in Spain in the Olympic games.

"We hope to start women's leagues in basketball," Martin said. "The closest competitive leagues are in Dayton, Ohio."

For more information on the program contact Schwierjohann at the American Hospital for Rehabilitation-Edgewood, weekday afternoons at 341-2044, or mornings at 342-6083.

Get Up, Go To Class, Or Suffer ◀◀◀

TAMMY MCDOWELL
CONTRIBUTOR

It's 6:30 in the morning and your alarm goes off. You look outside the window and the ground is covered with snow. First, you turn on the stereo to see if classes have been canceled because of the conditions. When you find classes are on the regular schedule, you feel a sense of disappointment. By this time, you have wasted half an hour of your time to get read, class starts in an hour, and you still need to drive to school. What is your first response? Of course - you want to stay at home in your warm bed.

Resist temptation. go ahead and get ready for your classes; it will pay off in the end. If you are one the people who succumb to temptation, think of all you will be missing.

First, if your professor checks enrollment, you are missing valuable attendance points. If he or she does not check enrollment, you also lose credibility with your professor. Just think how complimentary it looks when you show up and other people do not.

Second, you are missing valuable notes which may be important when it comes to test time. What if your buddy who sits across from you also decides to stay at home in bed and you cannot get notes to copy? Studying the book is not always the solution because professors often give notes not covered in the book.

Third, what if your teacher decides to give the class a surprise quiz on the day you decide to sleep in?

Fourth, if you skip this class because of bad weather, what is going to keep you from getting into the habit of skipping classes?

Fifth, how do you know that something like illness or family problems might not occur giving you a real reason to miss class?

Sixth, why spend all of that money on tuition if you are not willing to go to class in the first place? If you skip class, you are only cheating yourself out of your hard-earned money.

So, when you get that dragging feeling when you try to pull yourself out of bed just to go to classes in the cold, think about all that you could be missing.

Remember, going to class can help you make better grades and skipping class might catch up with you when the professor issues grades and you come up short.

Lady Norse Struggle, Fall To Kentucky Wesleyan

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

OWENSBORO, Ky.- Physically the NKU women's basketball team showed up here last Saturday to play the Kentucky Wesleyan Lady Panthers, but mentally the team in another world.

Kentucky Wesleyan defeated the 14th ranked Lady Norse 62-58.

NKU entered the game coming off a 96-68 win last Thursday night over Southern Indiana. In that game the Lady Norse only led by five at halftime, but they opened the second half with a big offensive spurt and pulled away from the Screaming Eagles.

At halftime the Lady Norse trailed by two points, 29-27, but couldn't put together any kind of overwhelming offensive output against the Lady Panthers.

The games outcome didn't make sense to NKU coach Nancy Winstel.

"They didn't do anything that we didn't anticipate," Winstel said.

The real difference in the game, however, was execution.

"Kentucky Wesleyan did what they had to at crunch time and we didn't," Winstel said.

Trailing by five points with seven minutes left, NKU got back in the game. Lori McClellan hit a three-point field goal to pull NKU within two points.

The Lady Norse took a one-point lead, 52-51, with five and a half minutes remaining when McClellan hit her second three-point field goal in a row.

However, the Lady Norse didn't hold on to the lead for long.

On Kentucky Wesleyan's next trip down the floor Annie Levens was called for fouling the Lady Panther's Heather Haddix while she was attempting a shot.

Haddix sank both free throws to put Kentucky Wesleyan up by one point, 53-52.

Although only trailing by one point after Haddix made both of her free-throw attempts, the Lady Norse didn't attempt a shot the next four times they had possession of the ball.

"We came down the floor four times and turned the ball over three times and got a jump ball," Winstel said. "To me that is not taking care of the ball and executing offensively."

Capitalizing on the NKU turnovers, Kentucky Wesleyan extended its one-point lead to four and held the lead for good.

NKU committed 23 turnovers in the game. Fifteen of the turnovers came in the second half.

The Lady Norse cut the lead to two points with 2:15 left in the game on a play that characterized how the whole game went for the Lady Norse.

Valerie Gaerke drove for the basket on a fast break and missed a layup. Levens was trailing the play and got the rebound and put the ball back up to cut the lead to two.

That play was similar to NKU's final basket of the first half.

At the end of half Levens missed a layup, Lori McClellan got rebound and missed another layup. Finally Amy Middleton pulled down McClellan's miss and put the ball in.

"Our shots weren't falling and I think that affected us mentally," Gaerke said.

Middleton felt another reason played a factor in the loss.

"I felt like we were all playing for ourselves and we weren't playing as a team and it showed," Middleton said.

"We just never came together."

The good news, if there is any after losing, the Lady Norse retained second place in the Great Lakes Valley Conference because Indiana University/Purdue University-Ft. Wayne lost Saturday to Bellarmine College.

Division I Transfer Dominates

NKU Outmanned by Panthers

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

OWENSBORO, Ky.- It's hard to imagine the difference one player can make in a basketball team, but NKU didn't need to imagine the difference last Saturday when it played Kentucky Wesleyan.

NKU experienced the difference.

Carlos Skinner was the one man that made the difference in the Panthers 101-75 victory over NKU.

When the two teams met on January 18 in Regents Hall the Norsemen walked away with a 114-109 double overtime victory over the Panthers and Skinner was still a member of the St. Louis University basketball team.

Skinner's presence inside shutdown NKU's inside attack.

"Our inside people were really intimidated. They didn't know what to do in relationship to those hands and the way the ball was getting knocked around."

NKU center Todd Svoboda, coming off a career-high 35 point performance against Southern Indiana, scored only seven points.

Svoboda, who was also averaging 10.8 rebounds a game entering the contest, finished with two rebounds in the game.

But Skinner, a 6-foot-8 sophomore who was averaging 6.8 points and 6.9 rebounds a game, decided in mid-January to leave St. Louis. He joined Kentucky Wesleyan on January 23 and became eligible for the Panthers' last 14 games of the season.

NCAA regulations allow players in Division I programs to transfer to Division II programs without sitting out a year of competition like they would have to do if they transfer to another Division I team.

Since Skinner joined Kentucky Wesleyan, the Panthers are 6-2 and headed towards postseason play.

"That's not the same basketball team that we played the last time. You were talking about a team that was going to be home at spring break. Now you're talking about a team that will be in the Elite Eight," NKU coach Ken Shields said.

Shields said the addition of Skinner to Kentucky Wesleyan's back line allows the Panthers to really open up their style of play.

"When you have a tremendous athlete like that who absolutely intimidates everything in the paint you can gamble on offense and defense."

In 21 minutes Skinner was nine of 10 from the field, finished with a game-high 18 points and blocked four shots.

"We had our intensity for 40 minutes, regardless of who was in the game and when our intensity level is good, as it was, we are going to create some turnovers and scoring opportunities," Kentucky Wesleyan coach Wayne Boultinghouse said.

NKU took a two-point lead, 15-13, six and a half minutes into the game when freshman Ryan Schrand hit a three-point field goal. But the lead didn't last for long.

Capitalizing on NKU turnovers, the Panthers went on a 13-0 run and instead of leading by two points the Norsemen suddenly found themselves trailing by 11 and essentially out of the game.

NKU finished the game with 28 turnovers.

The loss drops NKU to 11-11 overall and to 7-6 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference. Kentucky Wesleyan raised its record to 17-5, 9-4 and moved into a first-place tie with Ashland and Indiana University/Purdue University-Ft. Wayne in the GLVC.

Student Speaks Out

Higher Education Should Be A Priority

To the Editor:

To no one's surprise, once again, the state budget allocated no money to higher education this year. They passed a bond issue for parks, why not for higher education and Medicare? I go to Northern Kentucky University and see that people are picking up their lives - the handicapped, unemployed dads and moms reluctantly on welfare - all trying to do better for their families.

Last year, Dr. Leon Boothe, the president of Northern Kentucky University, had an idea to build dormitories due to increased enrollment. A builder would build and rent it back to the university and, after about twenty years, the university would own them. They are being built right now. This year, Dr. Boothe says that a new science building is needed. Higher education must be guaranteed now, not to be left at the mercy of the state. I hope that Dr. Boothe can find a way to get his building.

In my comparative politics class, we had a visitor from one of the Russian satellite countries who is a law professor there. He came here because he wanted to see a democratic society in action at Northern Kentucky University. We value the education and we thought that we had enough money to pay the bill. The money was wasted and now they say we can't have the science building, but it would help if we could show it. It isn't a building - it is people and lives.

Norse Force Appreciates Support

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to personally thank everyone who helped make Homecoming 1992 a great success. First, to the Norse and Lady Norse for their outstanding victories over Lewis and St. Joe's. If you weren't at the games, you missed four of the most exciting games in NKU basketball.

Second, I'd like to thank APB, the Homecoming Committee and the Alumni Association for all their support throughout the week.

Thirdly, I would like to congratulate Dave Stringer and Amy Arbino for being chosen Homecoming King and Queen, and the winners of the Banner Blast, the ATO's for winning the first prize ($50 donated by the Alumni Association) and the Phi Sig's for second prize (a six-foot sub donated by Subway, Cold Spring).

Lastly, special thanks for the FANTASTIC fan support at the games on Thursday and Saturday, let's keep the support coming, and GO NORSE.

Student Alumni Association Needs Members

Dear Students:

Two years ago several top leaders on campus created a new organization. It was called the Student Alumni Association.

Although the terms sound contradictory, they are not! The Student Alumni Association is intended to be the student arm of the university alumni. The purpose of SAA is to offer services to the students and alumni in the university community with special emphasis on the participation of students and alumni in the progress of Northern Kentucky University.

We want to encourage students in participating and creating opportunities now that can be fostered before graduating. That is what can be called tradition.

Now comes your role. Tradition is not built overnight. It takes people. SAA can give you the tradition that you've been looking for on campus. By becoming a member you can increase your "networking" ability for the future. Meet and become friends with alumni that can lead you in the right direction for jobs!

Also you can add your own piece of tradition at NKU. When those budget cuts hit wouldn't it have been nice to rely on strong alumni funds like various other universities in the state? Or wouldn't you like to see mass participation at NKU events? Now is the time!

SAA needs you. Our next meeting will be Wednesday, Feb. 26, in UC 108. We hope to see you.

Dear Dr. Comp

Dear Dr. Comp,

I don't know what to do. I have to write a paper on "gender differences." I don't get it. Doesn't my teacher know that males and females are different? What is going on? Are teachers dunces or what?

--Urinal User

Dear U.U.,

You seem to be a kind of simple guy, but your teachers like a little complexity. That, I think, is your problem. You probably see the differences between men and women in purely physical terms. You need to start thinking in terms of depth psychology.

I usually don't prescribe specific theses, but for you I will make an exception. Here's your thesis: Both men and women are jerks, but for different reasons. Men are jerks because they are impossible to please.

Take, for instance, an acquaintance of mine, Al Pleasant. He likes blondes but he also likes women with hair "as black as the feathers on a raven's back, but not so greasy." He wants a woman who has blonde hair on a TR schedule, and black hair on a MWF schedule. On the weekend, he likes to be surprised.

Believe it or not, women love Al and think they can please him. Women are jerks because they believe nothing is impossible. Since men are impossible and women don't believe in the impossible, women do not believe in the essence--perhaps of existence--of men.

Students should avoid both the simple and the overly simple, but beware. Many a simple mind has drowned in the complex depths of deep psychology. But then, what do I care? I'm not a for-real doctor. I have a master's degree--not in psych!
