Jamula Jams NKU's NCAA Hopes

JOHN REITMAN
STAFF WRITER

Regents Hall has provided the Lady Norse with the home-court advantage over the years, but when tournament time comes they act like they've never seen the place before.

The Great Lakes Valley Conference regular-season champions were hosts of the women's NCAA Division II tournament Great Lakes Region first and second rounds. And only the day before the tournament started, NKU's head coach Nancy Winstel and senior forward Christie Freppon were named the conference's coach and player-of-the-year, respectively.

In the back, or maybe in the forefront, of everyone's mind was the awaited rematch between the 12th-ranked Lady Norse and 6th-ranked Bellarmine College, which was the GLVC runner-up.

While the No. 1 seeded Lady Norse were entertaining thoughts of getting another crack at the Belles, they were ambushed by 4th-seeded Northern Michigan, 67-63, at Regents Hall.

The Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference tournament champions used the inside strength of their 6-foot-1 tandem of Lisa Jamula and Deanna Sutton and the outside shooting of Amy Boynton to give the Lady Norse an unexpected jump on their spring break.

"They didn't do anything we haven't seen before," Winstel said. "We got videotapes of them and they did everything we thought they'd do. Except beat us."

"Their two post players are very good athletes," Winstel said. "Number 40 (Jamula) is constantly crashing the boards."

Jamula was fronted by NKU's Amy Middleton most of the night and this gave her an unobstructed path to the basket every time the guards passed her the ball.

"In the GLIAC everyone double or triple teams me," Jamula said. "I was very confident I would have a good game (when NKU played her man-to-man). I thought they could have been more aggressive."

"When they (opponents) front me, the guards rotate the ball," she said. "They rotated the ball and I had her boxed out. I don't know why they did it," she said of the Norse defense, "because I don't have a great turnaround jump shot."

"In the GLIAC there's not a team that is going to play Lisa one-on-one," NMU coach Mike Geary said.

The loss to Northern Michigan was NKU's third consecutive first-round tournament loss and its fourth in a row dating back to a loss in the Final Four in 1987.

The last time the Norse hosted the NCAA tournament, in 1988, they lost in the first round to Lake Superior State, then coached by Geary.

"I think anytime you come in and beat a Northern Kentucky team you're beating not just a great team but a great program with tradition," Geary said.

The Lady Wildcats employed a loose man-to-man defense and some 2-3 zone to collapse on Freppon. Bothered by a season-long back ailment, Freppon scored just 11 points in the game, eight below her average.

Those 11 points brought Freppon's career total to 1,339 points, good for fifth on the all-time scoring list at NKU.

"I was worried what I'd be able to do, if I could even play," Freppon said after the game.

"Deanna did a great job," Geary said. "Everytime she (Freppon) scored Deanna made her earn it. She has a great wingspan."

After a season-ending slump claimed the scoring ability of Norse guard Lori McClellan, the pressure to score fell squarely on the shoulders of Middleton. She responded with 18 points and nine rebounds, good enough for her to be chosen on the all-region tournament team.

The first half was a seesaw battle, in which the lead changed hands 16 times, and the Norse went ahead by three points with 5:23 left in the half. While Middleton and Annie Levens were busy keeping the Norse close, it was the backcourt of NMU that proved to be the difference of the game. Behind the ball handling of point guard Nichole Leibold, the Lady Wildcats broke the Norse press with relative ease to hit the open shooter.

"I thought it was tough, but not as tough as some of the teams in our conference," Leibold said of the NKU press.

While the Lady Norse shot a pathetic 0-7 from the three-point line, NMU put on an exhibition of timely three-point shooting. A three-pointer by Michele VanZee tied the score at 21 and another by Wendy Jamula, with five seconds remaining, gave NMU a 32-31 lead at the intermission.

Boynton connected on a trio of three-pointers in the second half. One came with the score tied and another with NMU behind by one point. Her final three-pointer expanded the Lady Wildcats lead to five points with 4:28 left in the game.

"Our whole thing is to establish the inside game and work it inside out," Geary said.

"Every time we got one (a three pointer) it seemed like a six-pointer."

"They're a solid inside team and a solid outside team," Levens said. "We tried to stop the inside game. But when you stop the inside game they hit the three."

After NMU built a seven point lead on a Jamula layup the Lady Norse were able to cut the lead to 65-63 when Libby Moses picked up a loose ball underneath the basket and put it in with 24 seconds left in the game. But Leibold hit both ends of a one plus one six seconds later to close the scoring at 67-63.

The biggest defensive play of the game occurred with 15 seconds remaining. After Jamula missed the front end of the one and one, Freppon came away with the rebound. Jamula stripped the ball away as Freppon streaked by and preserved the victory for NMU.

Jamula led both teams with 26 points and 15 rebounds. The Norse were led by Middleton's 18 points and Freppon's 11 rebounds.

Students Outweigh Night Services

LESLIE C. FARRIS
NEWS EDITOR

It seems like a growing complaint at NKU: a student leaves work, arrives on campus to attend class but can't find a decent parking space.

During class break, the student would like to eat something but had the vending machine fare last night.

To top it all off, the student needed to speak with someone in financial aid but didn't have time to call during work.

The student wants to know: "How come if there's thousands of students here at night—there must be because I can't find a place to park—I can't get something to eat or get my question answered?"

NKU's high number of nontraditional students means there are many students on campus at night, and NKU does provide some services to meet their needs.

According to NKU student attendance data for spring semester 1991, nearly as many students are in class on the Highland Heights campus during the evening as there are during the day. For example:

- On Monday, 3,262 students are in class at 10 a.m. and 762 at 3 p.m. At 6:30 p.m., 2,129 students are in class.

- On Tuesday, 3,177 students are in class at 10 a.m. and 787 at 3 p.m. At 6:30 p.m., 2,769 are in class.

- On Wednesday, 3,206 are in class at 10 a.m. and 655 at 3 p.m. At 6:30 p.m., 2,227 students are in class.

- On Thursday, 3,194 students are in class at 10 a.m. and 635 at 3 p.m. At 6:30 p.m., 2,018 students are in class.

Department of Public Safety Lt. Don McKenzie, who worked at the University of Missouri-St. Louis before coming to NKU, said he found NKU very different when he first arrived.

"Essentially, DPS and the Physical Plant are the only game in town 24 hours a day, seven days a week," McKenzie said.

He said NKU is different from more traditional campuses where many services are offered to students at night.

"We've asked that more services be offered at night," McKenzie said. "I'm sure down the road we'll have them."

Currently, NKU's bookstore and the Norse Grille remain open until 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. McKenzie noted such night services as the bookstore and food service would be helpful.

"It would save people from going off campus and running back and forth," McKenzie said.

Dean of Students Bill Lamb said when they need something, many students experience difficulties in reaching university offices in the evening.

"That may be the most important thing in the life of the student at that minute, but that doesn't justify keeping an office open five nights a week," Lamb said.

He explained many university services offer extended evening hours; the university simply needs to improve awareness about service availability.

Normal university office hours are 8:15 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The registrar, admissions, financial aid, bursar and other offices have some extended hours to aid students who work full time.

Sometimes students need to reach these offices but do not know the phone number, so they call the university operator. However, the university switchboard closes at 4:30 p.m., and the students receive a recorded message.

"The school is still working, we're just unavailable to give information and direct phone calls," said Charlene Wray, telecommunications supervisor.

She noted the recorded message informs callers to contact the Department of Public Safety in case of an emergency. She said students should not call DPS just to find other university phone numbers.

Wray recommended using the white pages, the student directory or staff/faculty directory to find office numbers. The three publications list most university office phone numbers.

Help is also available for students who have trouble picking up their parking sticker during regular office hours.

"We work with them the best we can," said Pat Morris, who works in the parking office.

She said there are two alternatives for

Students Await Dorms

LESLIE C. FARRIS
NEWS EDITOR

If you're looking for campus life to improve at NKU, don't hold your breath. The controversy holding up the construction of the new dorms is also holding up improvement of NKU's nighttime activities.

Dean of Students Bill Lamb said with the additional on-campus students, NKU would have the base needed to provide more evening activities.

"That whole area of campus life will change when we get 1,000 people living on campus," he said.

Currently, many recreational services are not used enough to warrant offering evening hours. The A.D. Albright Health Center is the exception to this rule.

Now, the Norse Grille closes at 3 p.m. Friday and at 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Entertainment activities are held during the days. The game room, which is scheduled to remain open until 8 p.m., is only open when student workers are available; budgeting makes it impossible to have a student on duty there at all times or on the weekends.

Lamb said when the new dorms are finally built, he would like to see a food service facility open until 10 or 11 p.m. Entertainment shows could be offered in the evenings or on Friday nights. NKU could also show movies for an inexpensive charge to students.

"Once we get a campus base, hopefully off-campus students will come back to be with those who live on campus," Lamb said.

NKU dorm residents currently have no cafeteria or commons areas available in the residence halls. The new dorms would include such an area.

The university currently has 396 dormitory spaces. The new dorms would increase dorm bed availability to 1,000. However, state and federal officials are presently investigating the possibility the new dorm construction contract was handled inappropriately. Construction has been delayed until the matter is resolved.

Health Insurance Questioned

The Board of Student Body Presidents in Kentucky is in the negotiating stages of exactly what should be done in opposition to Senate Bill 239 (mandating all full-time students to carry health insurance).

NKU Student Government President Michelle Deeley said the board is looking into a number of options to voice their opposition to the bill.

Waiting until the 1992 legislative session, the board has discussed two options: a consistent letter writing campaign to legislators and declaring the bill unconstitutional.

Some schools are supporting the last of the options, Deeley said. NKU is not tied into anything and does not support this particular option.

By declaring the bill unconstitutional, the board will take legal action against each university, Deeley said.

Law prevents the board from suing the state, so the board would be forced to take action against each university's (state funded and private) board of regents.

Deeley said she does not support this option.

"There are too many questions left unanswered," Deeley said. "I will not vote for anything I'm not sure of."

Deeley is concerned with the many repercussions that would come along with supporting this option.

Deeley said she is worried about the cost of filing suit. She said just finding out if the bill is unconstitutional would cost more than $500. Financing the entire thing will cost much more.

Deeley said she does not want Student Government or the students to pay for this.

Deeley said she is also not sure of how many universities are involved. The board would like private schools to get involved as well if they vote on this particular option.

It will be a very long and expensive process, she Deeley. Deeley said she feels there must be a better way.

Shawn Lohman, president of the Board of Student Body Presidents and the Student Government Association president at the University of Kentucky, has asked the Attorney General Fred Cowan for his opinion of the constitutionality of this bill. The board is waiting for the answer.

"No vote has been made yet, Deeley said. "NKU is not tied into anything. I am concerned with the drawbacks to this bill."

"I would like to acquire more information before I decide anything. I am opposed to the mandatory health insurance bill but I am not sure this is the boards best option."

Deeley said she has been opposed to this bill since it was introduced to the board. Other universities did not show opposition to the bill until January.

The Board will discuss these options at their next meeting.

After waiting nearly eight months, NKU graduate Marzouq Mehanna received a call from his brother, Shaker Mehanna, March 6 telling him everyone in the family was safe.

Marzouq said he received the call at 5:30 in the morning.

"I couldn't believe I was talking to him," Marzouq said. "I was at a loss for words."

Marzouq said his father, Enad, "drew a great big smile on his face" when he talked to Shaker.

"March 6 was the most exciting day of his (Enad's) life," Marzouq said. "He was taking it so hard because he was unsure of our family's safety."

Enad traveled to Northern Kentucky in April 1990 to attend Marzouq's graduation ceremony; leaving his wife and eight children at home thinking they would be safe.

Marzouq also told his brother of a new family member, Tahreer Mehanna.

Tahreer was born Feb. 26 in a Cincinnati hospital 15 minutes before Kuwait was liberated, Marzouq said.

"Me and my wife, Salma, decided to name her Tahreer because our country was liberated," he said.

Tahreer translates into "Liberation" in English.

Marzouq said he received another call from his friend, Aziz, March 11.

"Aziz told me there was no food, water or electricity for our people," Marzouq said, "and that really hurts me."

Marzouq said there were only three telephone lines open to the public in Kuwait, and calls were limited to five minutes for each person.

He said his brother had been waiting in line for seven hours to make the call.

Marzouq responded to the recent interview of the Emir of Kuwait on "60 Minutes."

The Emir said Kuwait was basically a business.

"Kuwait is a land of families," Marzouq said, "and not a business."

"He (the Emir) promised the United States, the Kuwaiti people and the whole country there would be democracy."

"I hope the United States makes him keep his promise."

Marzouq said they were told they would be able to return to Kuwait in approximately three months.

"I want to go sooner," he said. "We have to be there to help our family."

"I want the United States and all of the other countries who helped liberate Kuwait know that we really appreciate it."

"God bless you all."

Campus Crime

Feb. 27 through March 6

Criminal Mischief: Person(s) unknown had broken a light fixture in the stairwell of F-Wing of the residence halls. Also, a total of nine 48-inch bulbs were broken. These bulbs were taken from the third floor of F-Wing.

Criminal Mischief: Upon returning to her vehicle parked in lot I, a female student observed a scratch extending from the rear driver's-side panel across the door to the front panel. Earlier in the day, the student had been involved in an argument with a male over a parking space. She had no knowledge of the identity of the male.

Theft: A female student reported the theft of her license plate from her vehicle which was parked in lot D.

Theft: A male student had $40 taken from a duffel bag. The bag was in a room on the first floor of the Fine Arts building. The theft occurred during a play intermission.

Theft: While using the gym in the health center, a male student had $15 and several credit cards stolen from his locker. The theft took place within a two-hour period.

Officer Kyle started at NKU in September 1984. Prior to the six-and-a-half year period at NKU, he was a part-time officer for two years on the Cold Spring Police Department. Officer Kyle has 80 college credit hours from the University of Kentucky and NKU.

Kyle is currently enrolled in classes at NKU. He also has his Kentucky Realtors License and is a member of the Persimmon Grove Baptist Church, Ducks Unlimited, the Bob White Club and two bowling leagues.

Thank You, Lisa!

Members of The Northerner staff will be taking a trip to New York next week to attend a national convention.

We would like to thank all of those members on the Student Fee Allocation Board, along with Pat Moynahan, Penny Summers and, most of all, Lisa Sperandio. These are the people who made our trip possible.

The staff would like to thank these individuals for giving us the opportunity to enrich our education by attending this national conference.

Lack Of Minority Faculty Not Addressed

Dear Editor,

Congratulations are in order to Dale Lawver, the faculty and staff of the graduate education program for regaining full accreditation after a one year probation.

In a recent interview and article in The Northerner (February 27, 1991), Lawver addressed some of the problems which caused the program to be placed on probation. While I found the article very informative, it was very easy to assume the six problems discussed by Lawver were the only reasons the program was placed on probation by the Kentucky Department of Education.

The six problems addressed were:

- 1) Lack of full-time faculty members.
- 2) Lack of faculty "release time."
- 3) Lack of minority faculty.
- 4) Lack of a differentiated program.
- 5) Lack of a stated faculty advising policy.
- 6) Lack of a well-defined governance plan.

An excellent job was done identifying and explaining all of the problem areas except one: Lack of minority faculty.

We hope not addressing this issue was an oversight by Lawver and not a lack of commitment and sensitivity. As we rapidly approach the 21st century and the browning of America, it's imperative that we recognize the growing population of non-whites which is predicted to double by the year 2020 to nearly 115 million U.S. residents while the white population is not projected to increase at all ("Time," April 9, 1990). While minority faculty members are excellent role models and mentors to non-white students, they are also invaluable in exposing white students to different views and ideas in the multi-racial society.

Bringing minority faculty members to NKU isn't a matter of affirmative action or quotas. It's the responsibility of our university to provide diversified, dedicated educators who are willing to help our students grow personally, socially and are prepared to face the challenges of the future.

NKU Should Recognize Women Faculty

Dear Editor,

Nominations are being accepted for the 11th annual Northern Kentucky University Outstanding Professor Award. I was highly honored to receive this award in 1982. As I look over previous winners, I note that I remain the only woman to have been so honored. Women thus represent 9 percent of faculty named "Outstanding Professor" although the Office of Institutional Research reports that 42 percent of full-time faculty are women. I no longer serve on the selection committee (recent award recipients and a Faculty Senate representative), however, I understand that no women have been nominated for this award over the past four years. This letter serves as a plea to all faculty and students to thoughtfully reconsider faculty women who are deserving of this award and to make every effort to submit documentation of their credentials.

NKU Is A Great Asset To Campbell County

Dear Editor,

I have been attending NKU as a freshman and have been having a great time finding out how the whole school works. For the good of each and every student that comes to this school.

Everyone here is helpful. Students can find academic help in the writing center, in the computer center, in the math lab and in all the different departments. The librarian will help us to find and take out books. They also have other different and useful ways of getting subject material. I have tried all these great centers. Today, I came out of class and one of my classmates had a dead battery from leaving the lights on all day. We were close to the visitor station and a DPS van was going by. They offered help when we needed it. The car was started in no time.

When NKU started in 1969 from a bill passed in the state legislature, a wonderful board of regents knew that a university like this would be a great asset to Campbell County and the rest of Northern Kentucky, which it has been.

If we don't have anyone to dream ahead for the state, we won't get anything done for our youth. We have to find the people who will speak out and prepare for them, and provide the services they need. We see President Leon Boothe every day in the news fighting for new dormitories for the NKU campus because we are going to have more students accepted who will need housing. It is too bad we have a short-sighted government in Frankfort for sale. We want to support Dr. Boothe in his efforts to create a positive climate for the students of the future. We hope he will be supported by others in this effort.

From SG To You

SG Elections Coming Up In April

Dear Students:

Welcome back after Spring Break. Student Government is gearing up for the spring elections where representatives as well as the executive officers for next year will be elected.

Students interested in running can pick up petitions in the Student Government office after March 25. Elections will be held April 23 and 24.

Student Government would like to remind students studying late or staying for evening classes not to walk out to the parking lots alone in the dark. Call the Student Government Escort Service at extension 572-5149 or 572-5738. The service runs Monday through Thursday 6 pm to 10 pm.

Victory Is Much Sweeter On The Conservative Side

As our gallant men and women return home from the Middle East as the objects of multilateral pride and adoration, it is important that all Americans keep something important in mind. This is that if it weren't for conservatives like Ronald Reagan and George Bush, these beautiful moments might not have been so plausible. It was this conservative coalition of executives that reinstalled in us the feelings of honor and purpose which Lyndon Johnson and his treacherous band of liberals snatched away from many during that poorly organized fiasco called the Vietnam War.

When the Persian Gulf War ensued and our troops were sent overseas, once again we could hear the liberals crying out against "another Vietnam." This entire time, they were incognizant of the fact that it was their very predecessors and mentors who were largely accountable for our failure to achieve victory there. Due to our strong conservative executive branch, however, their moans were futile and meaningless this time.

Now that the war is over and victory is once again ours, conservatives everywhere can peer out towards the bright horizon ahead. With President Bush looking exceedingly popular in the polls once more, the Democrat who considers running against the president would almost have to be a masochist to do so! The only question now is as to who the next vice president will be. As 1992 approaches, conservatives everywhere can approach it with unadulterated optimism. Once again, conservatism has found its place in the sun.

I would like to conclude this article by thanking several groups of people. First of all, many thanks to people such as Reagan and Bush for re-instilling the feelings of national pride on which our nation was founded. Secondly, thanks to all of the liberals who said the wrong thing at the wrong time. We'll see you at the polls. Most importantly, thanks to each and every bold and courageous man and woman who participated in the noble operation overseas. They're the world's finest!

A New Superhero In Town

FRED SORINO
STAFF WRITER

There is a new superhero in town, but he is not here to stop crime or help the poor. He is here to fight a tougher battle—the never-ending struggle against unsafe sex, and Condom Man is just the guy who can do it.

This new superhero did not come from another planet or from an overdose of radiation. He was created by the team effort of the WRFN Radio crew of Paul Higginbotham, Jim Salzarulo and Al Singer.

"We wanted to run a weekly show, but we didn't know what on," said Higginbotham, general manager of WRFN. "Then we saw one of those condom key chains, and the idea just came to us."

Condom Man is not alone in his fight against unsafe sex. He has his young and wide-eyed sidekick Denny Diaphragm. Together they spread the word of the hazards of unsafe sex while fighting off their dangerous enemies.

Of course, there are enemies. Batman had the Joker, Superman had Lex Luther, and Condom Man has to fight off arch enemies Sammy Syphilis and Penny Pill.

According to Higginbotham, Condom Man is actually a take-off of Batman and Robin.

Company Dances Way To Northern

RAY EGAN
STAFF WRITER

The Kanopy Dance Theatre, located in Madison, Wis., is dancing its way into the Fine Arts Building on March 26 for a special performance.

Last year, NKU contacted the theater, led by Christine Jezewska, to perform here this semester.

"Mike Tanner, an alumnus of NKU, came here last year to teacher master degree classes," said Linda Krumme, Department of Theatre teacher. "Mike is also a member of the Kanopy Dance Company so I asked him if they would come and perform this year."

The performance will consist of five parts.

The first part is called the Priestess. This is a group piece for three men and women set to music by Enya and a cello track.

The second part of the program is dubbed the Lough Dances. This is another group piece of eight dancers set to Irish and French-Canadian music by Boys of the Lough.

The third segment is called the Shoreline. This duet, based on the idea of two brothers, is danced by Michael Turner and Ron Frost to the folk music of Greg Brown and Leo Kotke.

The fourth part of the program, Friends, is a duet for Lisa Moberly and Laura Helmann based on their real-life friendship. This segment is danced to silence and music by Dave Moore from Prairie Home Companion.

The final part of the program, a duet piece, is called Wings.

"The program is an accessible blend of a wide range of dances with many types of music such as modernist, rock-based and folklorist music," Jezewska said.

Krumme said the company will teach four classes while on campus— March 25: a beginning modern class at 9 a.m., an intermediate class at 2 p.m., a choreography class at 3:30 p.m. and March 26: an intermediate class at 10 a.m.

All classes will be held in room 201 of the Fine Arts Building.

The company, started 13 years ago, is accustomed to the university scene.

"We have performed basically everywhere," said Sharon Harbeck, the company's office administrator. "We have performed at universities in Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan and many other states. Our junior company will travel to Whales shortly."

The company will perform March 26 at 8 p.m. in the Main Stage Theatre of the Fine Arts Building. The performance, sponsored by the Activities Planning Board, will be free to the public.

NKU Ins And Outs Library Meets Students' Needs

DAVID DOWNARD

Springbreak is over, and it is time to hit the books again.

Winding down toward the end of the semester usually results into a big headache for students and teachers.

The worst problem for procrastinating students who put off class projects and papers is finding information to complete them.

After you thumb through your old high school and college research papers and can't find anything suitable, try going to the library—it won't kill you.

Realizing many students have library phobia, I am going to explain how you can find enough information to fill Riverfront Stadium.

W. Frank Stealy Library's staff members are "pro-student" and very helpful when you ask for assistance.

Being dumb and asking questions is better than being frustrated and paying someone to write a paper or do research for you.

Stealy Library was voted the "Best Library for Service" in 1989 by Cincinnati magazine; so the staff won't bite your head off when you ask questions. Some of the services available at the library include:

- An interlibrary loan program which enables you to borrow materials from other libraries across the United States.

All you have to do is fill out a request form for the books or materials needed.

You should expect a one-to-two-week waiting period for the materials requested.

- Government documents published by local, state and federal agencies.

These documents provide information ranging from how our local congressmen voted on past political issues to skateboard safety.

- Access to information, through the Greater Cincinnati Library Consortium, in more than 30 different libraries in the Northern Kentucky area.

To check out materials, all you need to do is show a valid NKU identification card to the librarian.

- Infotrac, a computerized database system which lists thousands of recent magazine articles.

Each article is arranged by topic, such as "Alcoholism," making it easier for you to find information.

- Newsbank, another computerized database system, contains various newspaper articles from publications across the entire United States.

Newsbank articles are programmed by topic and allow students to consider different viewpoints on national and world issues.

The library also has quiet places to study, copy machines, typewriters and a lounge.

The best thing for students who have library phobia is to "try it, you just might like it."

For those who like to procrastinate, go on over now. If you wait, you may be late and will probably have a cow!

Kilbourne Speaks On Advertising

TINA WILLIAMS
STAFF WRITER

Beauty comes from within or does it? According to the thousands of advertisements we see a day, beauty comes from the products we use.

Jean Kilbourne, media critic, lecturer and writer, spoke to NKU students on March 7, about "The Naked Truth-Advertising's Image of Women."

She examined the traditional stereotypes of the sex objects, the unfeeling man, as well as new images of the super women and the seductive little girl. She discussed the impact of advertising on individual attitudes, values and behavior and on society as a whole.

Kilbourne said ads are seen as being harmless and silly when in fact they are very powerful in cultural conditioning. Children are exposed to about a thousand ads a week.

"Children are brought up not by parents, but by advertising," she said.

"Ads sell products, but they also sell values, images and concepts of success and worth, love and sexuality, popularity and normalcy," she said.

"We're surrounded by it. We can't help but feel it's normal."

Advertising is a world where everyone is young and white, men outnumber women two to one, and the man goes to work while the woman stays home, Kilbourne said. Ads tell us the only way to look okay is to buy their products and look artificial.

"The face becomes a mask, and the body becomes a thing," she said.

Advertisements are increasingly showing women being battered and images of sexual abuse. Women and children are being used as sex symbols in ads, justifying and shaping the way people view them in society, she said.

"Ads tell us who we are and what we should be," she said.

Discrimination is prevalent against women, especially women of color. They lead us to believe the only way to be successful is to become more like a man.

However, men are not exempt from the stereotypes in ads, Kilbourne said. Men are shown as strong, successful people who do not show weakness or emotion.

Kilbourne emphasized the need to be aware of advertising's impact on us and to do something about it.

"To be silent is part of the problem," she said.

Ways to work for a change in the ads that exploit or falsely portray women:

- Write letters to local stations, ad agencies and networks expressing concern.

- Monitor the media to get them to students who cannot pick up their stickers during office hours. First, a friend can pick up the sticker. Second, parking office employees can send the sticker to the bursar's office which keeps extended hours.

The parking office also keeps extended hours during the first three weeks of school and new student orientation so students can purchase parking stickers.

"It seems to have worked out so far," Morris said.

Students may also be concerned about the lack of health and counseling services available in the evening; however, NKU has provisions for these problems if they occur in the evening.

McKenzie said DPS responds to any medical emergency on campus. Even if a nurse is not on campus in the evening, some DPS staff are certified Emergency Medical Technicians.

Ann Richards of NKU's health and counseling service said DPS also responds to emergency mental health situations during evening hours.

"Initially, they assess the case, then the counselors are contacted if needed," Richards said.

She noted resident advisors are also trained to handle such instances in the dorms.

Richards explained although the counselors do not keep regular evening hours, there are exceptions.

"I've made special arrangements," she said. "We can schedule appointments after 4:30 if necessary."

Norleen Pomerantz, director of student development, said she has received some requests to keep the Child Development Center open later. Some students need evening child care to attend classes or must bring their children to class until their spouse can pick up the children.

However, she said keeping the center open would be extremely expensive.

"I'm afraid we would not have enough students using the center to make it affordable," she said.

Sports

*Norsemen Travel To Hilton HeadTennis Team Looks To Defend GLVC Title*BRIAN NEAL
SPORTS EDITOR

The NKU men's tennis team started its season with a trip to Hilton Head, S.C. and despite going 1-3, first-year coach Geoff Crawford thinks Northern will once again be a conference power.

The Norsemen, who return four starters, won the Great Lakes Valley Conference tournament championship and went undefeated in GLVC dual matches last year.

NKU played Armstrong State, a Division II powerhouse and Division I George Mason. Northern's win came over Transylvania.

"It (the trip to Hilton Head) was the first tennis we have played this season and I think the trip was a good experience for us. We were very competitive," Crawford said.

"I haven't got to see a lot of the other teams in the conference but I think we have to be a front runner. The guys feel confident and we'll be in contention but everybody will be trying to knock us off."

Crawford comes to NKU after amassing 22 years of experience as a teaching pro in Cincinnati. He also coached at Withrow High School.

Senior Kevin Montgomery, GLVC champion at No. 4 singles last year, returns to lead the Norsemen. Montgomery will play first singles.

Junior Tay Robinson attended Auburn and William Carey before transferring to Northern. Robinson should take over No. 2 singles and team with Montgomery in No. 1 doubles.

"He had to sit out after transferring," Crawford said. "But, with a little more tournament time, he is going to be an excellent player."

Last year, Jeff Euwema won the conference championship at No. 1 singles and he became the first player in GLVC history to qualify for the NCAA tournament.

Crawford said that Montgomery and Robinson both have a shot at making the NCAA tournament.

Other top returning players are senior Doug Gilkey and sophomores Scott Lutz and Chris Brock. All three will battle for third through singles spots.

Crawford believes that these five will form a solid team unit.

"We have a strong team concept," Crawford said. "The guys have worked hard and everyone is pulling for each other. They have a good mental attitude because after last year, they got used to winning."

Northern also has five freshmen who will be looking for court time. Dave Stahl and John Mullins will compete for the No. 6 singles spot.

Two NKU basketball players, Todd Svoboda and Jeff Blank, have joined the team. Svoboda will see action at doubles while Blank and Mark Deters should provide depth.

NKU's first home match is against the University of Dayton on March 27. The Norsemen will open GLVC play when they host Bellarmine and St. Joseph's on April 6.

*Bellarmino Wins Great Lakes RegionBelles Defeat Wildcats*JOHN REITMAN
STAFF WRITER

In Saturday night action Bellarmine, a first-round winner over a lackluster Michigan Tech team, won the Great Lakes Region by defeating the Lady Wildcats of NMU, 78-70, despite playing on unfriendly ground.

The Belles were the No. 1 ranked team in the Great Lakes Region throughout most of the year, but a season ending loss at St. Joseph's dropped them to No. 2.

"We were surprised," said Bellarmine coach Charlie Just of having to play the region at Regents Hall. "It was a disappointment. The NCAA makes these decisions, and I don't always understand them."

The win over NMU sent Bellarmine to the elite eight for the second consecutive year. The Belles were powered by regional MVP Sharonda O'Bannon's 21 points and nine rebounds.

The rest of the all-tournament team was, Amy Middleton of NKU, Lisa Jamula and Deanna Sutton of NMU and Jenny Postlewaite of Michigan Tech.

Norse Notes*NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

The NKU women's softball team completed a 10-game road trip to Florida over spring break.

The Lady Norse, led by sophomore Laura Watkins, went 7-3.

Watkins, a pitcher for the Lady Norse went 6-1. NKU hit .356 as a team.

The men's baseball team fell to 8-3 after a 11-10 loss to the University of Cincinnati on Sunday.

UC scored four runs in the bottom of the seventh to slip past the Norsemen.

The Norsemen's next game is at the University of Dayton on March 20.

Kilbourne has lectured around the world for 15 years. She said her greatest impact has been having people never look at ads the same way again.

The award-winning films "Killing Me Softly" and "Calling the Shots" are based on her lectures. She has been a guest on radio and television programs. She has also been selected by ABC and CBS.

She recently received the Lecturer of the Year award from the National Association for Campus Activities and the National Organization of Women's Woman of the Year award.

Kilbourne said she never expected it to get this big; when she started, she was afraid of public speaking.

Superhero from page 6

"That's where we got the idea for Condom Man's identity," Higginbotham said. "We figured that we could come up with some real funny names and spoofs using ideas from Batman and Robin."

Condom Man, when not fighting the war against unsafe sex, lives by the identity of Bruce Vein, and Denny Diaphragm is Dick Greasin'. They both live in the KY cave in the town of Blue Cheese, Kentucky. There butler's name is Mr. Snibly.

Al Singer, sales director for WRFN, says Condom Man was not created to spread a message or even to warn people about unsafe sex.

"Condom Man was created in fun," Singer said. "We figured it would be a great way to make people laugh. It doesn't matter if it gets a point across; if it makes people laugh, then it served its purpose."

Higginbotham agrees but thinks if Condom Man gets a message of safe sex across to people who still don't know any better, that's fine with him.

When dealing with the topic of safe or unsafe sex, it is possible that someone might get offended. In case of this, WRFN runs a disclaimer about all its programs announcing that WRFN is a student-run radio station and is not trying to force its opinions on anyone.

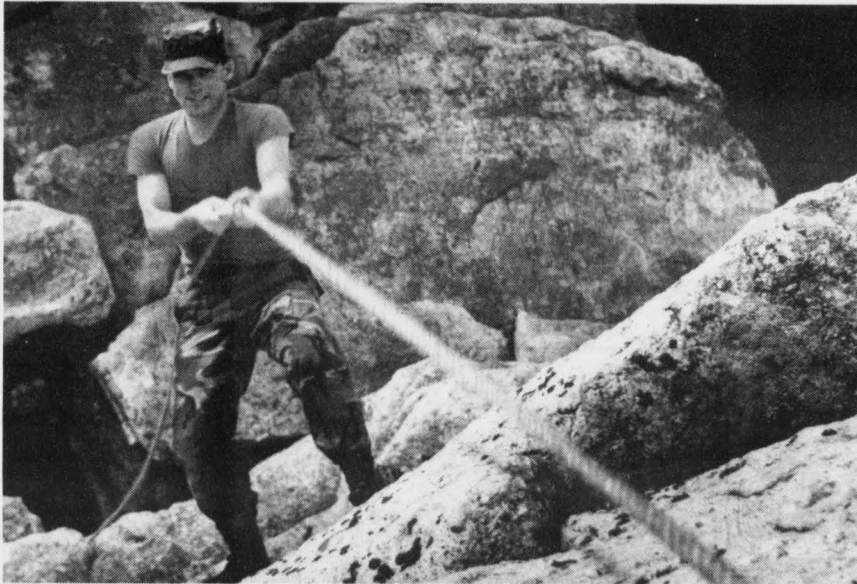

"We haven't heard anyone complain yet," Singer said. "But this is a very touchy subject. We just hope everyone takes the program the way the program was meant to be taken—in fun."

Higginbotham said no one has been offended yet, and in fact Condom Man has developed a pretty big following.

"People have to remember this is all in fun," Higginbotham said. "So far people have, and Dean Lamb has shown nothing but support. In fact, he is one of Condom Man's biggest followers."

A new episode of Condom Man will air every Wednesday night at 8:45 p.m. on WRFN AM 810.
