Steely Library: Here We Grow Again

Construction on the Steely Library is expected to begin May 1992. Photo provided.

TINA SHORT
STAFF WRITER

The $9.1 million project which will expand Steely Library is scheduled to begin in May 1992. The project calls for the addition of a three-floor wing, a fifth floor and a landscaped courtyard.

The library, dedicated in 1975, was designed to accommodate an enrollment of 5,000 students. In an accreditation review in May 1988, the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) indicated that the library would need to be expanded in order to adequately support the number of students enrolled.

"Our primary purpose is to make the library better for students," said Library Director Marion Winner.

Construction will occur in three major areas; the lower courtyard, the central receiving area and the roof.

The lower-level courtyard in front of the building is termed as "wasted space" in the project guidelines. The lower portion of the building's glass wall will be removed and the building will then be extended outward. This will allow for the enlargement of the book collection.

Uninvolved and apathetic students better beware! The Norse Force is out and about recruiting students to get involved in NKU athletics.

"It's a fun way to get involved with Northern," said Rocke Saccone II, president of Norse Force.

"I see a lot of students go to school and go home."

Athletics is readily accessible on campus and a fun way to meet other people, said Saccone.

The Norse Force Spirit Club is the brainchild of Athletic Director Jane Meier. Saccone said she asked if he was interested in heading the project and, as the saying goes, the rest is history.

The group's first official event, "Spirit Weekend," involved the club's charter members in food, fun and a little sports action.

"It was really successful, especially for this early in the year," said Saccone.

Sports Information Director J.D.

Campbell actively supports the Norse Force.

"(Last year) the support was good, but what we're trying to do now is organize it."

"We want opponents to be wary," he said. "We want a real rowdy, boisterous and supportive student body."

At away basketball games, students have certain identifiable sections of the gym where they can be loud and energetic, Campbell said.

"If you get a group of students together they aren't afraid of being boisterous," said Campbell.

Todd Svoboda, junior center for the NKU basketball team, said he was excited to find out about the new spirit club.

"It's a great idea," he said. "I hope a bunch of people join. Student body support can help to intimidate other teams."

"I remember one volleyball game where the team was down and the cheering and rowdiness got the players pumped up."

Norse Force member Ryan Zachrich agrees.

"I think the volleyball team tried harder when we all cheered," he said. "I think the teams will definitely benefit."

"I wanted to join Norse Force to help root the teams on," said Zachrich. "At the beginning of the year, I wasn't involved at all, but now things like this are helping me to."

Campbell said he hopes the Norse Force will grow with next year's opening of the residential village and build on that success year after year.

Most of Northern's sports events are free, he said, and that should be a good reason for students to get involved.

"Look at the windfall of people going to volleyball games," said member Todd

Gowan. "If it wasn't for Norse Force, a lot of people, like you and me, wouldn't be going at all."

Campbell said he envisions one day during a conference baseball game a big student cheering section hanging out on the hill by the Johns Hill Road entrance to NKU and behind centerfield.

Saccone, Campbell and Vice President Jim Adrio are currently planning a Nov. 25 bus trip to Eastern Kentucky University where the men's basketball team will square off against the Colonels.

Meet The Norse Night Nov. 9 should be another big event for the Norse Force.

A $5 membership fee earns a reserved seat in the cheering section, a special T-shirt and admission to all Norse Force events.

Interested persons can contact Saccone, Campbell or the Athletics Department (572-5193).

"We have fine athletic teams here at Northern," said Saccone. "For as long as I'm at Northern you can count on me being supportive."

Stephens leaving after Spring '92

New Dean for Law School

Stephens Resigning

MICHAEL BUNZEL
NEWS EDITOR

Like a lone construction worker surveying the many pot holes to fill on a long hilly street, Henry L. Stephens, at the beginning of his tenure as Dean of Chase College of Law School, faced the same dilemma, but apparently his work is now finished.

Stephens, after assuming the position in 1985, has decided to step down at the end of this year to let someone else travel the road that now should not be so long or hilly.

Upon his arrival, Stephen's immediately let his impact be felt. He helped save Chase from being shut down in the face of a major debate in Frankfurt about whether or not to close one of the state's law schools.

"He was a major contributor as to the overall strategy of NKU and helped stabilize the law school," said NKU President Leon Boothe. "He helped remove the sword that was hanging over the school's head."

Stephen's next adventure was set out to establish alumni chapters throughout Kentucky to plant the seeds of support the school could count on in the future.

Furthermore, in the early 1980's there was a decrease in the number of applicants to get into the school. But now, Stephens said, there is much more competition for more qualified students.

"We had to improve our market yield. I am very pleased with the entering students of our classes in recent years," he said.

Stephens arrived at NKU in 1979 as associate professor of law before serving the position of associate dean in 1981-85.

He offered several reasons for his decision to leave following the end of the school year.

"More or less I have completed the goals for myself and the school when I came in," he said. "(And) after seven years, it is probably best if the institution be served by someone else's creativeness."

"He brought leadership to Chase College of Law. He made a substantial effort toward increasing the quality and visibility of the college," said Jorns.

"The overall visibility of Chase has been enhanced through his leadership," Boothe added.

The school will have an intern dean for one year. A committee will be formed sometime next year to conduct a national search for a permanent replacement, according to Boothe.

Stephens, however, does not plan on leaving NKU. He is going to return in 1993 to teach environmental law.

"I feel honored to have had the position," Stephens said. "Certain aspects I'll miss, but I have also missed serving in the classroom. I'm looking forward to returning to it."

History Department Has New Chair

ANN ABBOTT
FEATURES EDITOR

After two years with no department chair, NKU's history and geography department is about to begin a new era of leadership.

The announcement was made official two weeks ago as Dr. Thomas Hale confirmed his intentions to make Kentucky his new home, and NKU his new workplace.

Hale, who is currently a professor at Idaho State University, will begin his job at NKU in January.

Students, faculty and staff agree that Hale will have a lot of work to do when he gets here.

Sarah Phillips, a history major, and the student representative elected by students to serve as their representative on the chair selection committee, offered some insight both on the past departmental problems and on the future that lies ahead.

She explained that being so involved with the professors and the chair search put her in a position to better understand some of the problems in the history department.

"I saw some factionalism in the department that has developed over a numbers of years," Phillips said.

Phillips said she thought a lot of the publicized problems in the history department stemmed from sources other than the chair search itself.

"I don't know the particular background - it's just a sense that the problems go deeper," she said.

Although Phillips said she did hear things that did not seem relevant to the task at hand, she stressed that everyone involved was willing to put aside their differences to get the job done.

"Everyone realized that they needed to pick up and go on - there was a universal desire to work as a whole," she said.

Phillips also said that the quality of education the students received was not affected.

"I don't think it's affected it at all. I think they leave their personal problems at the classroom door. All the professors know that the students come first," she said.

Phillips said that Hale has a lot of work ahead of him, and noted that he seems to be very aware of not only the problems of the past, but how to cope with them.

"He knows what he's up against. It will take a great deal of patience to get it all worked out," she said. "Dr. Hale himself mentioned this - he said he wanted to get the department running smoothly in order to 'focus on the true pursuit of education."

Phillips said she thinks Hale has a big job ahead of him.

"The first thing he has to do is impress upon everyone his ability to help the situation. He has to sell himself in a lot of ways. He has to say - this is what I can do and this is what you can do," she said. "The first six months to a year will be a sort of honeymoon period for him. He has to take advantage of this."

She said that right now, everyone is putting a lot of hope into Hale and what he can accomplish.

"Everyone has this idea that he is a glimmer of hope - a beacon. Everyone has a universal opinion - they are excited - they are banking on him," said Phillips. "Most importantly for the department, everyone has the attitude that 'we will work with him.'"

History and Geography Department Assistant Administrator Shirley Raleigh said she is also glad to finally get a chair.

Raleigh, who has been with the history and geography department since 1979, said she also realizes Hale has a lot of work ahead of him - and he will need a lot of support.

"There are so many 'first things' to do. We need another staff position for the department," said Raleigh. "I feel a lot of the faculty gets cheated now because I just don't have the time to do a lot of things for them."

As far as the departments past problems are concerned, Raleigh said she has always been confident things would work out.

"Everyone is different with their own personalities. This will take time, we need to work together to adjust. Dr. Hale is a new person for everybody," she said. "I think this is a pretty good department - or I wouldn't have stayed here so long. The students and the faculty are all my friends. I hope we can work together."

Raleigh summed up what she said is the most important reason she has stayed in the department, and the most important reason the department - and the university - needs to pull together right now.

"It's because of the students. I know everyone says 'students first' but I really try to do this - I really try to help students, I try to be their friend," she said. "If it wasn't for the students I wouldn't be here - even the people on the eighth floor need to realize this - and I hope the chair coming in realizes this."

The WRFN/Northerner Marathon

They Lasted More Than A Day For United Way

ANN ABBOTT
FEATURES EDITOR

At 9 a.m. Saturday morning, Oct. 5, the WRFN/Northerner DJ Marathon for United Way had lasted for 21 hours.

Loud, fast paced music blared from the speakers throughout the University Center; a perfect antithesis for the scene in the UC first floor lounge.

Bodies were strewn about the room in various positions. The only sounds to be heard besides the music were the consistent snores of one unnamed marathon participant who refuses to believe that he snores at all.

The only people awake at that hour were Paul Daniels, general manager of WRFN and Diane Goetz, editor of The Northerner, although a pulse could be found on neither.

People were laying on makeshift beds, on the floor, and curled up next to each other to combat the cool temperature in the UC lounge.

Goetz captured the general mood of the group when asked the name of her friend with whom she was sharing an Afghan.

"I don't know his name," she yawned. "But we call him Ernie."

Goetz explained that only she and Daniels were required to stay awake, and the others were allowed to sleep if they wanted.

"We have to stay awake because we pledged to as part of the marathon effort for United Way. We are doing it for the kids," Goetz said.

Daniels explained the inspiration behind the marathon.

"It's something that has been done at my high school radio station - and it was a success - except that the DJ couldn't talk for weeks - so I decided to team attack it," he said. "These people are great - they (those who stayed with Daniels and Goetz) are here because they want to be here."

The marathon elicited some community support also - Krogers, Subway, Pizza Hut and Professional Food Management donated food and drinks. The marathon was even mentioned on the radio station 700 WLW on Friday afternoon.

By the end of the marathon, after 26 1/2 hours of air time, the sense of camaraderie in the UC lounge had reached a pinnacle.

Sleepy eyed, giddy participants were singing and joking with one another and it was apparent to those who were there that there was something exceptional about people who are willing to give of their time to help others.

How Do You Measure Success?Believe It or Not, There's More to Life Than Money

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Last week when I began reading a copy of the article about my very favorite people in Cincinnati Magazine, I thought 'these quotes sound just like Susan.' But, as I began reading further, I started seeing a false picture in my head.

I wondered after reading this article how many people picture Susan in her large house working in a spacious art studio with an easel and driving a red ferrari. Then, I began questioning the pictures that I, as a writer, paint in my readers minds.

I feel very lucky to know Susan Nuxoll and be a close friend to her, but not because she is enormously talented. She is a good person. Spiritually, she is an enormous success.

Dr. Boothe summed her up well by saying that she has kept her feet firmly planted on the ground. She's had to. She may very well be one of the poorest people I have the privilege to know.

Yet, even though she doesn't always have enough money to live comfortably, she always has a wonderful spirit. She's always ready to sit down and talk about what is bothering you.

I guess reading the article, people consider her an enormous success and she is in many ways. But, she still can't pay her bills. It's a tough world out there as she will most definitely tell you. Most people seem to measure success in the objects you own and the toys you have after graduation.

Although, I don't think she'd give up art for anything in the world. It's a consuming passion. I can't help but be a little biased when it comes to Susan.

She will do anything for other people. If you were on a plane ready to crash in the deep seas and there was only one parachute left, she would insist on you taking it.

So what is my message to you? My message is don't measure success monetarily. You may never achieve your goals this way.

A person could make themselves crazy trying to measure up this way. Always trying to keep up with the Jones'. There are more important things in life. Things like family life.

All the money in the world can't guarantee you a happy marriage and family life. Donald Trump can tell you that. Don't become so dollar sign hungry that you lose sight of what is important.

Susan is focused in the right direction. She doesn't measure herself on wealth and talent. She wants to be a good person.

I can't tell you how many times I've hoped I'd make a ton of money after graduation and never need or want for anything again. That's just not reality, because no matter how much you have, you always want more. It's just human nature.

My advice to all of those pursuing a degree in Money 101 is 'don't set your expectations too high. You can measure success in many ways.'

Don't think that because you don't make six figures a year, you are not successful. Concentrate on being fulfilled and if money is the only fulfillment in your life, than maybe you need to do some restructuring.

Student Poll

Students Input On Smoking Policy

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Student Government is looking into the possibility of changing the campus smoking policy.

The Northerner last week conducted a non-scientific poll and elicited various responses from students.

Comments and suggestions can be directed to Student Government, University Center, Suite 208.

I think it's silly to have ordinances. We should have the choice. I think everyone's constitutional rights should be upheld until proven otherwise.

Bill Frazier
Freshman

Smoking is fine, but if you blow it in my face you will suffer a common death!

Adam Campbell

I don't think anyone has the right to say you can smoke in one place or another. They can't actually rule it out on campus.

Chris Brock
Senior

A no-smoking policy is wrong, and impossible to enforce. There is already one and it is not enforced.

Gunther Aloysius
Junior

I don't care where you smoke, but don't smoke around me, okay? I love my lungs and life.

Tim Granger
Senior

There should be designated areas. I am a smoker, but non-smokers should not have to walk through smoky hallways. Second-hand smoke can be dangerous.

Brant Keenan

Smoking outside, but not inside.

Kisha Jenkins
Freshman

I like how it is now with no smoking in classrooms.

David Parsons
Sophomore

There should be more ashtrays. There is only one in the lobby of Natural Science.

Julie Waters
Freshman

It's tough because many smoke and many don't. People who smoke shouldn't be put in a position where they offend those who don't. Should be a different section.

Heath Northcut
Senior

Considering we are in a school with a large number of smokers, they should be taken into account. This isn't a case of dealing with high school students. We're paying to go here.

Renaldo Carter
Freshman

Smoking is fine, but in places. The places should be restricted. Non-smokers should be able to breathe non-polluted air.

Bart Roth
Junior

NKU Graduate One Of Cincinnati's Best

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

While paging through the new Best and Worst edition of Cincinnati Magazine, a familiar face can be seen—that of NKU graduate Susan Nuxoll.

Nuxoll graduated in 1990 with a degree in fine art with an emphasis on drawing, printmaking and painting.

Her artwork is in the Columbus Museum of Art, Cincinnati Art Museum, Yale University and the Library of Congress, as well as other public and private collections.

According to Nuxoll, the article paints a picture that isn't at all true. "It makes me out to be something that I'm not."

"I don't define myself as a success on the basis of my art," Nuxoll continued. "You can't define yourself by one aspect of your whole person."

According to Nuxoll, it's life as usual even after the article. "I still make the same amount per hour as before."

University President Leon Boothe said, "she has kept her feet on the ground and it comes out in the article."

"We (my wife and I) have admired her work for a long time," he added.

According to Nuxoll, being a well-known artist has changed her very little. She said her artwork is done on her bedroom floor. She recently bought a rickety, old card table, but before she can use it, she has to add a few slots of wood on one of the legs.

"I often hope for the day I'll be able to buy an easel, but right now I can't afford it," she said.

She said she has become the queen of finding inexpensive forms of because of herself and also because of the support of the university," said Boothe.

"Education is like going to a buffet of knowledge," said Nuxoll. "You choose lots of things and try lots of things, but you go back for second or thirds in those things that interest you the most. You also taste a lot of things you could care less about."

"Northern taught me the intellect in addition to the process."

entertainment and ways to stretch a dollar as far as possible.

She said her major in art was a fluke. "I always thought I'd get a literature degree and be maybe a writer or a lawyer," Nuxoll said. "But, I fell in love with art and satisfied myself."

Nuxoll said that NKU has helped her along the way in her art career. "I learned to think at NKU. That's the main thing about college."

"You can teach anyone to draw but you can't teach them to think," she said. "Northern taught me the intellect in addition to the process."

"She has taken her natural talents and ability to achieve fame at an early age

Nuxoll said she doesn't think she's made the adjustment to life after college. "Outside of college it's just produce, produce, produce," she said. Nuxoll said she believes the nature of being a good artist is the ability to grow.

Anyone can produce, but not everyone can grow, according to Nuxoll. She is currently trying to pursue a freelance career in art.

Of all of the artwork Nuxoll has completed, she is most proud of a mural in over-the-rhine. She worked on the Peaslee mural on the corners of 14th and Sycamore streets.

"I get the most joy from this work," she said. "A lot of these people had never even painted before, and these people made a beautiful piece of artwork for the entire neighborhood had to share." She said she helped organize and finish some of the painting.

"This was the best utilization of my talents," she said. "I was lucky enough to be given a gift, although not a very practical one."

"I have an obligation to share it with other people," she added.

Nuxoll said she is pleased to have more time to devote to volunteer work since she has graduated. "I enjoy introducing children to something that I like. We paint together and talk."

Even though she enjoys giving to others, she said she also has a fantasy. "I would love to drive a car that is less than five years old and has less than 100,000 miles, be able to work in an atmosphere that has more than 10 feet of unrestricted space, make above $7000 a year and go to graduate school."

"I might make it to graduate school and I guess one out of four isn't bad."

On Oct. 4, the newest movie using the suspense-thriller genre, "Ricochet," opened in theaters across the country.

This movie will take a shot at the top, but it won't make a killing.

The starring role belongs to Academy Award winner Denzel Washington.

Washington plays rookie cop Nick Styles who takes off his clothes to catch a killer.

Not only does Styles catch the killer but also the attention of the whole city when his heroic act is shown on television.

The killer, Earl Talbot Blake (John Lithgow), goes to jail and Styles goes to the top. Blake spends seven years in jail obsessively watching Styles climb the ladder and eventually become assistant district attorney.

After a daring escape from jail, Blake takes his revenge. He destroys Styles' unblemished career by killing two of his partners and portraying him as a drug dealer and child molester to the media.

How does it end? That's for me to know and you to find out. Don't rush to the theater to see it, though, wait for it to come out on video. "Ricochet" is a good suspense thriller and was good enough to keep my attention, but it's not as good as a similar predecessor, "Lethal Weapon."

Safe Six Presents Healthy Lifestyles

KELLI MILLIGAN
COPY EDITOR

A loud, boisterous person is making a spectacle of himself in front of a large group of people. He thinks he is making sense, but in reality he is in a drunken stupor and doesn't understand a thing he is saying.

This person is a friend, maybe a best friend, and he is killing himself with alcohol.

The problem of alcohol abuse was only one of the topics presented in six skits called "Lifestyles of the Young and Healthy" by the Safe Six group from the University of Kentucky.

The Safe Six consists of 13 UK students who travel around the state of Kentucky presenting their skits at high schools and universities.

The group also acted out the problems of date rape, steroid and caffeine abuse, and eating disorders.

"Lifestyles" told the stories of six college students who face their individual problems by helping each other.

In one skit, for example, Robin (Shannon Noel) a bulimic, has a fight with her friend, Damon (Chris Carrier), an alcoholic. The two fight about which of them has a problem and which one does not. Actually, they both have a problem.

These problems, along with other ones presented during the hour-long show, are eventually solved at the end of the skits. Both Damon and Robin face their problems and begin to deal with them. Likewise, Mark (Dennis Miller) admits he is a steroid user and he stops using through the help of his friend, Larry (Brad Riddell).

In another skit, Janice (Jessie Bagley), who is addicted to caffeine, helps her friend, Kitty (Stacey Wilson), through the aftermath of a traumatic event, date rape.

The friends are forced to deal with all the problems in their lives when Janice is killed by a drunken driver at the conclusion of "Lifestyles."

Robert Vertrees, stage director for the Safe Six, said this is the second year the troop has gone to perform at colleges, universities and high schools.

"We deal with college issues that are familiar and realistic," said Vertrees.

The group holds auditions for its members and meets once a week during the semester, said Wilson.

"We go to summer school during the summer (to get ready for yearly performances)," said Wilson. "We have another presentation in the spring, 'The Waiting Game,' dealing with AIDS."

NKU students Anne Scharff, a junior, and freshman Jennifer Boyd were surprised by the Safe Six presentation.

"I was expecting a lecture and it was a skit," said Scharff. "I thought it was more informative and entertaining (the way it was presented). They didn't preach, they gave us facts in real life situations."

"I expected that they would tell you where to go (if you needed help)," said Boyd. "(But) it was effective and down to earth. They took the issues head on and got right to the point."

Marketing Strategies for Small Businesses

Northern Kentucky Small Business Development Center Hosts Small Business Marketing Workshop

"Marketing Strategies for Small Businesses" will be the subject of a workshop presented by NKSBC 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 16.

The workshop is designed to assist owners and managers of small businesses in learning ways they can promote their businesses effectively, but without a large advertising budget. Those who attend will learn low-cost approaches that help to sell enough products and services to enough people at a price that will provide profits to the firm.

Topics to be covered include defining marketing, describing businesses in terms important to customers, matching the business to its best market opportunities, low-cost marketing strategies, and a roundtable discussion of marketing problems and solutions common in smaller businesses. Actual companies and products will be discussed to illustrate the ideas presented.

The workshop leader will be Betty Hoge, founder and principal of the Jefferson Business Group, a business consulting practice providing marketing, strategic planning, and other administrative assistance to firms in Greater Cincinnati.

Ms. Hoge has many years of marketing management experience in both the public and private sectors. She received her MBA in Marketing from the University of Cincinnati and has college teaching experience in Marketing and Small Business Management. Ms. Hoge has worked as a business analyst, consultant, and seminar leader for Small Business Development Centers in Kentucky and West Virginia and for the Management Development Center at the University of Cincinnati. Prior to her consulting career, Ms. Hoge worked in private industry for over 16 years, holding marketing and operations management positions with Toys R Us, Drug Emporium, and SuperX Drugs.

The workshop will be held in BEP461. There is a $10 fee, and pre-registration is necessary. Call the NKSBC at 572-6524 for reservations.

"New" Prince Makes An Impressive Comeback

PAUL DANIELS
STAFF WRITER

If there were any doubts that Prince is a powerful force in the music industry, those doubts are hereby dispelled. His latest, Diamonds and Pearls, proves once and for all when it comes to raw talent and energy, Prince has no peers.

isn't different from his previous albums is the tactful use of innuendo. Songs like "Inseparable," and the first two singles "Cream" and "Gett Off" are potent enough to make a sorority girl blush - well, maybe not. Regardless, they do echo Prince's more explicit themes, and sound pretty darn good at the same time.

"Prince has always been an artist who has never settled for the ordinary."

Out of thirteen tracks, one would be hard pressed to find a single song that is anything short of impressive.

Prince gets the proverbial ball rolling with "Thunder," a song in which he alone performs all the voices and instruments. With the next song, "Daddy Pop," Prince introduces us to the New Power Generation, an eight man band determined to make a name for itself.

Quite frankly, it looks the band is going to succeed. One of the more notable members of the band is Tony M., serving as the band's lead rapper; adding an entire new dimension to Prince's sound.

The one thing about this album that

As Prince fans know, the only thing that has remained the same about his music is that it is constantly changing. Prince has always been an artist who has never settled for the ordinary.

Unfortunately, since the huge success of Purple Rain, that trait has consistently put his music ahead of its time, with the general public falling too far behind to truly comprehend and enjoy his work.

With Diamonds and Pearls, Prince still has not settled for the ordinary. However, I think the public is finally catching up and definitely in the mood for something new. Lucky for us, Prince delivers.

Library from p. 1

After this addition is complete it will be landscaped over, thus creating a plaza-level courtyard. The architect's submitted plans state that it is hoped that the trees planted will alleviate some of the heat absorbed by the sloping glass wall.

A three-level wing will be constructed near the central receiving area. The first level will house book stacks and archives, the second more shelf space and staff offices.

The third level will help to accomplish one of the projects main goals - an entry level which contains all of the library's major student services. The extra space the wing provides will give the floor enough space to house the circulation and reference desks, reserve and inter-library loan services, government documents, the on-line access catalog and the student lounge.

Renovations to the existing building will include a glass elevator connecting all floors (where the escalator is now positioned), an angled circulation desk and new floor for the loggia. Winner explained that presently the loggia floor makes the operation of wheelchairs and delivery carts difficult.

DJ from p. 3

Daniels and Goetz decided to end the marathon at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, not because they were tired, they said, but because of lack of interest.

"No one is pledging today," said Goetz. Toward the end the winner of a week's worth of reserved parking was announced. The winner was Jennifer Reynolds.

The marathon ended on a semi-emotional note.

"I laughed, I cried, I fell asleep," said marathon DJ Gunther Aloysius.

DJ Alan Brignon stressed that he wanted to thank all those who listened and supported them.

"Thanks to all ten of our listeners in D-Wing (in the residence hall)- they listened to us all night long," said Brignon.

As the exhausted marathoners bid us adieu, they played the tune "I'm Going Home" by Alice Cooper.

"The song just seemed to fit the general mood of us all," said Daniels.

The marathon raised over $200 for United Way.

Presidential Notes

What Are Your Concerns?

Dear Students,

On Sept. 30, I attended a Board of Student Body Presidents meeting at Murray State University. The BSBP will be handling a letter writing campaign concerning the student health insurance issue in the very near future. In addition, the issues of middle class financial aid and residency status for regents will be addressed. The next BSBP meeting will be held at the state conference during the next weekend of Oct. 25-27. If there is any issue you believe the BSBP should address, please do not hesitate to get in touch with me.

On Thursday, Oct. 3, I addressed a dinner of Presidential Scholars concerning Student Government's function on campus. I encouraged them to become involved on campus as they have already proven their abilities to lead and be successful. I also encourage all of you to become involved as I have in the last few weeks. I cannot stress enough how much your input and participation mean to this campus.

The Student Escort Service has begun its operations this year. I encourage you to utilize this service any time you need it. The service operates from dusk to 10 p.m.

Oct. 14-18, Student Government will be sponsoring Alcohol Awareness Week. We will be providing panels and other educational forums concerning this issue. Our program coincides with the National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week and we will be utilizing programs provided by the Inter-Association Task Force on Alcohol and Other Substance Abuse Issues. I encourage all of you to attend these functions in order that we may be one of the better informed campuses concerning this issue.

Finally, I would like to encourage all of you to become more aware of theft on campus. Although Northern has an extremely low crime rate, theft still occurs and I would hope you take precautions against it. Keep purses and other valuables with you at all times and do not forget to lock your car doors when you go to class. Please, be careful!

Thank you very much for your time.

Sincerely,
David A. Stringer
President
Student Government

Derenthal Draws On His Experience

BRIAN BALLMAN
STAFF WRITER

Compared to life in the military, the battles of Great Lakes Valley Conference soccer don't seem so tough for Tom Derenthal.

Derenthal, a junior on the NKU men's soccer team, spent six years in the United States Navy before coming to Northern.

During that time, he played three years for an armed forces soccer team and three years for a Navy team.

He says that while the players in college are just as good as the players on the military teams, the game isn't as competitive as in the Navy.

"The players here have the skill level, but it's just the competitiveness is not as intense as what I'm used to in the military," Derenthal said.

Derenthal is using his experience in the Navy to his advantage as a college player.

Coming off a sophomore season in which he was second on NKU's team in scoring and named to the all-GLVC team, Derenthal is having his best year this season.

Tom Derenthal

With the season a little more than half over, Derenthal's 10 goals lead not only NKU but the entire conference as well.

Still, Derenthal doesn't think of himself as a scorer.

"Our scorers are Todd Gruenwald and Timmy Lawson. It just so happens that I've been in the right places at the right times," Derenthal said.

On Sept. 14 against Brescia, Derenthal was in the right place at the right time four times.

His four goals that day led the Norsemen to a 6-1 victory.

"That was one of those days you have in 10 years," he said, "Everything I touched went in."

Derenthal's successful season to this point mirrors that of the entire team.

Through the first eleven games of the season the Norsemen have already scored 31 goals. Last season, the team scored 32 goals the entire year.

Derenthal thinks there are several reasons for the team's increased goal production.

"Todd's (Gruenwald) back this year so that helps out a lot. Plus we're just stronger in the midfield with some of the incoming freshmen. Other than that we're much stronger as far as depth," he said.

Derenthal said he doesn't set any goals for himself before the season. He only wants the team to improve upon last season.

How many goals he scores or making the all-GLVC team isn't a concern.

"I just try to play my best," he said.

When he plays his best everything else takes care of itself he said.

Off the field Derenthal manages to keep busy.

He is majoring in physics and is involved in the Reserve Officers Training Corp at NKU.

Derenthal also runs his own lawn care service.

As far as a future in soccer goes, Derenthal said he hopes to get into coaching.

"I plan on getting into coaching without a doubt. Probably on the college level. But I'll worry about that when I graduate," he said.

Lady Norse Out Last Thomas More

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

It took five games, but the NKU women's volleyball team defeated Thomas More College, last Wednesday.

The Lady Norse beat the Division III Blue Rebels 15-4, 15-7, 13-15, 10-15, 16-14.

Thomas More came into the game with a 21-3 record and NKU coach Mary Biemann knew her team was going to have its hands full.

"When you play someone that is 21-3 and you've got a losing record you know it's going to be tough," Biemann said.

NKU easily took the first two games of the match and it looked like they had a comfortable lead in the third game up 5-0.

But, Thomas More wasn't about to give up.

Thomas More broke NKU's serve and came back with four points of its own.

NKU scored three points to lead 8-4, but Thomas More was able to capitalize on NKU errors.

The Blue Rebels tied the game at 8-8 and built a 12-8 lead before the Lady Norse could force a sidout.

After the sidout, sophomore Peggy Ziegler gave the ball back to Thomas More when she committed a service error.

But, the Lady Norse didn't give up.

The team battled back and almost tied the game at 14-13, but Thomas More stopped the rally when middle hitter Mary Jo Prickel gave the Blue Rebels a side out off a kill.

Thomas More closed out the game and took the next one to set up the final game.

The fifth game of the match was scored using the rally scoring system. In the rally system, a point is awarded on each serve.

Thomas More's Diane Prickel had the opportunity to give the Blue Rebels the match when she served with her team leading 14-13, but NKU's Linda Schnetzer came up with a kill and tied the game up.

NKU's Becky Cox came up to serve for the Lady Norse and closed out the game for NKU.

Biemann was glad to have Cox serving at the end.

"That was good serving by Becky, she's our clutch (server)," Biemann said. "It was good to have the right server up at the right time."

Soccer Team Splits Pair

STAFF REPORT

After splitting a pair of games last week, the NKU men's soccer team record stands at 8-3.

Last Wednesday night NKU suffered its first shutout of the season at the hands of Wilmington College.

NKU was defeated 2-0 despite outshooting the Quakers 18-9.

Last Friday night at Morehead State University NKU defeated the Eagles 6-1.

The Norsemen were led by juniors Todd Gruenwald and Tom Derenthal with two goals each.

Senior Tim Lawson and freshman Jeff Gough each scored a goal as well.

Sophomore goalie Jeb Snyder had for saves for NKU.

The Norsemen are 3-1 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

Lady Norse Fall To Ranked Team

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

It was an up and down day for the NKU women's volleyball team last Saturday.

After winning twice earlier in the week the Lady Norse entered Saturday's triangular match against Slippery Rock and Saginaw Valley State Universities with a two match winning streak.

The Lady Norse defeated Slippery Rock in the first match of the day 15-9, 10-15, 15-10, 15-10.

The victory extended the team's winning streak and set-up a showdown with the number seven team in the latest Great Lakes Region NCAA Division II volleyball poll, Saginaw Valley State.

Saginaw Valley State took the first game of the match from NKU with little resistance, 15-6.

Early on in the game the Lady Norse were outgunned by the powerful Lady Cardinal attack.

Saginaw Valley State featured a quick set attack. After the match, Biernann said her team's defense of the quick set is improving.

"We're defending the quick attack better," Biernann said.

The Lady Norse had problems defending against the quick attack of Saginaw Valley in the first game.

However, near the end of the game NKU showed signs that they were beginning to awaken.

Freshman outside hitter, Stephanie Carle led the resurgence. She had a kill and a service ace that got the rest of the team's attention.

"Stephanie is kind of our all-around sub," NKU coach Mary Biernann said.

The Lady Norse came alive in the second game and squeaked by Saginaw Valley 15-13.

Carle's play again was a factor. Five of her 10 kill total for the match came in the second game.

NKU opened the third game flat, without the intensity it found late in the first game. The result was Saginaw Valley State building a 9-0 lead before the Lady Norse scored a point.

The Lady Cardinals took the game 15-3.

Saginaw Valley built a lead in the fourth and final game of the match that the Lady Norse were unable to overcome.

Trailing 12-5 in the game NKU rallied and pulled within one at 12-11, but Saginaw Valley forced a sideout and closed out the game with three points.

Although NKU lost the match Biernann said she was pleased with her team's play.

"We did a lot of things right, but we couldn't put the ball away."

Sports Briefs

Pair Suspended Four Games

STAFF REPORT

Two NKU men's basketball players have been declared ineligible by the NCAA for the first four games of the 1991-92 season.

Junior Brian Shea and sophomore Jeff Walz are ineligible because of their participation in an unsanctioned basketball tournament.

NCAA regulations allow Division I and II basketball players to participate in one sanctioned league or tournament from June 15 through August 31 each summer.

Shea and Walz played in a three-on-three tournament while on spring break in Daytona Beach, Fla., in March 1991.

Cross Country Aims For Conference

STAFF REPORT

NKU's cross country teams finished their regular season meets last Saturday at the Earlham Invitational.

The men finished fifth and the women finished sixth in their races.

Sophomore Ernie Brooks led the NKU men in the race finishing eleventh overall in the five mile event. His time of 25 minutes 27 seconds was just over a minute slower than that of Tom Goldsby of the University of Evansville, the winner of the race.

Junior Chris Fitzgerald finished thirteenth in the race.

Amy Wehrman led the NKU women by finishing tenth. Her time for the 3.1 mile race was 20 minutes 43 seconds.

The team's return to action on Oct. 26 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference championships at Bellarmine College.

Dear Dr. Comp

Dear Dr. Comp,

Commas drive me bananas! When I don't use them, I'm wrong. When I do, use them, I'm wrong. Frankly I wish they didn't exist. Help, they're killing me!

--Comma Crazy

Dear Comma Crazy,

You sound like you're about to commit comma kamikaze, proving the old adage that the pen may be deadlier than the sword.

Like the common cold, however, the common comma and its associated ills can cause a crampy style but are not usually fatal.

Most people err by using too many rather than too few commas. Therefore, I prescribe two remedies to lessen, though not eliminate, your comma woes: 1) Use no commas for one entire year. Pay attention during that year to how other writers use commas. When your year of comma fasting terminates, use the commas once again, but sparingly. 2) Whenever you see a comma, spit on the damn thing and rub it out with your finger. I think it will make you feel better.

But then, what do I know? I'm not a for real doctor. I have a master's degree--not in comp!
