Funding Shot For NKU Convocation Center

NKU officials have decided not to pursue funding for an on-campus convocation center in the next meeting of the Kentucky General Assembly in January.

Instead, the university has decided to support the efforts of the Northern Kentucky community to secure funding for a convention center in downtown Covington.

The decision was announced by university officials in last Thursday's meeting of the Community Consensus on Capital Improvement Priorities.

During the last meeting of the General Assembly in 1990, NKU's plans for an on campus arena were shot down when the $19 million set aside for the project was deleted from the state budget.

When the decision to delete the money for the NKU project was made, House Speaker Don Blanford, D-Philpot, requested that the convocation center be deleted from the budget because Northern Kentucky legislators did not fully support for the 1990 Kentucky Education Reform Act.

Six of eight Northern Kentucky legislators voted against the proposed reform package. However, the reform act and a $1.15 billion tax increase were still passed by the General Assembly.

Furthermore, Murray State University received $10 million for a new arena after the money for a convocation center for NKU was erased from the state budget by legislators.

The 10-member consensus committee was formed over a year ago to develop a priority list of capital improvement projects for the Northern Kentucky area. Its purpose is to provide a united representation for the area to avoid future conflicts in the General Assembly.

NKU President Leon Boothe, who is on the committee, said the decision to back the convention center will benefit both the Northern Kentucky community and the university.

"Northern Kentucky took a brutal beating in the last session," Boothe said. "But this time we're going in as a united front."

Peter Hollister, Vice-President of University Relations and Development, added another reason for the school's decision.

"We (NKU) believe that a lot of confusion would take place if both projects are submitted at the same time and competing against each other," he said. "This could lead to neither of the two being passed."

The convocation center would be a multi-purpose special events center with seating for 7,500-10,000 people. It would house athletic events, lectures, concerts and conferences.

NKU men's basketball coach Ken Shields said he could see in the past year, the emphasis being put on Covington to get a convention center.

"It was no surprise to me because you could just see it coming," he said.

Shields said, he hopes when the university decides to pursue the convocation center in the future they are supported by the entire community.

"I was aware of what the plans were," said Jane Meier, NKU's Athletic Director.

Meier said she supports the university's decision not to pursue the convocation center because the administration knows the political situation of the area and what is best for the school.

"I support the decision, as much as I would want it (the convocation center)," Meier said.

"I know this campus needs it (convocation center) and the administration knows it," she added. "It will come in time."

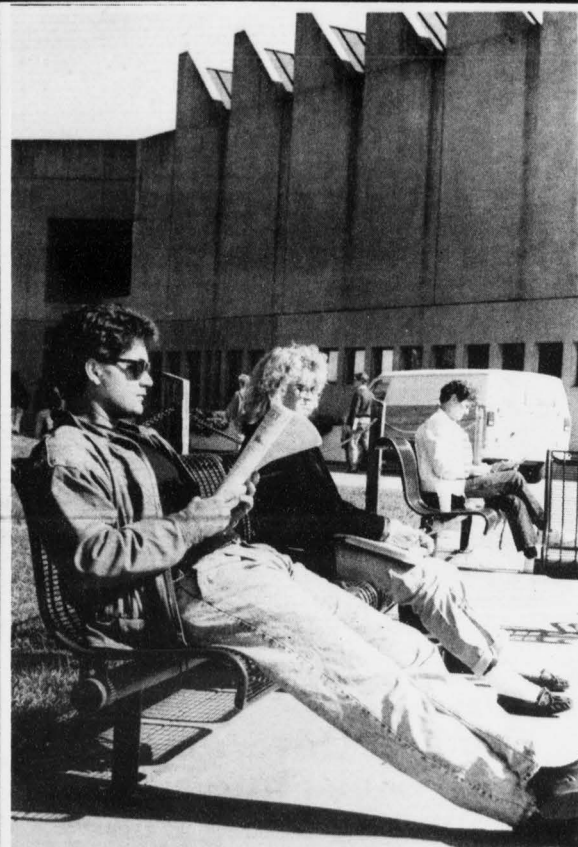

Meier said, the convention center is for all of Northern Kentucky and the convocation center is just for NKU and that could have had an affect on the administration's decision.

Hollister said if he were asked two years ago if the university would not pursue the convocation center, he would have said no.

"But circumstances change from year to year. The tremendous enrollment growth is dictating more pressing needs now than what we would need three years ago," he said.

"We hate to give it up," Boothe said. "But if we can get the convention center this biennial and the convocation center during the next biennial (1994), it will be winning situation for everyone."

ROTC Cadet Commended To Lieutenant Colonel

Last Thursday morning, Sept. 26, NKU Army ROTC cadets stood at attention in the A.D. Albright Health Center as Cadet Rich Alexander was promoted to Cadet Battalion Commander of NKU's Norse Guard Battalion.

University President Dr. Leon Boothe presented Alexander with his new lieutenant colonel rank.

In his new capacity, Alexander will be responsible for the entire 62 member cadet corps.

Professor of Military Science, Maj. Roy Berwick, said that Cadet Alexander is responsible for the well being, training and performance of ROTC's cadets.

"(Alexander is) the leader and mentor for junior personnel who plans, organizes and executes field training," Berwick said.

"The department of military science conducts training throughout each semester in which cadets travel to Ft. Knox, Ky., Camp Atterberry, Ind. and Mt. Airy Forest in Cincinnati, Ohio. They train in infantry tactics, land navigation and outdoor survival skills.

Alexander, 27, is a senior majoring in physics. He completed ROTC Advanced Camp this past summer at Ft. Lewis, Washington.

Advanced Camp is a six week leadership practicum that Northern's ROTC cadets attend between their junior and senior academic years.

During advanced camp, cadets are evaluated on their leadership potential and decision making skills.

They are placed in high pressure situations that simulate combat conditions and situations.

"Cadet Alexander did extremely well at camp, he was in the top 30 percent of his platoon," said Capt. Michael Prioleau, a faculty member in department of military science.

After completing advanced camp, Alexander was sent to Ft. Benning, Ga., for airborne school.

Airborne school is a rigorous three week training program in which participants learn how to safely parachute out of a military C-130 transport plane, according to Alexander.

Alexander said he completed the required five jumps during his three week training period this past summer.

"Cadet Rich Alexander was chosen to be our number one ranking cadet because of his advanced camp performances, his academic grades and his demonstrated leadership ability," said Berwick.

"I consider it an honor to be chosen as battalion commander over Northern's ROTC group," said Alexander. "I am flattered that the military science department put this vote of confidence in me."

Student Government Looks Into Campus Smoking Policy

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Complaints from the student body has led Student Government to look into the current smoking policy on the NKU campus.

Student Government President David Stringer said SG is looking into the smoking policy to see exactly what students want.

Students complain that the cigarette smoke in the hallways is disturbing them and they want something done about it.

"There has got to be a way so that both factions can be heard," Stringer added.

According to Stringer, students actually get sick from other people's smoking. "In some hallways it is really bad. There is no ventilation in these buildings."

There is currently a smoking policy which prohibits smoking in the hallways, according to Stringer. However, there are also ashtrays in the hallway and people tend to smoke where ashtrays are located.

The current policy is in place because of the fire codes, but it is not enforced, Stringer said.

"If there were 500 people in a place with a maximum capacity of 100, that policy would be enforced," Stringer added.

Stringer said he is unsure how a non-smoking policy can be enforced.

"Students should tell SG what they want out of an on-campus smoking policy," Stringer said.

Stringer said students who smoke are violating the rights of those who don't smoke.

"It's like they say, you have the right to swing your arm around as much as you want until you hit someone else," Stringer said. "Once you involve another student, you are infringing on their rights."

Public Safety Provides Crime Statistics to NKU Students

TINA SHORT

Howard and Constance Clery decided to send their daughter to Lehigh University because they felt it was safe. In 1986, Jeanne Clery was found raped and murdered in her dorm room.

The Clery's sued the university and with their settlement helped to bring about a law requiring all of Pennsylvania's state funded universities to publish campus crime statistics.

In November of last year President Bush signed similar legislation which made the law national.

NKU, in accordance with this law (Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act) must publish statistical data on crimes committed at the university as far back as September 1988. The information must be published by the fall of 1992.

The act is designed to give potential students and university employees a means of judging the safety of individual campuses.

Lt. Don McKenzie, of NKU's department of public safety, said in the 12 years he's been at NKU, the department has always made its records available.

"We've never hidden any of our crime statistics or facts," McKenzie said, "they've always been available."

Incidents which must be reported are murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary and theft of motor vehicles. University policies regarding alcohol and drugs must also be published, as well as the arresting powers of campus police.

What the act doesn't do is specify what form the information must take. The data can be published in school newspapers, handouts, catalogs or brochures. Lt. McKenzie said he believes NKU's facts will take the form of a brochure.

The law also does not say that schools must give students the information, only that it must make it available "upon request". Lt. McKenzie however, said that NKU will make the data available to all potential employees and students.

"My feeling, as far as I know, as long as I'm here, all persons will get it," said McKenzie.

Listen Carefully: Acoustics are Improving in the Fine Arts Building

KELLI MILLIGAN
COPY EDITOR

The Fine Arts building was underfunded when it was constructed in 1975. In 1988, funding was made available to expand the building. Now, in September of 1991, the project is almost finished.

"The theater facilities are first rate and work well but have been outgrown," said Mary Paula Schuh, director of campus planning. "Art facilities are satisfactory but outgrown and the music facilities are inadequate."

The most important parts of the new addition are the mechanical systems and the acoustical design.

"Acoustical design is a critical part of the project," said Schuh. "The building will succeed only if the acoustical design is successful."

What will be achieved with this acoustical design, according to Schuh, is not only high quality but also much needed isolation between spaces.

Currently, for example, the walls between the practice rooms and faculty offices are separated only by a wall of concrete blocks. Therefore, the noise travels right through the wall, said Schuh.

Ideally, the extension would be spread out over a couple acres of land so there would be a natural separation between the rooms. However, because of land restraints, the plan had to be reworked.

"We couldn't spread everything out," said Schuh. "We (NKU) had to be clever and ingenious."

The university hired Jaffe Acoustics, internationally known for acoustic design, and KZF Architectural Firm to get the job done.

The main parts of the project are the concert hall, band room, choir room, the studios, practice rooms, classrooms and control rooms, faculty offices and sound isolation.

According to an Architectural Design Narrative (ADN) from KZF engineer Joe Nader, the concert hall will have 650 seats to accommodate multiple uses, including symphonic and chamber music, solo recitals, organ, operative scenes in a concert arrangement, choral music as well as sound amplified concerts and speech at lectures, meetings, and conferences.

A suspended decorative ceiling will be above the audience. The ceiling will consist of sound reflective panels architecturally shaped to enrich sound diffusion. The panels above the audience will be adjustable while the ones above the stage will be stationary.

Along with the ceiling, the walls will also be shaped for sound diffusion. It is important that the walls provide lateral sound reflections to the audience, according to the ADN.

Also, a system of five or six rows of heavy valour draperies will be hung across the room on tracks above the suspended ceiling. When not in use, the draperies will be retracted into enclosures at the end of each track so their absorption will be excluded from the room.

Acoustic treatment is also required in the band room. This treatment will include breaking the wall surfaces into non-parallel architectural forms shaped for sound diffusion, patched sound absorption ceiling and variable absorption which will also employ acoustical draperies on tracks on the walls.

The interior materials will include gypsum board and two inch fiberglass panels for reflection and absorption, said the ADN.

The choir room, located directly above the band room, will also use patched absorption on both ceiling and wall surfaces.

In the studios, according to KZF, sound absorption materials include thick (four inch) fiberglass panels and special low-frequency unit absorbers.

Sound isolation of noise sensitive rooms intruding noise sources is one of the major concerns of the acoustical design.

Practice rooms, classrooms and control rooms will receive special acoustic treatment which includes, along with other things, acoustical tile ceilings, fiberglass panels and carpeting.

Schuh said that the old band room will be the new art gallery, there will be a new theater lobby, and the circular stairway is gone. The catwalk has been rebuilt, the bathrooms enlarged and there will be a new concession stand.

Debate: Split Views On A University Smoking Policy

For a Non-Smoking Policy

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

Student Government wanted some input about what students thought about smoking at NKU, well, here's my input.

Smoking on NKU's campus should be banned.

Completely, 100 percent abolished, no exceptions.

Some people might say this is infringing on someone's right to choose.

I say, the hell with their rights'. There is no guaranteed right in the United States that people should be able to smoke where ever they want.

Smoking in the privacy of your home or car is your business, but smoking in public is invading on the rights of those people who don't smoke.

Smokers at NKU have been given the right to smoke and look what they have done with it. They abuse it.

They irritate people who don't smoke by contaminating the air. Furthermore, they have no regard for university property or for smoking only in designated areas.

I am allergic to cigarette smoke and so are many other people. What about us? Must we suffer and choke for air just so someone else can catch a cheap buzz?

What doesn't make sense to me is that there are no smoking signs already posted all over campus.

On any given day you can witness students, faculty and staff members smoking within sight distance of these signs.

Can't these people read?

Can't they wait until they are at least outside before they put another cancer stick in their mouths?

I guess they are so addicted to this disgusting habit that they can't think clearly and forget about people like me who can't stand smoke.

It is vile, disgusting, gross, irritating, obnoxious and foul.

What makes even less sense in this whole situation is the fact that the administration has placed ashtrays underneath most of the no smoking signs.

Even if the smokers aren't abusing the areas designated as non-smoking areas, they neglect the university's property.

Just last week I witnessed a male student in a restroom put out his half-smoked cigarette on the sink and put the unsmoked portion of the cigarette back in his pocket.

What gets me here is he left the ashes from the cigarette right on top of the sink for someone else to clean up.

What a sap.

Also, have you ever taken the time to look at the carpet in the student lounge on the first floor of the University Center? Well, you should take the time.

Since its installation, the carpet has been decorated by lazy students who put their cigarettes out on it.

I'm sure the sight of the carpet really leaves a good impression on someone who has come to visit NKU.

It's clear that having designated smoking areas on campus does not do any good, so let's ban smoking all together.

Call SG President David Stringer at 572-5149, and tell him how you feel. He was elected to serve the students so make him do something.

Let the administration know how you feel, odds are they have never been in one of the many smoke filled corridors in which we have to suffer just to get to class.

Smoking detracts from the education process here at NKU.

It's hard to concentrate when you have a headache induced from someone's vile cigarette smoke.

It's hard to concentrate when you're gasping for a breath of clean, non-contaminated air.

Against a Non-Smoking Policy

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

You can't smoke on an airline flight that is less than 2 hours. Across the river in Cincinnati, you can't smoke in some restaurants. I think this is getting ridiculous. Smokers are being punished and denied their rights to smoke.

I would like to state for the record that I AM NOT A SMOKER. I am, however, growing more and more concerned about the rights of smokers.

Smoking to many is more than just a nervous habit, it is an addiction to nicotine. Nicotine is a legal drug. You can buy cigarettes in the supermarket, mini-mart and even the campus bookstore. It is not illegal to smoke.

Yet, I am seeing more and more places where smokers are being discriminated against.

Yes. I say discriminated. There are times when cigarette smoke bothers me too, but if it bothers me, I just walk away. I figure it's their right to smoke.

I wouldn't want people telling me that I couldn't chew gum or bite my nails because my nervous habit disturbed them.

Tobacco is Kentucky's leading cash crop. Tobacco companies have been losing money in recent years because of the new health conscious Americans. This is wonderful, but it is hurting the Kentucky's economy.

Every Kentucky resident should be concerned because when the state experiences an economic shortfall, we all pay for it. Literally. Denying smokers their rights in a state funded university seems ludicrous and contradictory.

A lot of students on this campus come to college on money from raising tobacco. The University also receives donations from the tobacco industry.

Not only do many students on this campus smoke, but many faculty and staff members do as well. If the university wants to maintain good faculty members, it can't tell these distinguished professors, "now you can't smoke on our campus."

How on earth would you enforce such a policy anyway? I couldn't see the Public Safety officers pulling gun out and telling them to put it out or they'll shoot. You can ask them to politely put it out, but if they won't what will you do?

And, would you really want to take classes from your chain-smoking professor who has been denied this right between his classes today? It would be another form of hell, I'm sure.

I have faith in our university administration that they would not adopt such a policy even if Student Government would support a no-smoking policy. A policy of this incredible magnitude would cause nothing but problems and would divide the student population.

Even with no ventilation in these buildings, a person would have to be trapped for at least four days with no air from the outside world for a straight 96 hours to be affected by it. I doubt there are students or staff that would stay on campus for that long a period of time.

Now, I'm not saying smoking is great. Enough studies have proven that smoking can kill a smoker.

It all comes down to a person's choice. Maybe other people's smoke does affect a non-smoker, but I don't think the three hours a day that most students spend here would count. A person is much more likely to be affected when they live with a smoker.

Second hand smoke at NKU will not kill you. It may be disturbing, but it won't do any real physical damage to you. No one stays here on campus long enough to receive any long term damage.

The next time you're at The Waterfront, Cooters or Howl at the Moon, think about the smoke you're inhaling there. Now, that smoke is much more likely to harm you. And, I'll bet a number of NKU students spend more continuous hours in these places than the university.

One has to ponder the question, once a person's right to smoke is taken away, what liberties will be the next to go?

Student Input Needed on Campus Policies

Dear Students:

I would like to thank all of you for your participation in the United Way activities. I hope you will continue to support the United Way in the future.

As Student Government begins to address issues and policies throughout the year, we would greatly appreciate your input. One of the best ways to do this is to contact a representative, who can research the problem and present it to the assembly. The assembly is a very diversified group of people and I'm sure you know one of them, at least in passing. The representatives are: Blake Bodkin, Mike Clines, Kevin Davis, Kristi Eubanks, Laura Grabowski, James George, Shafiqul Hague, Sirajul Hague, Dennis Hardebeck, Katie Heywood, Chris Kardux, Steve Koetting, Kristeen Lehmenkuler, Crystal Litz, Lee LeSure, Chuck McFall, Kelly Marcum, Scott O'Leary, Daryl Orth, Rocky Saccone, Tim Settles, Trisha Stanton, Brian Taylor, Jim Vandergriff and Krista Wagner. Contact one of them if you have any problems you would like us to address.

I would like to thank Krista Wagner for all the work she has done for the Alcohol and AIDS Awareness Weeks. I would also like to thank Chris Kardux for all his work with the Escort Service.

As always, if you have any questions or comments, contact Student Government in UC 208 or by calling 572-5149.

Thank you for your time and have a safe week.

Sincerely,
David A. Stringer

NKU Theatre Preparing for A New Season

Dracula is Coming To NKU

Theater students are practicing for their upcoming production The Passion of Dracula which opens Thursday, Oct. 3. Northerner photos by Christopher Joslyn.

The Passion of Dracula Opens Thursday

LAURA OWEN
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

If audience attention is what the theater department wants, it will surely receive it from the season's opening of "The Passion of Dracula."

Last fall, the theater department, including director Samuel Zachary, chose "Passion" to be the season opener. It is hoped that it will encourage more people to come out and see the production.

"It is a spectacular start to begin the season," said Zachary.

"The play offers the participating students a wonderful learning experience along with a good acting design."

The audience is expected to consist of NKU faculty and students along with people from the surrounding areas.

Almost everyone knows the basic story behind Dracula. He arrives in town, terrorizes the people and is eventually killed. This production will have the same focus and will uphold the theme of suspense, mystery and adventure. The underlying mood will be dark, but there will be a certain amount of comic relief to ease the suspense. The play will be suspenseful, but "you will not spend the entire time on the edge of your seat," said Zachary.

The cast is made up of nine people: two women, seven men. All have equally instrumental parts in the play and all appear in each scene at some point. Two of the characters, Dracula, (played by Tom Turner) and Helga, (played by Regan Forman) had to be fitted with mouth pieces because they undergo the transformation of becoming vampires. The mouth pieces aid in making the transformation more believable. The crew, made up of several dozen people, created a two-level set to make this play as realistic as possible.

"(The crew has done) a remarkable job using the facilities available to them," said Zachary.

"The Passion of Dracula" should prove to be quite spectacular. Many of the scenes will be filled with excitement. Several combat scenes, such as stakings and hunts will take place.

To help with the suspense and other climaxes, 18 musical scores, written originally by Phil Kaplow, will be played throughout the play.

The play runs Oct. 3-6 and Oct. 8-13. It will be held on NKU Mainstage, weeknights and Saturdays at 8 p.m. An extra matinee will be held on Oct. 13 at 3 p.m.

Law School Sponsoring Open House

KRISTA WAGNER

Salmon P. Chase College of Law will be offering a series of open houses for the 1991-92 academic school year. Those who attend will be provided with the opportunity to sit in and experience an actual law class.

"This is very helpful for those individuals who have not yet decided whether or not they want to go to law school," said Kelly Beers Diehl, Assistant Dean of Chase.

She also recommends that students visit law schools to see if they feel comfortable in the environment.

The open houses will provide an opportunity to meet members of the Admissions Committee, as well as current Chase students.

"It alleviated some of my fears about applying to law school, because the administration and instructors were anxious to answer my questions, and encouraged me to pursue a career in law," said Nancy Ramsey, a first year law student.

The Aug. 26, 1991 issue of Time magazine reported that over 94,000 college graduates applied for admission to law school this year. Due to the high number of applicants, the more information a person can gain about the various law schools and what they offer, the better off they will be in their own application process.

Chase at College of Law will be offering an open house on the following dates and times:

Oct. 7, 1991-9 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Nov. 4, 1991-9 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Jan. 27, 1991-9 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Feb. 10, 1992-5 p.m.-9 p.m.

Feb. 24, 1992-9 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Advanced registration is required for any one of the open houses.

Answers For Co-Dependency Are Just Over the Rainbow

MICHAEL BUNZEL
NEWS EDITOR

Children who grow-up as a part of a dysfunctional family may run into a problem known as co-dependency.

Co-dependency is the result of some traumatic event in early childhood that goes unhealed and can lead to a feeling of emptiness in some adults' lives.

Co-dependency was the topic of a free lecture sponsored by the NKU women's center, "Co-dependent and lost in the land of Oz," presented by Norma Jean Wilkes, Sept. 23, in the University Center Theater.

"Many of us embark on a misguided quest to find fulfillment in people, places and things outside of ourselves," said Wilkes about co-dependency. "As Dorothy finally discovers, you need to understand that the power to find our way back home, to rediscover ourselves, comes from within."

Portraying Dorothy, Wilkes illuminated some of the traumatic events children can face. These events ranged from being emotionally abused by a neighbor to being physically abused by a man down the street. In both instances, Dorothy was refused comfort from the one adult in her life, Auntie Emm.

This can lead a child to shut down his feelings of abuse and concentrate on only dealing with the episodes they must face, according to Wilkes.

In doing so, these children don't go through the normal developmental stages of childhood, Wilkes said. Like Dorothy's home, symbolizing the self, they are thrown off-center and out of self, needing to find their way back home again.

However, these children can go on to lead normal, healthy adult lives if they have an adult figure to help them heal. They need an adult to intervene and to express to a child that the traumatic event did happen. Further, they need the component of time to help heal those wounds.

Using some of the other characters from the "The Wizard of Oz," Wilkes portrayed the different personality types evident in some co-dependency persons.

The scare crow, being empty on the inside and having a false-self. These people become people pleasers, seeking the approval of others to help their self-esteem.

The lion, representing people who use comparisons to others to gain self-esteem, grew up in a home where their parents put them down.

The tin man, portrayed as these individuals who tend to hide their feelings and bury them so deep that they don't know what they feel. They put up a wall of armor around them, making it hard for them to express their true emotions and becoming intimate with others.

But what becomes important for all these individuals to understand is that they must ultimately face their traumas in order to move on with their lives, Wilkes said.

This is what the characters did when they faced the wicked witch of the west, which symbolized all the traumatic events that can face children, such as abuse, shame, neglect or crisis.

"To heal, it's within us all," Wilkes said. "It's a preciousness we're all born with."

Wilkes moved from Albuquerque, New Mexico to Cincinnati nine months ago to begin a career as a lecturer and to help others with a problem she had to face.

"I wanted to break away from clinical work and begin a career as a public presenter," she said.

She grew up in what she termed "a deceptively functional-looking family." Her family lacked intimacy and its result for her was low self-esteem.

After earning a master's degree in sociology from the University of New Mexico, she founded and was director of the New Mexico Center for Treatment of Eating Disorders in 1983.

Since arriving in Cincinnati, she has started a program, "Direct From the Heart," which offers workshops, seminars and retreats to people wanting to recover from co-dependency problems.

Take Back The Night Addresses Issues

STACEY DURBIN
MANAGING EDITOR

Over 500 marchers braved last week's chilly rain as they carried candles from Cincinnati to the Campbell County Courthouse as part of the second annual "Take Back The Night" candlelight vigil.

The vigil is to increase community awareness of the problem of violence against women.

At the courthouse, Ginny and Paulette provided inspirational music for the marchers.

"We're gonna keep on marching . . . singing loudly . . . never turning back," sang the pair.

Cincinnati Municipal Judge Nadine Allen said she will continue the commitment to women's issues in the legal system, even though she said the court is partly failing in the judicial process.

She says the crime of domestic violence been kept behind closed doors for so long, we have always been taught to only empathize with the victim, not try to get her help.

"(The problem is) we don't understand what domestic violence is," said

Allen. "We are always searching for truth."

Katherine Meyer of NKU's Women's Center said that only one percent of all rapists are convicted, even though one out of every three women will be raped in her lifetime.

"It's pretty horrible," she said. On campus, Meyer said there are no official rape statistics. She knows of one assault that occurred here last year but the person chose not to report it to the department of public safety (DPS).

Ten percent of all rapes go unreported to the proper authorities, according to the Northern Kentucky National Organization For Women September/October Newsletter.

"Education is real important," Meyer said. "A woman needs to communicate clearly to her date, 'this is where my boundaries are' and stick to them."

Another way to address this problem, according to Meyer, is to stop blaming the victim for what happened to her.

"It's never a woman's fault, no matter what," she said. "If a woman does not give consent, it could be considered a rape."

Student Government Sponsors Alcohol Awareness Week

Most students could probably easily parrot several clichés about alcohol consumption such as "don't drink and drive", but in practice, fewer students actually practice what they hear, much less fully are aware of the ramifications of their actions. Alcohol Awareness Week, Oct. 14-18, is geared to educate students on alcohol-related topics.

At 12 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 16, a lawyer will discuss "What Happens After You Get Caught?" in the UC Theatre. Thursday at noon Nikki Hornsby, a chemical dependency therapist will speak in the UC theatre.

All week Student Government will have an information booth 11 a.m. - 1 p.m. in the UC Lobby.

Tentative events include a presentation by Operation: Sober from Louisville, KY, Wednesday night. A finalized list of events will be available in the next issue of The Northerner.

Alcohol consumption is something that affects the vast majority of students at NKU. Perhaps it's time those who use alcohol educate themselves on the consequences.

Greek Week Results

LOWELL A. TRUITT
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Greek Week 1991, "The Week Zeus Got Loose," erupted with an array of activities and sporting events.

The Chalk Drawings kicked off the festivities with the winners Pi Kappa Alpha and Alpha Phi Alpha showing off their creativity.

In the Tau Kappa Epsilon Tug-of-War, Pi Kappa Alpha and Delta Zeta each pulled their way to victory.

Alpha Phi Alpha's Kenny Brown shot his way to victory in the Alpha Delta Gamma Free-Throw contest held Tuesday. Phi Sigma Sigma led the sororities in shooting abilities.

The winners of the Delta Zeta Egg Drop Contest were Alpha Phi Alpha and Delta Zeta.

Phi Sigma Sigma took first place in the Alpha Tau Omega Taboo Game, while Theta Phi Alpha's Misty Capri took top honors with faculty and staff during the Mocktail Reception held Friday.

Finally, Phi Sigma Sigma wrapped it up with a victory in the Alpha Phi Alpha Jeopardy Game.

Alpha Tau Omega won the Public Relations Award and Theta Phi Alpha raised the most money for United Way.

The week ended at the Town and Country Restaurant for the annual Greek Formal.

A Look At NKU's Greek Community

Alpha Phi Alpha

In community service, the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity completed 19 projects to improve the world around them.

A Christmas canned food drive, raking leaves, visiting nursing homes, tutoring, donating furniture and conducting lectures and programs were only a small sample of the projects completed by the fraternity.

AΦΑ also sponsored numerous programs and workshops on campus.

Minority Visitation Day, Black History Month, Campus Unity Dance, Cultural Diversity Class Committee and African-American Affairs Relation Committee are just a few projects AΦΑ brothers supported last year.

Alpha Phi Alpha brothers went to regional and state conferences last year, where they won an award for most registered members in attendance for an undergraduate chapter.

Alpha Phi Alpha received state runner-up for Chapter of the Year and a brother was runner-up for Brother of the Year.

Another member was appointed Kentucky Assistant State Director, and the fraternity won the state Oratoracle Contest.

Currently, the Rho Gamma chapter is planning a D.A.R.E. basketball tournament in Fort Thomas, donating to the United Way and United Negro College Fund and working to increase chapter visibility on campus.

Alpha Phi Alpha plans to keep busy the rest of the year with numerous projects and services for the campus and surrounding community.

Alpha Delta Gamma

Alpha Delta Gamma was founded locally March 15, 1973.

The Delts support Muscular Dystrophy as their philanthropy.

Amy Howard was crowned by the Delts as their Sweetheart and went on to become their national Sweetheart.

Bill Macke is a charter member of the National Order of Omega.

Chris Buchert was honored as recipient of the Chambered Nautilus Award and is a new initiate in the Order of Omega.

Alpha Tau Omega

The fall of 1990 provided Alpha Tau Omega with the largest pledge group ever.

The annual Greek Formal saw brother Lee LeSure crowned Greek God.

During October our annual ΑΤΩ/United Way 24-hour Basketball Marathon took place. Alpha Tau Omega brothers played basketball from 12 p.m. Sat. until 12 p.m. Sun. and raised $500 for United Way.

ΑΤΩ's went to NKU's Child

Development Center to sponsor a Halloween Party.

The spring semester hit a high note when brother Mark Burger was crowned Homecoming King.

An undefeated basketball season came to Alpha Tau Omega.

March brought the brothers of ΑΤΩ back to the Child Development Center for the annual Easter Egg Hunt.

During the Rites of Spring in April, you could find us at the International House of Pancakes. Our brothers and the sisters of Delta Zeta teamed up to volunteer their time at the Northern Kentucky Special Olympics.

We drove vans for the elderly to and from the race track during the Spiral Stakes.

Back on the intramural scene, ΑΤΩ finished first in the spring softball league.

Alpha Tau Omega welcomed in a very promising and worthy group of young men. The semester is off to a strong start and it appears to be the beginning of another great semester for Alpha Tau Omega.

Delta Zeta

Delta Zeta held its National Convention this year in Tarpon Springs, Fla. and the Kappa Beta chapter of NKU was proud to bring home the Total Award as well as the Consecutive Quota Award.

Kappa Beta also brought home the Chapter Achievement Award from State Day, held in Feb. at Eastern Kentucky University.

Delta Zeta has the highest GPA on campus and here's a few reasons why: Dean's List-Susan Mullen, Meredith Simkonis, Shannon Hornbeck and Tami Bitner. Honor Roll-Laura Greis and Billie Lane.

Lots of wedding bells are ringing for our sisters.

Here's a little bit about ΔΖ sisters: Alpha Delta Gamma brother Tim Scanlon lavaliered Tanya Newberry, Rachel Klink is Student Government's Secretary of External Affairs, Michelle Klink started her second year on the Lady Norse volleyball team Kelly Marcum is Panhellenic Association President and Stacey Durbin is Managing Editor of The Northerner.

As a result of the dedication and hard work of vice-president of membership, Shannon Hornbeck, Delta Zeta had another successful rush and pledged 18 girls.

In Feb. of '92, NKU and the Kappa Beta chapter will be hosting State Day for the five Delta Zeta chapters in Kentucky. The sorority is also excited because, being the first sorority founded at NKU, Kappa Beta will be celebrating its 20th anniversary here.

Pi Kappa Alpha

The Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity started its 20th year at NKU with its annual white water adventure on the Little Miami River.

From whitewater, the Pikes moved on to the National Leadership Conference in Memphis, Tenn. where the young chapter became wise men concerning Pike matters. The final summer fling was a small gathering of friends at the Barbeque firehouse.

Thanks to the leadership of Rush Chairman Troy Dobson and his committee, the Pikes acquired 15 men this fall to add to our fraternity.

This year Pi Kappa Alpha will be celebrating its 20th anniversary as the first fraternity at NKU.

Our chapter has many plans for a great 20th year and looks forward to a successful year.

This year the Eta Rho chapter will play host to the 1991 Cumberland Region Conference in Feb. 1992. One of our brothers, Regional Vice President Kurt Keeney, will help run the conference.

Pi Kappa Alpha wishes all the Greek organizations on campus a successful year.

Phi Sigma Sigma

The 1990-91 school year and summer was busy for the Phi Sigs. We received numerous philanthropic awards, took part in numerous philanthropic activities and enjoyed lots of fun sisterhood events.

Among the honors received by the girls was the title of Greek Goddess, won by Alisa Dunn. Alisa also took the title of Homecoming Queen.

Jolene Strunk was crowned by Pi Kappa Alpha as their Dream Girl and Amy Howard was voted Alpha Delta Gamma Sweetheart and was then crowned National Sweetheart at the Deltas National Convention in August.

Linda Tally, an alumnae attending law school at the University of Kentucky, won a national scholarship from the Phi Sigma Sigma Foundation. She was awarded this scholarship at the National Leadership Training School in Aug.

One of the ongoing semester projects was the adoption of an underprivileged fifth-grade class.

Nursing homes and hospitals are some of the recipients of love and activities, as shown when puppies and kittens were taken to the nursing home residents and when candy was distributed at the Children's Hospital.

Last semester, Phi Sigma Sigma participated in the Candlelight Vigil and march protesting violence against women.

The sisters of Phi Sigma Sigma have volunteered time and energy for the American Diabetes Association, Special Olympics and March of Dimes.

Phi Sigma Sigma raised over $600 for the National Kidney Foundation with an auction.

A couple of sisters worked at Muscular Dystrophy Camp and the Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon.

This year's pledge retreat was held at General Butler State Park.

Phi Sigma Sigma had a great rush and, at this time, has 22 pledges.

Sigma Phi Epsilon

The Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity has advanced itself to campus prominence over the last three years.

Their hard work paid off last spring when the chapter received its first national award, the Excelsior Cup, for financial improvement.

Sig Eps are not only campus leaders but community servants. Sig Eps sponsor the Adopt-A-Highway program around NKU, helped Sam Wyche distribute clothes to the needy and raised hundreds of dollars for the American Heart Association.

In terms of campus leadership, Sig Eps are unequalled. The presidencies of Student Government, Interfraternity Council and Order of Omega are all held by brothers in Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Sig Eps also supplied the U.S. Army with its future leadership. During spring commencement, two Sig Eps received commissions.

With a foundation built for the future and the largest undergraduate national fraternity supporting them, Sigma Phi Epsilon can do nothing but succeed.

Theta Phi Alpha

Last year, Theta Phi had a good showing in Greek Week. The chapter won the Best Banner, Tug of War, Raft Races and the Overall Participation Award.

ΘΦΑ hosted two candlelight vigils, one for starving children and another for the soldiers serving in the Middle East. The sorority also had a clothing drive for the needy.

Due to Theta Phi's religious background, the chapter solicited names for a petition supporting religious broadcasts on television.

For fun, Theta Phi Alpha participated in many fun events. The sorority participated in intramural flag football and had a winning record.

In December, Theta Phi Alpha sponsored a Snow Ball Dance on campus.

February brought families closer with the chapter's first annual Parent Banquet. Betty Mulkey was keynote speaker and all parents had a good time learning more about the Alpha Mu chapter.

Formals were a great deal of fun of the Theta Phi's. Kim Knause was selected as Alpha Tau Omega's Sweetheart. Lisa Roberts was nominated for Pi Kappa Alpha Dream Girl and Sheila Stanton and Vicki Estep were nominated for Tau Kappa Epsilon Sweetheart.

Theta Phi Alpha had the largest national honor of any chapter this year when the Alpha Mu chapter hosted the National Leadership Conference on campus June 28-30. Trisha Stanton was awarded a Founders Foundation Scholarship at the conference.

This year has already been proved successful for Theta Phi Alpha when 18 girls pledged Alpha Mu chapter during fall rush.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Tau Kappa Epsilon has enjoyed almost eight years of being on NKU's campus, being founded here December 13, 1983.

ΤΚΕ's are supportive of the Special Olympics and hold various fund raisers for the cause.

ΤΚΕ's colors are cherry and gray and their signature flower is the red carnation.

Norse Beat Bellarmine, Improve To 7-2

BRIAN BALLMAN
STAFF WRITER

The NKU men's soccer team came back from a 1-0 deficit down to defeat conference rival Bellarmine 3-1 last Saturday afternoon at NKU.

The victory was the third consecutive Great Lakes Valley Conference win for the Norsemen and their fourth straight overall.

NKU started out slow in the match. Bellarmine's Dominic Latkovski scored on a pass from Steve Profumo to put the Knights ahead 1-0 just 14 minutes into the first half.

NKU Coach John Toeppen explained the team's slow start.

"They just didn't play as well as they had been. I think Bellarmine played better than they did the first half. We just weren't very aggressive," Toeppen said.

With about 25 minutes to go in the half, senior forward Tim Lawson seemed to wake up his teammates. Lawson took a throw-in from senior George Senfner, dribbled to the middle of the field, and nailed a shot into the right side of the net tying the score at 1-1.

Coach Toeppen felt this was a big goal for the Norse.

"It was what we needed to get back into it," Toeppen said.

NKU settled down after the goal and began playing its control game of soccer. Toeppen pointed to the senior leadership of Lawson and the others as a key to the Norse's success.

"The seniors are playing well. George (Senfner) is playing hurt. Tommy (Ammann) is hurt," Toeppen said.

NKU took the lead with about 11 minutes remaining in the half. Junior Todd Gruenwald passed the ball to junior Tom Derenthal on a direct kick from about thirty yards from the goal. Derenthal headed the ball in for his team-leading eighth goal of the season to give the Norse a 2-1 lead.

NKU held the 2-1 lead at halftime.

The Norsemen controlled the second half much the same way they ended the first.

With twelve minutes gone in the second half, NKU closed out the scoring.

Freshman Trevor Fugazzi took a pass from Senfner, eluded one defender and put a shot past the Bellarmine goalie to give Northern a 3-1 lead.

Coach Toeppen was pleased with the effort of the team after the first twenty minutes of the match.

"After we got out (in the lead) we did what we wanted to do. I was happy with the way we played," Toeppen said.

NKU raised its record to 7-2 overall and 3-1 in the GLVC.

The Norse are in action this week with road matches at Wilmington tonight and Morehead State on Friday.

Senior midfielder George Senfner moves into position to put the ball between the legs of a Transylvania University defender during last Wednesday's game. NKU won the game 2-0. Northerner photo by Scott Jenkins.

Lady Norse Downed By St. Joseph's

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

An excessive number of service errors and a lack of communication between players were major factors in the NKU women's volleyball team's loss of its conference home opener against St. Joseph's College last Friday night.

NKU lost the match 15-3, 7-15, 13-15, 11-15.

The Lady Norse took control of the first game early and were never threatened by the Pumas.

St. Joseph's coach Linda Deno said her team lacked intensity in the first game. However, St. Joseph's regrouped and played strong the remaining three games.

"Our intensity picked up in the second, third and fourth games," Deno said.

After dominating the first game of the match, NKU coach Mary Biermann said her team failed to come out ready to play in the second game.

"We came back in the second game slow. We should have taken it to them, but we didn't," Biermann said.

Service errors again proved to be a problem for the Lady Norse. They committed 18 service errors in the match. Last Tuesday, in a loss against the University of Dayton, NKU committed 17 service errors.

"Serves are obviously still a problem," Biermann said.

NKU found itself down 8-3 in the third game and battled back to take a 13-10

Administration Takes Backwards Step

Point of View

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

NKU's intercollegiate athletic program was dealt a slap in the face last week by university officials when they decided not to pursue funding in the next session of the Kentucky General Assembly for an on-campus arena/convention center.

Two years ago, the talk on campus centered on the university's efforts to secure funding for an on-campus arena.

There was even talk of a National Basketball Association franchise relocating in the new arena.

But, when six of eight state legislators from the Northern Kentucky area voted against Kentucky's Education Reform package, the rest of the state retaliated by cutting the $19 million for the project out of the state budget.

"We'll get it next time," university officials said.

Well, the next time is almost here and the university went down without a fight.

It has decided against trying to get funding for the project from the General Assembly. Instead they are supporting efforts to secure funding a convention center in downtown Covington.

University officials claim that supporting the efforts of the community will be better off in the long run for the university.

How can this be?

Two years ago they said we needed this arena. They still say we need it.

So why not go for it?

I guess you could call it a memory lapse.

The university should be concerned with what the university needs, not what Covington needs.

The university funds its intercollegiate athletic programs from the bottom of the barrel.

The athletic department had to go out and hire a full-time director for the Gold Club to solicit private donations for the athletic program to supplement what the university provides.

This was necessary because trying to solicit the private donations necessary for the athletic program to remain competitive was taking too much of athletic director Jane Meier's time.

Doesn't the university see the benefits of a successful athletic program?

A successful athletic program means more publicity and recognition than the university would know what to do with.

When the athletic teams win, the whole university wins.

Currently, the bread and butter of NKU's athletic program is its basketball teams.

Giving the basketball teams a respectable building to operate out of could go a long way for the rest of the athletic program and the rest of the university.

Regents Hall isn't very respectable, it's the third smallest basketball facility in the Great Lakes Valley Conference when NKU's enrollment is second largest.

There are high school basketball facilities in the Northern Kentucky area the size of Regents Hall if not larger.

We need a larger facility on campus.

Regents Hall isn't even big enough to hold NKU's graduation ceremony.

Because Regents Hall isn't large enough to hold one graduation ceremony for all graduates, the university has to hold separate ceremonies for each college.

Some memorable graduation experience.

It amounts to having separate graduation ceremonies for each home room back in high school.

Wouldn't that have been nice.

Don't the administrators think it's about time NKU sheds its small time, "No Knowledge College" tag and finally start showing people around the state that we are somebody.

Bringing a new basketball arena to the university is the place to start.

It would show the rest of the state that NKU is determined and that we can be taken for real.

Having the funding cut for the convocation during the last session of the General Assembly was, without a doubt, a brutal blow to the university.

But if the university officials were fighters, they would go back to Frankfort in January and say "You cheated us last time, but we're back and we want our arena."

Winners pick themselves up and get back in the fight, they don't run and hide behind someone else.

That's what NKU did when they said they weren't pursuing the funding for the convocation center.

Weekend Roundup

Brooks Leads Men At Earlham

STAFF REPORT

The men's cross country kept its streak of finishing in the top three teams alive last Saturday with a second place finish in the Earlham Invitational.

The women's team finished sixth at Earlham.

The men's team was led by sophomore Ernie Brooks. He finished in second place overall in the men's race with a time of 26:37 for the five mile course.

Junior Chris Fitzgerald finished sixth overall.

The women's team was led by junior Amy Wehrman who finished 10th in the women's race.

Men's results (5 miles):

Huntington 54, NKU 69, University of Dayton 78, Earlham 108, Xavier 111, Manchester 141.

NKU finishers:

2. Ernie Brooks, 26:37; 6. Chris Fitzgerald, 27:19; 7. James Hartfiel, 27:33; 20. Mike Parker, 28:24; 34. Billy Howard, 29:20; 53. John Eldridge, 30:26; 58. Mike Moyer, 30:40; 67. Mike Hall, 31:30.

Women's results (3.1 miles):

Huntington 64, Manchester 71, DePauw 72, Xavier 81, Earlham 88, NKU 111, Wilmington 198.

NKU finishers:

10. Amy Wehrman, 20:39; 19. Diane Wilkening, 21:11; 25. Decky Trotta, 21:37; 27. Cindy Goebel, 22:04; 30. Cecilia Vincent, 22:34; 44. Jennifer Ruschman, 24:07; 56. Radona Wells, 26:04.

Volleyball Team Drops Fifth Straight

STAFF REPORT

The NKU women's volleyball team lost its fifth straight match last Saturday against conference opponent Lewis University 15-8, 15-11, 15-9.

The loss drops the Lady Norse record to 4-11, 0-4 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

Senior Linda Schnetzer led the Lady Norse with 10 kills in the match. Sophomore Peggy Ziegler had 6 kills.

Ziegler led the team with 3 service aces.

lead, but St. Joseph's didn't give up.

After NKU took the 13-10, lead St. Joseph's forced a sideout and then scored five consecutive points for the game.

St. Joseph's served first in the fourth game and quickly had a 2-0 lead. The teams traded sideouts twice and NKU led 4-3.

But that was as good as the game got for the Lady Norse.

NKU lost three of its service attempts in a row during a crucial time in the fourth game. Linda Schnetzer, Shawn Casey and Tamara Ramer all committed service errors at a time in the game where the Lady Norse were trailing 5-4 and St. Joseph's attack was faltering.

After Ramer's service error coach Biermann called for a time-out and told her team they could serve better than they were.

After the time-out St. Joseph's scored four straight points. NKU then called another time-out.

The Lady Norse forced a sideout on the next serve when freshman Ann Hicks came up with a kill.

With Hicks serving, the Lady Norse scored two points in a row.

After a St. Joseph's time-out Hicks scored another point for NKU with an ace.

However, the Lady Norse lost their serve on Hicks next service attempt when her serve went long.

The team's played to the point where NKU was trailing 12-11, but during two key exchanges between the teams, St. Joseph's benefited from NKU's lack of communication between players.

St. Joseph won sideouts twice when NKU allowed balls to fall to the floor with out going after them.

During one of the exchanges sophomore Peggy Ziegler and Hicks let the ball drop between them without going after it.

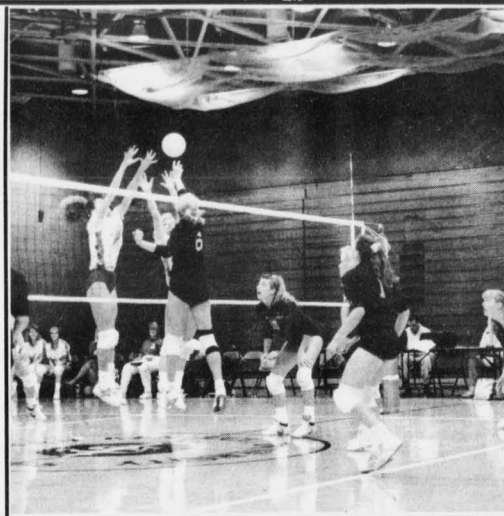

The other time the whole NKU team was near the net and St. Joseph's senior outside hitter Jenny Herman put the ball in the back of the court out of the reach of any NKU player.

Coach Biermann said communication between the players on the court has been and still is a problem for the team.

"We've been working on that for quite a few weeks, it's just a matter of executing," she said.

"I think we think other people are going to get it (the ball) and they don't," Ziegler said of the team's communication problem.

NKU Honors Top Performers at 1991 Awards Banquet

ANN ABBOTT
FEATURES EDITOR

The 1991 Staff Awards Day honored many of Northern Kentucky University's top work performers.

Honored in a luncheon on Tuesday, Sept. 24 were staff members who had served for five, ten, and 15 years of service, and one special award for a 20 year veteran of NKU service.

Martin Hills, of Health-Counseling Services in Student Affairs, received recognition as the only staff member this year to reach the 20 years of service mark.

"She is one of those people who makes the University a special place where dreams come true."

Also honored were those staff members who had outstanding attendance records.

For many, the highlight of the awards banquet was the emotional presentation of the 1991 Regents Distinguished awards.

This year's winners were Jeannine Holtz of the Learning Assistance Center, and Barbara Herald of Personnel Services.

Both women were recognized for their outstanding service and dedication to NKU, its students, and its faculty.

The Regents Distinguished awards were presented by John R.S. Brookings, Chairman of the NKU Board of Regents.

Brookings described Holtz as someone who was required to "wear many hats." It was noted that she "wears them all in style."

"It is estimated that she seldom works for more than five minutes at one task without being interrupted with another," he noted.

Brookings recognized Herald as someone who is "well liked and respected by the University community. Someone who cares not only about the mission (of the University), but also the people behind it."

"She is one of those people who makes the University a special place where dreams come true."

This year's retirees were also recognized at the banquet.
