Quality Circle Update

In a memorandum to Kathy Dawn, President of Staff Congress, Dr. Gene Scholes stated the following:

"Plans for implementing Quality Circles, or more preferably Employee Involvement Groups (EIG's), have been proceeding steadily. To this point, a great deal of the time and expenses of the project have been devoted to program research and training, prerequisites for successful program installation.

Mr. Mitch Mullins from Personnel Services has been selected as program coordinator, charged with direct responsibility for steering the project and assisting the various EIG's. Mr. Mullins has spent a week in training; he has accumulated the necessary reference materials; and in early November he will complete his preparations at the International QC Conference in Tennessee.

The division of Administrative Affairs will be the source for the project pilot groups, with two departments already having expressed interest in participation. Experience with these pilot groups will lead to consideration of further expansion into the other institutional divisions.

I continue to support the project, and I look forward optimistically to the EIG's becoming a valuable part of the University operation."

The following was written and submitted by a NKU staff member:

A Part of the Whole

I am a part of the whole.
I am linked integrally to others who work around me.
If I do not work to the best of my abilities, we are all less for it.

Our work here is important.
We collectively hold in our hands, hearts, and minds the future of the students who have come here seeking to better their lives.
We must endeavor to teach them and to treat them with integrity, patience, and commitment.

Each and every member of the university community has an impact on the quality of education our students receive.
Each and every member of the university community affects the students by his or her willingness to extend their time, talents, and energy on the students' behalf.

The attitude we collectively convey to the students and to our co-workers is not only a reflection of ourselves and our department, it is a reflection of the university as a whole -- for we are all a part of the whole.
