

Expansion

by Richard Taylor

Because I forget
to bring in flowerpots
by the porch steps,
each winter I lose
a few to the cold.
The ones with drain holes survive intact. It is those that permit no leakage, like souls of the righteous,
that crack.