New chief possible April 5

by Jeannine L. Gallenstein
Editor-in-chief

Dr. A.D. Albright will be holding down the fort at NKU at least until April 5. That's the date set for a special NKU Board of Regents meeting.

Ken Lucas, chairman of the Board of Regents, said "the primary purpose of the meeting" is to discuss the presidency.

Lucas said he believes the new president will be one of the four finalists—Leon E. Boothe, Michael R. Ferrari, Joseph D. Olander or Helen Popovich.

He added that he "doubted if the Board would reject all four of the candidates, although it is always a possibility."

If this were to happen, a whole new search would have to take place.

"I'm sure we'll reach a successful conclusion in the search," Lucas noted.

The two dropped from contention were Dr. Raymond Hornback and Dr. William Chmurny.

In the March 10 issue of the The Kentucky Kernel (a University of Kentucky newspaper), Hornback, who is vice president of university relations at UK, said he had not applied for or actively sought the position. "I was nominated and asked if I would mind being considered," he said.

However, Lucas said, "If a person was nominated, then he or she had to apply to be considered."

It was also reported in the Kernel that Hornback said the faculty search committee, was aware that he might not accept the job, and that led to its decision to drop him from consideration.

Lucas said that he understood that members of the consultation committee dropped certain candidates "because they felt that there were others who were better qualified or suited for the job."

SG tickets announced

by Karen Merk
Copy Editor

With Student Government elections April 6 and 7, two nearly complete campaign tickets have been announced.

Tony Escamilla, SG secretary of external affairs, announced at a press conference Monday that he will run for president of SG. Others on his ticket include: Bob Schaefer for vice president; John Antony for secretary of external affairs; Mary Behan for public relations director; and Amy Heskamp for office administrator.

Escamilla declined to say whether a candidate for treasurer had been chosen.

"At this time we've decided not to announce that," he said.

Escamilla said he has named his ticket the Re-united Party, in reference to the United Party of Phil Grone, former SG president.

Student voters do not have to vote for an entire ticket, but can vote for individual candidates.

"We're running on a ticket because we want to work as a united group," Escamilla said.

Scott Wurster resigned his position as chief justice of Student Government's Judicial Council, and announced his candidacy for president two weeks ago.

His ticket includes: Keith McMain for vice president; Andra Ward for secretary of external affairs; Andrea Grone for treasurer; and Christy Stieby for office administrator.

McMain said the group is still deciding among a few people to run for PR director.

Lindsey service

A memorial service for Thad Lindsey, assistant professor of Literature and Language, will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 26 at Bellarmine Chapel, Xavier University.

Lindsey, described by Literature and Language Chairman Bill McKim as one of Northern's pioneer faculty members, died last Tuesday after a long illness.

Lindsey, 41, taught Literature, and is probably best known for the course he taught in Literature of Survival. "He taught several courses, but that one was uniquely his own," McKim said.

"Many of us remember the leadership he provided in those early days and his important role in authoring Northern's first faculty handbook."

Tired of hearing about coalition

To the editor:

This past week I was paging through our home newspaper, and couldn't believe what I saw—more responses to that letter you printed from the "Coalition for Realistic Curves."

I just want you to know that I'm tired of hearing about it! I can't believe so many people are wasting so much time over that old and less-meaningful topic.

So what I thought I would do is give everyone some real ideas that they could write about, then maybe everyone could forget about that damn, unjust letter. Then they could start writing about some things that are being done, and can be done, to make this an equal, safe, happy, peaceful and caring world.

Here goes: Did anyone see "Special Bulletin" Sunday night, or "China Syndrome" the week before? It really makes you think about the world's safety—we've got enough nuclear power to blow up the world 13 times over. Who the hell wants all this power, or great defense, if no one is alive to use it or live under it!

Can you believe that there are people in this world who won't let special (handicapped) people live in "their" neighborhoods. How selfish, small, and uncaring can people get?

Could you believe that there were groups of grown men who wouldn't march in the [Cincinnati] St. Patrick's Day Parade because of the other person's skin color? I think that's why hundreds of thousands of people died in the 1860s.

What about the millions of unborn babies that are being murdered each year? What about the ruthless gossips, the ugly litter, the selfish thieves, the brutal rapists and murderers, and how about the meaningless pressures that send kids into drugs and crime?

Well, how about it, Northerner, anybody have any answers? Is there hope for our world?

Please don't think I'm trying to tell you that I've got all the answers, but I will say if we all just stop and think about what we are doing and start caring a little more about our neighbors, that there will be more than enough hope that our grandchildren will live to ripe old ages.

Norb Goessling

Parking at NKU is barbaric Get it right

To the editor:

For starters, if you want to find a parking situation that is similar to Northern's, you are going to have to go back to pre-historic times. After all, the parking is barbaric. The only time the lot isn't full is when Northern is hosting a baseball game.

I have even thought of using my truck as a shuttle to bus people to class, but profit is not my interest in this particular instance. Honestly, though, one of the university's major functions is to make education as convenient as possible, but arriving at campus after 8 o'clock can often result in as much if not more than the basic exercise class of fered at Northern.

We have all heard that the early bird catches the worm, but aren't we a little beyond that? Any institution of higher education should look beyond festival parking and for the sake of the students make parking a non-cardiovascular strengthening exercise.

My final comment on this very vague and obtuse, yet annoying consequence is for you to stop deviating from the norms and tear down the U.C. Center ("which is useless because students can watch soaps at home"). For ample parking this is my prognosis of the situation.

Louis Browning

Dear Editor:

It is difficult to shake the image of being "No Knowledge State College" when the following remark appears in a feature in The Northerner.

"One student said he feels NKU hasn't shook the image of 'No Knowledge State College'...."

Please note that the correct statement should be:

"One student said he felt NKU hadn't shaken the image of 'No Knowledge State College'...."

Flyers should accent the modern

To the Editor:

I was glad to hear that the History Department was offering a course this semester in the History of American Women and that they were sponsoring a Women's History Week in March. But I was very upset by the graphics used on the flyers for Women's History Week.

Though the announced theme of the week is "Changing Perceptions of Women", on the cover of one flyer is an upper-class Victorian woman in a bustle, clutching her clothes, whose expression makes it seem she is inebriated; on the

Maybe the men of the History Department thought they were being funny by using such pictures, but the message the graphics convey is that the History Department would rather emphasize the old rather than the new perceptions of women.

By perpetuating the stereotype of women as pampered, silly, clothes-conscious, and easily frightened, they demean the lives of all those women in American history, white and black, whose lives have been characterized by great physical and economic hardship, who have had to struggle against overwhelming odds to attain the rights to education, suffrage, employment, and who are still struggling to be taken seriously in this sexist society.

The graphics on the flyer should have indicated some respect for this struggle, rather than again portraying women as figures of ridicule.

Kentucky attorney general visits Chase

by Tom Weninger
Staff Writer

Steven L. Beshear, Kentucky Attorney General and Democratic candidate for Lt. Governor, was on campus, Tuesday, March 22. He was in northern Kentucky for, among other things, a fund-raiser and a stop at Chase Law School.

A native of Hopkins County, Beshear has been Attorney General since his election in 1979. Previous to that he was the 76th District Representative to the Kentucky House for three consecutive terms, 1973-79.

Beshear said he supports Chase Law

School being here at NKU and would continue to support it if elected.

"There will always be talk about things like this (closing Chase)," he said. "Chase is constantly improving. I think you can tell that from the quality of students here," he added.

Having worked for a firm on Wall Street, Beshear prefers the political life. "I enjoy political life and see myself continuing in politics in the future," he said.

Although he works in the Capitol in Frankfort, Beshear, 38, makes his home in Lexington with his wife and two sons.

As for his chances in becoming Lt. Governor, Beshear feels the race "could be decided on the issue of utilities." Certain executives of large utility companies are opposing his candidacy because he fought against their requests for rate increases, he said.

Beshear recently announced plans to add a new dimension for the creation of job opportunities to the Lt. Governor's job, if elected.

"We will have teams working in concert; key staff members will coordinate with major economic blocks, such as management, labor, coal and agriculture, concentrating on economic recovery and the quality of life in Kentucky," he said.

Concert planned

Livingston Taylor and the Greg Greenway Band will perform in the BEP Auditorium at Northern Monday, April 4 at 8 p.m.

Opening act for the concert will be Papa John Kolstad, who performs blues, rag, folk, swing and country music.

Admission is $2 for students with a valid ID and $4 for others.

In addition, Kolstad will perform at noon that day in the University Center Cafeteria.

For ticket information for the evening concert, call 572-5763 or 572-6514.

DPS helps harassed on campus

by Jeannine L. Gallenstein
Editor-in-chief

It could have been an attempted assault. It might have been just a prank.

The woman was walking to the Fine Arts Building when the incident happened—Tuesday evening before spring break around 8 p.m.

A black man in a jogging suit began making remarks. She ignored them. But it scared her. She told her professor when she got inside the building, who in turn called the Department of Public Safety.

"There was no physical contact," said Lt. Donald McKenzie of DPS. "It was strictly a verbal attack."

The woman filed no formal complaint—the only way DPS knew of the incident was a phone call from the faculty member.

"Our officers looked for him but couldn't find him," McKenzie said.

McKenzie added that the man never got within a car's length of the woman—he only made a few obscene remarks.

McKenzie said that if anyone thinks that someone is following them or acting suspicious they should call DPS, who in turn will investigate the situation.

"That's what the emergency phone [buttons], and cameras are for," he said.

The emergency stations are located throughout the NKU campus.

"There are 17 emergency stations which are currently operating," said DPS officer John Eicher.

Those stations include one on the camera pole between parking lots D and E; on the camera pole between lots B and C; in front of the Landrum Hall on the left on the plaza level; on the light pole in front of the University Center plaza level; Administrative Center inside the Bursar's office; and the girls' locker room in Regent's Hall.

If you are in an emergency situation, press the button at one of the emergency stations. A DPS officer will respond through a speaker asking what type of assistance is needed.

Social issues addressed after shows

Several performances of the plays in the Theatre Department's Y.E.S. New Play Festival will be followed by panel discussions on the social issues addressed by the individual plays.

The plays are: "The Home Team," "Dreamhouse for Madness" and "Inside Out," and the playwrights themselves will take part in the panel discussions during the premier weekend of the festival, April 7-10. People who can respond to the subject matter of the plays were selected for the panels.

"The Home Team," is set in the bleachers as parents watch their kids play ball. It also explores a woman's attempt to come to terms with her divorce. A former baseball player, State Sen. Jim Bunning, will take part in the panel along with a professional marriage counselor and others.

"Dreamhouse for Madness" deals with an ordinary family trying to cope with a son who is using drugs. The theme of this play will be discussed by a social psychiatrist who treats drug users.

"Inside Out" deals with a young New York woman who takes in a bag lady. Two social workers who deal with the homeless will take part in this discussion.

Several faculty members from the Sociology, Psychology and Literature departments will participate in the discussions, along with representatives from the University of Cincinnati, the University of Kentucky and Georgetown College.

Project director Jim Stacy said, "Not only will we be hearing from experts, but also from audience members who will be able to voice their reactions and feelings about the shows. This is a good opportunity for them to respond and to find out from the playwrights themselves what they're up to."

Discussions for "The Home Team" will be held at 3 p.m. April 9 and at 5 p.m. April 17.

Discussions for "Dreamhouse for Madness" will be held at 6:30 p.m. April 10 and 10 p.m. April 15.

Discussions for "Inside Out" will be held at 7 p.m. April 8, and 3 p.m. April 16.

Actress gets scholarship

Northern Kentucky University theater major Carla Roberts, Crescent Springs, has been awarded a $2,000 cash award scholarship for graduate work.

The actress was one of three finalists from a 10-state region and was interviewed by a judging panel at the Southeastern Theater Conference in Savannah, Georgia. Her selection was announced at the final banquet, whose special guest this year was actress Mercedes McCambridge.

"Carla epitomizes the spirit of the NKU theater program," said Dr. Jack Wann, coordinator of theater. "She was not a 'star' when she came here and has had to work hard for her academic standing and her career development."

Roberts has played parts in several NKU theater productions: "Damned Yankees," "Say Goodnight Gracie," "Good Woman of Setzuan" and "Luann Hampton Lavery." She has also danced in "Decade of Eras" and the annual Dance Concert.

She has held an internship at Cincinnati Playhouse in the Park and acted in productions of Macbeth, Peter Pan, The Birdbath, and Laundry and Bourbon.

Bush in new position

by Karen Merk
Copy Editor

SG President Mary Penrod announced two new positions on Student Government's Judicial Council at Monday's SG meeting.

Jeni Bush will be the new chief justice, replacing Scott Wurster, who resigned so he could run for SG president in the coming elections.

Penrod recommended Patty Seiter for the position left empty by Bush, and the assembly approved Seiter's nomination at the meeting.

Bush, currently a member of J-Council, was elected chief justice by the other council members.

In other business, Office Administrator Marcus E. Hun announced the resignation of Professional Studies Academic Senator Tim Eviston. Eviston cited lack of time as the main reason for his resignation.

Legal Studies Representative Vicki Davidson expressed concern over several policies affecting Chase Law School students.

Davidson said several Chase students have discussed with their deans a grade appeal process. No policy exists at Chase for grade appeals, and the students would like to change that, she said.

Professors and deans at Chase say that because most exams in law school are essay tests, grading fairness is more difficult to determine than in objective tests, Davidson said.

She asked for suggestions from the assembly, and Penrod suggested Davidson meet her after the meeting to discuss it.

Davidson also expressed the concern of her fellow students, who want lights in the parking lots near the tennis courts. "Our night students have to walk out there after 10 p.m.," she said.

Davidson also announced that Friday is "Libel Night." Chase students will have a party at the Cold Spring Firehouse beginning at 9 p.m.

For $2, each student gets refreshments, music, and a chance to poke a little fun at the professors, Davidson said.

Each class will put on "a skit or two" satirizing the profs," she said. And this year, it is rumored that the profs might libel some students, too.

Ralph Sloan

Sloan elected president of Student Bar

Ralph W. Sloan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Sloan of Lexington, was elected president of the Student Bar Association Chase College of Law for 1983-84.

Sloan is a graduate of Bryan Station High School and has a B.S. in accounting from the University of Kentucky.

Other officers are: Don B. White, Highland Heights, day vice president; Sam A. Day, Burlington, evening vice president; Leslie A. Jolly-Lilly, Alexandria, secretary; and Matthew L. Darpel, Edgewood, treasurer.

New program announced

The Department of Business Administration of Northern Kentucky University announces a new baccalaureate program in Food Marketing/Management and invites applications for the position of director. The director will implement and oversee program development, have six-hour teaching load, and is responsible for development of industry contacts essential to program success. It is a temporary, full-time position.

A Ph.D. is required of applicants with academic background. Industry executives seeking a new career in academia are encouraged to apply. All candidates must have a strong background in food management, marketing or related areas of food industry. The position begins August 15, 1983. Salary is competitive; rank dependent on qualifications. Application deadline: April 4, 1983. Send application to:

Gary Clayton, Chairman
Department of Business Administration

The scholarship is to be used for the 1983-84 academic year. Applicants should submit completed paper to the Financial Aid Office.

Student returns

Northern Kentucky University sophomore Marty Kennedy, Ft. Wright, just returned from West Germany where he was on scholarship studying at the Goethe Institute.

The Covington Latin graduate, son of Daniel J. and Margaret Kennedy, is looking toward a career in aeronautical engineering and is concentrating on math and computer sciences at NKU. His German studies at Northern led to his two-month sojourn.

The 19-year-old received tuition and housing and 600 marks (about $275) for food and pocket money. Northern paid a percentage of his air fare.

"The school was in Iserlohn," explained Kennedy, "which is about 100 miles north of Frankfurt. We attended a conversational German class from 8:30 in the morning until early afternoon, five days a week."

His fellow students were from all over the world... mostly Arabs, but also from as far apart as Africa and Korea. My roommate was Greek and, although we understood little of each other's language, we helped each other in German.

"The weekends we traveled; all over Germany and I got to go to Austria and Paris." Those travels allowed the students to use their newly acquired expertise in German. "After the first few minutes we spoke nothing in the class except German."

He's now back in his classes at Northern.

Reception Center is Northern's hospitality house

NKU Alumni/Reception Center

by Tom Weninger
Staff Writer

Here is a question for all of you trivia buffs out there.

Where is the NKU Alumni Reception Center?

No, it's not in the University Center. Nope, it's not in the Administrative Center either. Skyline Tavern isn't it. Enough of this grueling torture.

The Alumni Reception Center is located at the intersection of Nunn Dr. and US 27. Anyone who lives north of Hardee's probably didn't know; but just to the left of the main entrance to campus is a stately yellow brick house with a separate garage.

The house originally belonged to the Pompolio family. When the land purchases for the university were made in 1968, 1969 and 1970, the house was obtained and preserved. It was originally to have been the university president's residence but Dr. Steely chose to live in Ft. Thomas. The house has since been designated as the official NKU Alumni Reception Center.

"The house was in pretty bad shape but we have done a lot of work to it," said Brenda Rigg of university relations. Rigg schedules all of the guest to the house and also pays the bills. "It has worked out great for the university," Rigg said. "We usually have guests at least half of the nights of any given month."

Maintenance is handled largely by Physical Plant. However, the university employs a couple to watch the house and make the guest comfortable. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Miller are part-time employees of the university. They were hired in late 1981 when the couple who had the job retired.

Upstairs are two guest bedrooms, a powder room and the Millers' living quarters. Downstairs are two kitchens and entertaining facilities.

"One major drawback is the lack of a guest bathroom on the second floor," Rigg said. "The guests must bathe on the first floor and then walk back upstairs to their room."

Mrs. Albright and Rigg have done all the decorating. "Physical Plant has put up new plasterboard in some of the rooms as well as new paint and wallpaper," Rigg said. "Also in one of the kitchens we have installed a new stove and a new refrigerator."

Ironically, none of the presidential candidates interviewed on campus chose to stay at the Reception Center.

Stranglers Feline: A successful experiment

by Rick Simms

Northerner Contributor

*"Sentimental through the night
Sharing secret candlelight
We're away...everyday.
Laughing, joking just sustains
Situation quite insane
Flowing wine...quite sublime.
Not so far for me to say
I could take you there today.
Let's Tango in Paris."*
—Let's Tango in Paris—Stranglers.

The Stranglers are not for everyone. Somewhat reminiscent of the Doors in both musicianship and poetry, they are a good solid rock and roll band. But, The Stranglers are not just a good rock and roll band (the same as Fyodor Dostoyevsky was not just a good author).

They do not limit themselves to chronicling and complaining about certain contemporary actions and social conditions. Instead they dig deeper to find the underlying forces which control and guide those phenomenon. The Stranglers, like the Doors, travel to the "illud tempus" in order to create scenes whose underlying philosophical and metaphysical motivations demonstrate themselves in well-constructed works of art.

Their latest album, Feline, is another step in this constant evolutionary quest for discovery. With its acoustic guitar and flute, Feline is more subdued and poetic than some of their earlier offerings. It contains nine new tracks and one, "Golden Brown," from their last European LP, La Folie.

Feline opens with "Midnight Summer Dream," which subtly recounts the contents of a dream of perfection. "Small World" features a strange harmonic guitar and flute track. "Golden Brown," with its swashbuckling harpsichord rhythm brings the feeling and smell of a much older time and place.

"Let's Tango in Paris" is an invitation to share in Dionysic pleasures.

"Paradise" attempts to crush pipe dreams with its final realization: "I don't think anyone's ever felt paradise because paradise is based on lies."

The nightmarish "All Roads Lead to Rome" creates a montage of the fall of Rome and modern civilization.

The Stranglers' art goes much deeper than music and much older than rock and roll. Feline is somewhat different from other Stranglers albums. It is however, a successful experiment.

Softball team rebuilds

by Tom Gamble

Sports Writer

Northern Kentucky University softball coach Nancy Winstel faces a huge task. She must figure out how to replace superstar Brenda Ryan and produce with a team of freshmen.

The Norse posted a 29-3 mark last season, including a second-place finish in the tough North Carolina Invitational. NKU was also crowned KWIC champions and appeared in the AIAW Southern Region Tournament.

Winstel hardly expects a banner year, but foresees a promising season. This bright picture still depends on the play of six veterans and a crop of talented freshmen, according to Winstel.

"We have basically six players with extensive game experience and their ability to provide leadership will be a big factor in our success," Winstel said. "Also, our freshmen have to gain experience early and come around."

Last season the Norse were blessed with depth, with ten to twelve players capable of filling any problem gaps. This season, the freshmen must adjust to that role.

"Our freshmen are definitely a group of hard workers," Winstel said. "They all play summer ball and this type of competitive experience should prove beneficial."

One area the Norse must prove infallible is defense. With a limited supply of power, the Norse may find great allotments of runs scarce. Projecting limited power, Winstel stresses the importance of defense.

"We will rely on defense, much the same way as we did last year," Winstel said. "We should be a little faster this year, but our power will not be abundant."

Leading the Norse attack will be senior shortstop Pam Patrus. Patrus returns for her final season with the highest batting average of the returning players. She hit .434 while appearing in a team leading 31 games.

Along with Patrus, other returning players include Kathy Sneed (.256), Sandi Woeste (.404), Lisa Attinger (.356), Sharon Jagoditz (.500) and Karen Townsley (.333).

Accompanying the veterans is a group of talented freshmen, who must step in and fill the various gaps opened through graduation. Of the six newcomers, four played summer softball with Sweeney Chevrolet, one of the top teams in the country.

These players include Deb Fields, Brenda Kent, Susan Grau and Vicki Hendricks. All four should battle for starting positions, with a strong chance of freshman Susan Grau to assume the pitching slot.

The other two freshmen, both from Kentucky, are Kelly Conner and Lori King. Conner figures to fight for a starting outfield slot, while King will help in the infield.

Along with the freshmen, the Norse have three veteran players that possess little game experience. They are Marilyn Enzweiler, Maggie Doyle and Donna Fuchs. Despite limited game experience, coach Winstel sees a need for their ability to produce.

"We need to get some help from these people, in order to take some pressure off of our freshmen," Winstel said. "Besides gaining game experience, we would like for our freshmen to be able to watch our veterans and learn about the college game."

Winstel is definitely glimpsing agony at the thought of penciling in an opening day lineup card. The reason for this distraught is the ability of each player to help in a certain aspect.

"At this moment, things are up in the air," Winstel said. "There are a few positions locked up, but the majority are open for competition."

Although a grin crosses Winstel's face when discussing the unseasonably warm temperatures of late, she indicates a previous fear of a long, harsh winter. Her proposed solutions, a conditioning program led by the senior players, has been going on since January.

Facing an upcoming trip down south, Winstel sees a large advantage to early season preparation.

"Going south is a tough situation, because most of the teams have played about ten games when they play us," Winstel said. "The way the teams down there play it is necessary to take every available access to early season play."

The early season trip may be a telling tale to the entire Norse season. With the freshmen receiving a quick picture of tough college competition, their adjustment during the trip could serve as a major relief to Winstel.

"Our journey down south should tell us a lot about our year," Winstel said. "The freshmen are going to be a factor right from the start, and the trip will be a good college competitive tournament."

Pikes lead intramurals

by Stephanie Parr

Staff Writer

When it comes to NKU intramural sports, the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, or Pikes, lead the pack in everything from archery to volleyball. With a record that is unmatched by any other NKU organization, their success has branched out to other campuses.

Recently the NKU Pikes were the recipients of the prestigious Regional Sports Award. They competed with 18 other Pi Kappa Alpha chapters including UK and Eastern.

As a five-time division champions and three-time all campus champions, the Pike's flag football team has dominated the competition. In 1980 the Pikes went to the Michelob Light National Flag Football Tournament held at the University of New Orleans. The tournament consisted of 80 men's teams from small colleges as well as major universities across the nation.

Out of those 80 teams the Pikes of NKU finished in the top 20. They were invited back to the national tournament in 1981 but were unable to attend due to lack of funds.

Intramural basketball is another Pike success story. They have been division champs for the past six years, Greek Week champs for the past five years, and overall campus champs for three years.

On March 18, the Pikes will challenge the crew from Channel 12 in a basketball game. The game will be held at St. Thomas Gym in Ft. Thomas at 8:00 p.m.

The Pikes list of winning records also includes such intramural sports as volleyball, swimming, floor hockey, table tennis and archery.

When Pike members were asked to comment on their reasons for success, two words were continually mentioned—leadership and attitude.

"The fraternity itself teaches a lot of leadership," said Pike Corresponding Secretary Bob Schaefer. "We have a winning attitude in all the things we do—including sports."

Another Pike member seems to share basically the same sentiments.

Rich Middleton, head of Pike alumni relations, said, "brotherhood, enthusiasm, and strong leadership account for our [the Pikes] success."

Pike President Chip Jurgens sees another advantage his teams have over some others. Unlike some teams in which members are occasional acquaintances, the Pikes have a special bond of friendship that carries over onto the athletic field.

"Being close-knit helps make us successful," Jurgens said. "When the going gets tough, you'll go the extra distance because you're doing it, not only for yourself, but for your best friends."

But being successful can also have its drawbacks as new Pike member Mike Browne points out.

"It's not easy to stay on top," Browne said. "Other fraternities get especially fired-up to beat you."

Intramural sports is just one area of the many that the Pikes are "winners" in. They perform many services for the surrounding communities and stress community involvement to all members. They also carry the highest GPA among the fraternities at NKU.

The Helter Survey, a national independent survey conducted on student organizations, ranked the Pikes the number one fraternity at NKU. The ranking was based on total number of members and all-round quality performances.

When asked what being in the Pike fraternity has done for him, Schaefer, a graduate of Covington Latin School, replied, "Latin School taught me how to work. The fraternity expanded that learning to include looking ahead, setting goals, and dealing with people."

When asked that same question Browne answered, "Through the fraternity I have met a lot of people and made a lot of friends. It has helped me adjust to college easier."
