

National issues focus of English class survey

by Denise Taul
News Editor

Students in Sally Elliott's English 102 classes conducted surveys on national issues and candidates' standings to compare them with national results.

Many of the respondents to the non-scientific survey were NKU students randomly interviewed on campus during the first and second weeks of October. Others were taken outside the university at different locations throughout the tri-state.

Surveys concerning candidates found that 80 percent of the students questioned were registered to vote. Sixty to 70 percent favored President Reagan, though in some instances they didn't agree with the Republican party's views.

One survey showed that most of those interviewed had seen at least one of the presidential debates. A second survey showed that 53 percent of the respondents thought Democratic challenger Walter Mondale performed better than Reagan in the first debate.

In comparison, a third survey stated that 50 percent felt that viewers didn't have enough time during the debates to examine the issues and to reach rational conclusions. Fifty percent did not change their opinions of the candidates, while the remaining half changed their views somewhat.

Surveys conducted on issues such as abortion, foreign policy, disarmament, prayer in schools and Social Security took firm stands.

Melissa Franks surveyed 43 people and found that 88 percent are against abortion and 65 percent of that number feel abortion should be controlled by law.

Gene Scholes Jr., who polled 50 students on foreign policy, found that 70 percent polled believe American aid to El Salvador should be discontinued. A question citing the Beirut bombings asked if the United States should house troops in hostile areas with a firm response of "no" from 37 of the 50 interviewed.

Of 106 surveyed by Matt Dulaney, Dave Forest and Sally Burgess, 42 percent felt that disarmament would hurt the present and/or future relationships between America and other world powers. Fifty-three people said that the presidential candidates' views on nuclear disarmament would affect the way they would vote.

Another survey showed that of 100 people, 68 do not favor mandatory prayer in schools, but 74 favor voluntary prayer in schools.

Greg Stephens asked questions concerning Social Security to 50 people with an average age of 20.8 years and found that 94 percent believe Social Security won't exist when they retire. More than half said the Social Security fund should be used only for retirement benefits and not to help other programs.

A survey of 150 women done by Annie Brinkman, Carolyn Rison and Kristene Chaney found that women say Geraldine Ferraro is capable of holding the office of vice president, but not president.

Rison said the student pollsters discovered that "feminist" is a misunderstood term with the women surveyed. She said many of the respondents asked what the questioners meant by feminist before answering the question, "Do you consider yourself a feminist?" Twenty-eight percent answered yes, 53 percent said no, and 19 percent weren't sure.

Country's political future topic at luncheon seminar

by Shane Spaulding
Features Editor

At a lunchtime seminar last Wednesday afternoon, Dr. Dennis O'Keefe of Northern's political science department spoke on what he thought might be important issues facing our president during the next four years.

O'Keefe agreed with most of the nation's respected pollsters, who were predicting a landslide victory for the incumbent candidate Ronald Reagan.

O'Keefe said that solving the nation's deficit is an obvious problem.

"However Mr. Reagan reacts to the deficit, he will have to raise taxes, or suggest a bill that will raise taxes," O'Keefe said.

He added, "If the deficit is not decreased, I would think the interest rates would go up, which is not good news — especially for the car and homebuilding industries."

O'Keefe devoted much of his talk to the subject of the president's popularity with the American people. He said the president's personal popularity was "a rather superficial thing that has no long term effects" and would not influence the 1988 Republican presidential ticket.

O'Keefe made frequent comparisons between Reagan and former president Dwight Eisenhower. He spoke of Reagan's ability to "conjure up" an aura

Holiday events to bolster Ministry's recognition

by Steve Rohs
Staff Reporter

A theatrical production, a Thanksgiving dinner, and a Christmas fund drive for the poor are all part of the United Campus Ministry's plans for the holiday season.

The United Campus Ministry is preparing these events in the next month in an effort to show the presence of the ministry on campus. The organization consists of the Baptist Student Union, Catholic Newman Center, Christian Student Fellowship, Methodist Campus Ministry, and Episcopal Campus Ministry.

"The events are planned to try to get a religious emphasis week going," said the Rev. Louis R. Schmidt, director of the Newman Center.

A musical drama, the first of the planned activities, will be presented in the University Center Theater on Nov. 12 at 6:30 p.m. The Covenant Players, a Christian musical drama group from Los Angeles, will present musical plays with a Christian theme. The public is invited and admission is free.

One week later, Nov. 19, a Thanksgiving dinner will be offered for international students. It will be held in the University Center Ballroom at 6:30 p.m.

"The idea is to provide a liaison, a bridge, between international students and American culture," Father Schmidt said.

The dinner will include the traditional food of Thanksgiving, with entertainment provided by students from St. Joseph's School in Cold Spring. They will present a short Thanksgiving play. The dinner will be provided at no charge for international students. The cost is $6.50 for all other students.

The United Campus Ministry will also sponsor a Christmas fund drive for the poor in Northern Kentucky, beginning Dec. 3. All gifts and money will be donated to Brighton Center in Newport, where they will be distributed to the poor in the community. The Army ROTC will assist the campus ministry in the project. "Any other volunteers would be appreciated," said Father Schmidt. "We can never have enough helpers."

Caucus holds mock debate

The Women's Law Caucus held its first-ever mock Presidential Debate on NKU's campus Thursday.

The Mondale-Ferraro ticket was represented by Robin Webb and David Wallace, the Reagan-Bush ticket featured Mac Riley and Alyson Schlenger, while the Berland (Libertarian) ticket was represented by Dan Boaz and Mike Large.

The Republican "candidates" were against abortion, instead favoring that money be spent on adoption services, while the "Democrats" and "Libertarians" views were pro-choice without government control.

The "Libertarians" wanted "people to stop paying into social security and sell government land to fund the program." Both "Democrats" and "Republicans" want changes to keep Social Security viable.

Democrats accused President Reagan of spending millions of dollars on the "Star Wars" space defense system and then wanting to give the Soviets our knowledge.

The United States has spent more than $229 billion on overseas problems, Boaz, the "Libertarian," said. "It's time to stay out of foreign governments and let them choose their own way."

Editorial correction

Jon David Reinhardt, incumbent candidate for state representative from Kentucky's 69th District, says two errors appeared in a letter to the editor on Page 3 of last week's Northerner.

Reinhardt said he has missed only one committee meeting during his entire tenure in the legislature, and only missed that one because of a medical emergency in his family. The letter erroneously said he has missed more than 50 percent of the meetings of committees on which he sits.

Reinhardt also said that House Bill 76, which the letter said was designed to close Chase Law School, had absolutely nothing to do with Chase.

The letter was written by Steve Hoffman, president of the NKU Young Democrats, and also signed by Robin Webb, president of the Chase Young Democrats. Reinhardt is a Republican.

Also, Reinhardt's first name was misspelled in the letter.

of patriotism and positive feelings, much like Eisenhower. But he added, "Over a period of time, people become doubtful about those feelings of reassurance."

Once again in comparison to Eisenhower, O'Keefe said that Reagan's age and health could become an important issue while he's in office, as they did during Eisenhower's last years as president. He said a major fault with Mondale's campaign has been the democratic candidate's inability to bring more attention to Reagan's age and health.

O'Keefe speculated that the issue could play a strong role in the Democrats' 1988 campaign strategy, especially for a young candidate like Senator Gary Hart, who might emphasize strength and "new vigor in the White House".

O'Keefe also feels that Reagan will have a strong influence on the future of the Supreme Court. Five of the justices serving on the court are over 75-years-old, and the president, with the Senates' approval, must fill vacant positions in the court.

Appointees, according to O'Keefe, will most likely be conservatives involved with civil liberties and criminal rights. They will also probably be much more flexible with the separation of church and state and will favor pro-business regulation as opposed to pro-environmental regulation.

Other issues addressed by O'Keefe at the seminar, attended by a little over a dozen NKU faculty and students, were:

- the need to devalue the dollar in regard to other world currencies;
- solving the large foreign trade imbalance;
- the always present issue of farm policy;
- the volatile conditions of the Middle East and how events there will affect Reagan's popularity;
- and the Republican administration's unwillingness to negotiate with the Russians.

Nostalgia buff bothered by Everly Brothers new beat

by Pam Schnorbus
Staff Reporter

Fans of the Everly Brothers who were thrilled about their reunion might not be as excited about their new album, The Everly Brothers — EB 84. It's their first release in over ten years, but it's definitely not intended to be nostalgic.

The album contains ten songs never before recorded by the Everlys. All ten are an attempt at a new sound. On some songs it works, but on some it doesn't.

The first cut, "On the Wings of a Nightingale," works. Written by Paul McCartney, it has an upbeat, sing-along tempo. It is the only song released as a single so far.

"Danger Danger" is my personal favorite. While none of the songs could really be dance tunes, this one does come close.

Two other songs that sound good are "I'm Taking My Time" and "Lay, Lady, Lay." The only way I can think of to describe "I'm Taking" is foot-tapping. The Everly Brothers make Bob Dylan's "Lay, Lady, Lay," all their own.

Some songs have a slight country flavor, like "The First in Line" and "Asleep." "Asleep," written by Don Everly, also uses a synthesizer which keeps the song from being so-so.

Yet synthesizers do not work with "The Story of Me." While the lyrics are good, their voices are almost drowned out by a "static" sound.

Only "More Than I Can Handle" has the lyrics and tempo reminiscent of their old sound.

Nostalgia buffs had best stick with the Everly Brothers' earlier albums. But for those wanting to hear new sounds from one of early rock's' best duos, EB 84 is worth checking out.

Musical smorgasbord offered at Muse Festival

by Kim Colley
Staff Reporter

If you love music, but hate buying expensive tickets, the second annual Muse Festival is for you.

The festival will run from Nov. 8 to 19, and will feature classical, jazz, a little rock music, an oratorio and two operas.

The Symphonic Band will perform, among other works, Mendelssohn's Overture in C and the 1984 Olympics fanfare and theme.

Rebecca Magg, a new flute instructor at NKU who has studied under world-renowned flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal, will give a solo performance during the concert and will perform with twelve other flutists in a "Fantasy for Flutes".

On the second night of the festival, the Northern Choral, the Chamber Choir, and members of the Northern Kentucky Community Chorus will present "St. Paul," an oratorio based on his life.

A concert by the faculty Brass Quintet and a "Keyboard Kaleidoscope," featuring NKU's new French Double Harpsichord, will round out the first weekend of the festival.

Flute instructor Rebecca Magg practices her Muse Fest solo.

The second weekend will kick off with NKU's Jazz Ensemble, featuring singer Eugene Goss. Goss is well-known throughout South America and Japan, and is considered one of the finest jazz vocalists today, said Jazz Ensemble director Stephen Goacher.

The Jazz Ensemble will play tunes by Duke Ellington and Count Basie, as well as some more modern jazz numbers by Miles Davis and others. The All-Star Kicks Band, made up of several junior high and high school music teachers from this area, will make a special appearance.

The two opera workshop productions feature a bit of the unexpected. "The Old Maid and the Thief" is about an old spinster, a maid and her friend, and a handsome beggar. The spinster invites the beggar to spend the night — and ultimately the week — at her house.

The second opera production, "Gallantry," is a soap opera satire about Dr. Gregg, a handsome surgeon, who informs Lola, the anesthetist, of his "long-suppressed" love for her just as he's about to operate on her fiancée.

A performance by the Percussion Ensemble closes the Muse Festival on Monday, Nov. 19.

"The Muse Festival is an effort by the music department to make an offering to the university community," said Goacher. "It's there for people to enjoy."

All performances are free, and will be held in the Main Stage Theatre. For more information on the concerts, call Linda Thierbach at 572-5433.

Devoted cadet merits scholarship

by Julie Schlarman
Staff Reporter

Northern Kentucky University ROTC cadet Capt. Joe Guilyard has invested nearly a decade of his life in the military. His dedication was rewarded in October when he received the prestigious General Creighton W. Abrams Scholarship.

Guilyard is a 27-year-old junior originally from Weedville, Pa., where he joined the Marine Corps. He served six years in the Marines, spending two of those years as a drill instructor and a platoon sergeant in Paris Island, S.C.

In 1976 Guilyard made plans to leave the Marines and attend college. "I was impressed with the caliber of the ROTC program at Northern," he said. "Captains [Mark] Levitt and [Paul] Diamonti and Maj. [Thomas] Madison impressed me with their devotion to duty and pride."

His father's patriotism also influenced Guilyard to join the ROTC program at Northern. "I felt that I could never find another career that would offer me as much pride and honor as a career in the United States Army," he said.

Guilyard doesn't mind telling people what he thinks of ROTC at Northern.

"Northern's ROTC program is excellent," he said. "There is discipline, motivation and a desire to help the average student develop camaraderie and a sense of pride."

He compared the program to a brotherhood or fraternity, explaining that there is an attachment that keeps the graduates coming back.

"Second Lt. Lamar Fowler is a prime example of that attachment," Guilyard said. "He graduated, but he still comes back to aid the cadets. That's something to be proud of."

Being the recipient of the Abrams Scholarship is something to be proud of.

The award is given on the basis of academic achievement, leadership potential and performance in the ROTC program.

The annual civilian scholarship program is sponsored by the National Bank of Fort Sam Houston (NBFSH). Four scholarships are available from this program, one to each of the four ROTC regions. The General Abrams Scholarship is awarded to the second region winner. The region consists of nine states.

Guilyard is a history major with a 3.77 cumulative grade-point average.

"I've always admired American history and Dr. [James] Ramage and Dr. [Michael] Ryan have cultivated this pride," Guilyard said. "They motivate me to be inspired by history."

Guilyard will be a senior at the end of this semester and will be commissioned as second lieutenant in the Army in August.

Ginn pleased with 7th

by Kelly Villiers
Sports Editor

In the end, the Northern cross-country team came up just a little short.

In Saturday's NCAA Division II regional meet at Edwardsville, Ill., the Norse failed to qualify anyone for the national meet.

Yet the Norse still managed a seventh-place finish, with 20 teams competing. That's pretty respectable, if not downright good.

"It was a real good year," said Norse Coach Al Ginn, whose team concludes with a record of 51-24.

The top three teams, Southeast Missouri State, Northwest Missouri State and Ferris State all qualified as teams for the NCAA national meet, which will be held this weekend in Mississippi.

After team qualifications, only the top two individual runners could qualify for the nationals, and Northern could not qualify either one.

All in all, Ginn was still pleased with the results.

"We raced real well with the competition we had," Ginn said. "We would have liked to have raced better than we did, but I'm still pleased."

The top Northern finisher over the 10,000 meter (6.2 mile) course was Don Overstreet, who placed 27th with a time of 33:58.

Ken Hughes, one of the Norse's top runners this year, placed 42nd with a time of 34:50.

The winning time was by a Southeast Missouri State runner who had a time of 31:29.

"I thought they took the top five individuals (for qualifying for nationals), but they only took two," said Ginn. "But when I thought they were taking five I thought we had a chance."

The Norse are still attempting to build a program which currently receives no funding from the athletic department.

Ginn, who will have five runners returning next fall, feels that funding will be necessary to be competitive next fall in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

"You talk to some of the other coaches around here, and they say they need it, too," he said. "I talked to some of the coaches (in the conference), and I think if we are going to compete in the conference, we are going to have to increase funding."

Norse bury Berea for title

by Dave Mendell
Staff Reporter

For the third straight year, the Norsemen soccer team has captured the NAIA District 32 championship with a 4-0 win over Berea Saturday.

This result was no surprise, as NKU was heavily favored to win the tournament, held at Northern this past weekend. During the regular season, the Norsemen outscored the three other participating teams — Berea, Asbury and Transylvania — 18-1.

However, Coach Paul Rockwood did not think NKU had the tournament wrapped up at the beginning.

"When you beat a team like that [Berea], they really want to come back and beat you," Rockwood said.

Berea never offered much of an offensive attack against NKU, taking very few shots at the Norse goal. And when they did, Rockwood felt that it was as much NKU's fault as it was Berea's good play.

"We didn't play intelligently in a couple of instances," he commented.

The win sends the Norsemen into the regional semifinals to play the winner of the King-Covenant game. If King wins, Northern will go there to play. If Covenant wins, NKU will host the game either Tuesday or Wednesday of this week.

Playing on their home field would appear to be an advantage for the Norse, as they post an overall 8-2 record at home, compared with an overall 2-9 record on the road.

"It should make a big difference," Rockwood said. "But I would go to the moon as long as we win and can keep playing."

The Norsemen finished the regular season last Tuesday with a 4-1 win over Transylvania, giving Northern a final regular season record of 8-11.

Palluchi — Who's your A wing dorm friend's current interest?

Do snakes often come out of the current?

Hey Juicy "Cobra" word gets around, people talk. They say your little trips to the dorms to study are more action than talk. Isn't 11:30 p.m. a little late to study, especially on single beds pushed together? Hiassasa.
