Franke Elected New SG President

KAREN McGLONE
STAFF WRITER

Junior Mike Franke will lead student government executive council for the 1992-93 academic year according to student government election results made public last Thursday.

Franke, who received 531 votes in the uncontested presidential race, currently holds the position of vice president.

In the heated contest between junior Rocke Saccone and junior Steve Rust for vice president, Saccone emerged as the victor. Saccone currently holds the position of chairperson of governmental affairs in SG.

"The members of judicial council for SG and the dean of students have received complaints questioning the fairness of this election," said SG Chief Justice Diane Goetz.

"Only one position was contested, but, at this time, no foul play has been found surrounding the election," she added.

"I think it's very unfortunate that it turned out this way," Saccone said.

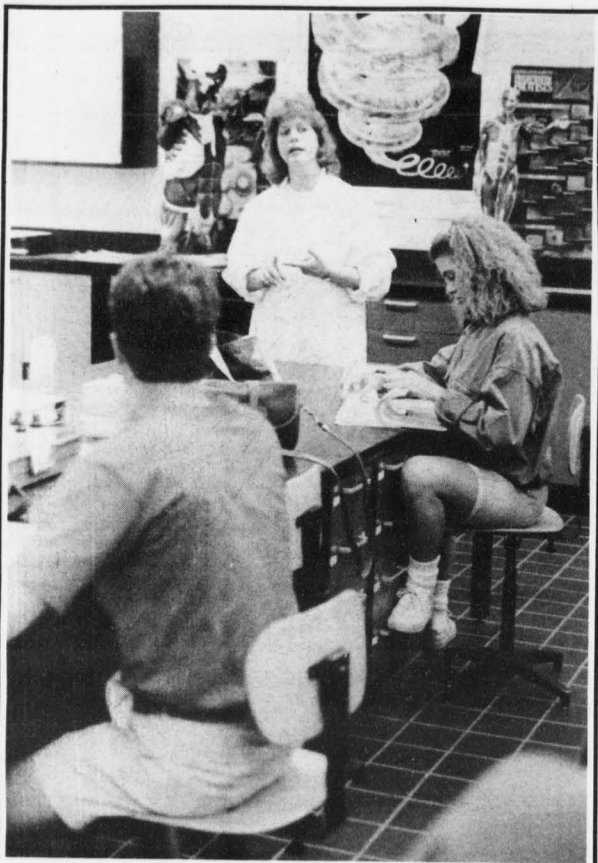

"I want students to be more informed on the issues and make sure that the university gets through these hard times (budget cuts) with as little damage as possible," he added.

Katie Heywood, Nathan Smith and Ken Smith took positions of public relations officer, secretary of external affairs and office administrator, respectively, in uncontested races.

Posted to the 15 positions of representatives-at-large for a full year are Rhonda Saccone, Johnathon Behler, Jason Setters, Sheila Stanton, Mike Michalack, Chaz Schaffner, Tim Settles, John R. Clark, Johnathan Schmoit, Gary Dean Burke, G.J. Heath, Kristy Wheatley, Greg Trauth, Brian Ellerman and Don Straub.

Of all the awards a person can receive, few are as meaningful as being recognized as outstanding by your peers. Just ask biology professor Debra Pearce, NKU's Outstanding Professor of the Year.

Each year, the recipient is chosen by fellow professors on the basis of excellence in teaching and outstanding character. Pearce was nominated by Larry Giesmann, professor of botany.

The nomination and award came as a

Although a professor is responsible for much more than teaching, Pearce said she still places the classroom at the top of her priority list.

"Teaching is definitely above anything else I do," she said. "Within teaching, I enjoy getting students interested in learning the subject I am teaching them."

The big question that most likely should be asked of an outstanding professor is, "What is the secret to your success?" The determining factor between a great professor and a mediocre one is very basic, according to Pearce.

"It gives you a sort of high to communicate to someone else something they didn't understand before," said Pearce.

surprise, according to Pearce.

"I don't think I deserve it," said Pearce. "But I am definitely honored. There are a great number of excellent professors at NKU who are deserving of this as well, even quite a few non-tenured people."

Pearce said she was motivated to teach by the chance to share knowledge with others.

"I like interaction with students," she said. "It gives you a sort of high to communicate to someone else something they didn't understand before."

"I think the secret is to have a sense of humor," she said. "This helps a lot. I know that when I was in college, I had some professors that were pretty dry, and it's more difficult to learn in that environment."

"I had Dr. Pearce for Biology 120 my freshman year," said Senior Michelle Deeley. "She is still one of the best professors I've had. Even after her class, she still talked with me on a speech I wrote about calcium for the speech team."

Professor, Student Awarded Summer Research Grant

RENEE ROELL
STAFF WRITER

NKU organic Chemistry professor, Robert Kempton, and his student William J. Coyle, were selected on March 13 to receive a $2,500 fellowship for this summer.

The research will take place this summer at NKU. Kempton and Coyle will be researching compounds that are biologically active and have activity against cancer, said Kempton.

The fellowship is a council on Undergraduate Research Academic - Industrial Undergraduate Research Partnership(AIURP) award, and is sponsored by SmithKline Beecham Pharmaceuticals.

Kempton and Coyle were among 42 applicants selected out of the 200 that were received.

"The idea of this program is to train students in the art of research," said Kempton.

Kempton selected Coyle for the fellowship application, and has been working with him for one year already on other projects. He said he chose Coyle because he was "enthusiastic and understood research."

Coyle said this research project will give him the experience he needs to go out into the field.

Coyle, who will graduate next spring, said he "hasn't made any decisions" about what he will do with his degree. Making a decision between a Ph.D and a master's degree in business administration is hard, he said, but his major is one of the more flexible ones.

The idea for the project started last fall, said Kempton, and this summer is an off-shoot of that.

"We would like to show the student a hint of what the research environment is like," said Kempton.

The benefits the research will have to the community are low, said Kempton. The chances are slim of finding the right compound, because for every 10,000 made, only one is the right one.

The criteria for the award not only involves evaluation of Kempton and Coyle, but also of NKU and the equipment and faculty that will be used. Coyle describes the chemistry program as a "tiny little family".

"It is competitive, since there are so few of us, but we give each other a push every now and then," said Coyle.

Students May Have To Purchase Health Insurance Plan In The Fall

STAFF REPORT

At press time, university officials still did not know the status of the SB 239, the bill mandating that all students carrying nine or more hours carry a health insurance policy.

Legislators tried to reverse the bill when they were in session this year. The bill passed in the House, but never made it out of committee to be voted on in the Senate.

According to Assistant Vice President of Student Development Norleen Pomerantz, the university will try to have a minimum plan available to students who wish to purchase an insurance plan next fall.

"We still haven't heard anything from the Council on Higher Education about this bill for the fall," Pomerantz said.

So far, a hearing has not been set for the class action suit that was filed early last fall.

Students having questions should call Student Government at 572-5149.

Student Elected To State Office

STAFF REPORT

An NKU student was elected to a position on the Kentucky Education Association-Student Program in Frankfort, Ky., earlier this month.

Karen Schwab, a senior, was the first NKU student elected to the state-wide assembly. She will serve as historian next year.

Other NKEA officers who attended the conference were Tammy Pugh, Janine Marangoni, Kristen Bridges and faculty adviser Marge Artzer.

The group is having its last meeting May 4 at 3:30 p.m. in BEP 204. Speaker Joyce Doyle from Grant County Middle School will present a lecture.

Elections will be held for new officers for the coming year. An ice cream social will follow after the meeting.

Career Development Offers New Program

ANGELA EDWARDS STAFF WRITER

If you need a job or if you have a job to be done, NKU's Career Development Center has a new service just for you.

The Caring Connection is a free job referral service open to any NKU student.

"We call it the Caring Connection because we are connecting someone who needs a job with someone who has a job to be done," said Melanie Reinersman of the Career Development Center.

Reinersman said the service can supply students with summer or year-round jobs.

"So many times we have individuals call and ask us to recommend students for a job," Reinersman said. "So we decided to come at it from reverse."

Any student who wants to file his name with the Caring Connection can pick up an application in UC 320.

The student's name then will be released to prospective employers who call the Career Development Center, and the employers will call students directly.

Possible jobs include home care, child care, pet sitting, house sitting and care for the disabled and the elderly.

The Career Development Center began taking applications about two weeks ago. Reinersman said the service will begin as soon as enough applications have been submitted.

For more information on the Caring Connection, call the Career Development Center at 572-5680.

Student Will Speak At Take Back The Night

STAFF REPORT

NKU student Shelly Doel will be a speaker at the May 21 Take Back The Night candlelight vigil and march.

Doel never wants another woman to experience the sort of violence that she herself went through.

She will be speaking about rape. Not in the typical sense. She will be talking about husbands who rape their wives on May 21.

This is a crime in Kentucky, but not in all states. Doel will be speaking about her experiences.

The candlelight vigil will begin at the Bicentennial Commons in downtown Cincinnati at 7:30 p.m.

Participants will march across the L&N Bridge to the Campbell County Courthouse in Newport.

For more information, call Deanna at 491-3335 or Laura at 381-6003.

Library Construction Will Soon Begin

TOM FREY STAFF WRITER

The $9.1 million expansion of Steely Library is expected to begin in July and will bring about 45,000 square feet of usable space when all is said and done.

The project will include the expansion of the first two floors which will be extended to where the courtyard now sits and landscape will be placed on top (plaza level) for students to lounge.

In the rear of the building, the first three floors will be extended outwardly along the receiving dock. The first two floors will house book stacks. The third floor will house mostly reference material and the fourth floor will be periodicals. The plans also call for a fifth floor, which will contain mostly offices.

Steely Library's new online system, which will replace card catalog indexes, is expected to be completely been in place by September and will be accessible from all floors. A glass elevator is slated to be placed in the center of the library and will operate on all five floors. Also, the loggia floor will be replaced to aid in the convenience of carts.

"What are we designing is a user-friendly library. It will provide maximum space for users and collection," said Library Director Marian Winner.

The library was built for an enrollment of 5,000 to 8,000 students. After the expansion, it will be able to handle an enrollment of 15,000 students.

What's The Matter With The Students Here Anyway?

DIANE GOETZ

EDITOR

PAUL DANIELS

CONTRIBUTING WRITER

While sitting atop our student media meccas at NKU, we have compiled a number of gripes. These gripes are not directed to the faculty, administrators or staff, but to the students at NKU.

Our main gripe is the strange bit of irony we experienced this year. As editor of the newspaper, I wrote opinion columns each week in the hopes that someone, anyone, would respond.

And poor Paul spent the entire year trying not to offend anyone and received more complaints than the newspaper. Even The Northerner received complaints about them. As a matter of fact, most students would rather complain to the paper than the organization that could actually help them.

It's very frustrating for us!! The only week that I ever received a number of responses was when I wrote an editorial about the issue of choice for women.

I'm amazed that people would spend the time to write me a letter about something that we have no control over changing. But, when an editorial was written about the meal plan and the changes in the tuition installment plan, no one writes me.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH YOU PEOPLE!!

Don't you know that you have a voice around here? The administrators on this campus think that I am the only person who complains about these problems. Even the student regent doesn't voice his opinion.

We also don't understand why there is such incredible apathy around here. Only 663 students out of 11,000 voted in the recent SG elections. Then, after the election, people complain to The Northerner instead of the governing board over Student Government.

A number of students wrote the newspaper this week complaining about campaign tactics. Well, Paul and I have seen worse in recent years.

No rules were broken! I don't care how many sections of the SG Constitution are spouted off, everything was done by the book. I think it is pitiful that students make such a big deal over something like this, yet completely ignore other issues.

Did anyone complain about the budget cuts? No. Even the little preppies at Miami University over the river protested the budget cuts. But NKU did nothing. I don't even think most students care.

I also can't tell you how many people came into the Student Government office complaining about the mandatory health insurance when it was enforced last year. These people were complaining that they were never told about this before hand.

This of course is not true. A reporter from The Northerner had been covering this issue since it was first brought to the Council on Higher Education. Unfortunately, too many people at NKU read only the classified page. Had they read the paper, they would know about this insurance.

And, in case you haven't been reading us this year, it will most likely be enforced next year on every campus.

All we want students around here to do is stop being so reactionary. NKU seems to be the home of the ignorant knee-jerk reaction. Students respond without thinking.

People should be writing the paper outraged that only one race in SG was contested. Not that the one race having more than one candidate was 'fixed.' You people should be outraged when you vote! And, those people that lose should be more mature about it.

I'm sure most people don't care what we are writing anyway. We just wanted our opinions to be known to our readers.

Remember that you have a voice on this campus. Don't bring it to the newspaper and the radio station. Bring it to the organizations that can actually do something about it. After all, we wonder how many of you actually read this anyway.

Rap Music Is An Art Form, Says Student

Dear Editor:

I was watching the Soul Train Music Awards, and I found myself curled up, watching with enthusiasm, the acts performing that evening. I was amazed with ability and control the performers had with their art forms: the singing, the dancing, the acting, the rappin'...

Hold the boat! Yes, I said rappin'! It seems that some people have difficulty grasping the fact that rap is an art form. Could it be that they lack the understanding of the whole conceptual picture of rap? Having grown up around rap, I can relate to it. It moves me spiritually, at times, educationally, and most often, emotionally. Personally, that's more than I could have once said about paintings that I'd seen by DeVinci, music that I'd heard by Beethoven, or sonnets that I'd read by Shakespeare—only because I didn't understand them. And understanding is essential in the appreciation of an art form.

Who decides what is and isn't art anyway? Is there a group of high and holy executives locked in a room, in a far away office tower somewhere, dictating to the world what forms of expression do and don't deserve to be called art? No. The decision is bestowed upon the admire, and from the popularity and social growth of rap music, I'd say its admiration almost speaks for itself!

Webster's Dictionary defines art as the power of performing certain actions, especially as acquired by experience, study or observation. Basically, rap is from the streets. It tells about people's struggles and experiences in the streets, manifests observations of what goes on in the streets, and relates what is to be learned from the streets. Consequently, one needs to first understand the streets to truly understand and appreciate rap music. Webster went on to say that art is a skill in the adaption of things in the natural world to the uses of human life, etc. This definition places its emphasis on the possession and performance of a certain skill. Rap relies on rhythm, syncopation and rhyme in relation to syncopation, which can loosely be defined as the way the words and the rhymes weave around the rhythm. Not everyone possesses the skill to do this.

Some people argue the cliché that "if you've heard one rap group, you've heard them all." Contrary to that belief, factually, one can not deny that each rap song is an individual work of art. Take, for example, Heavy D's "More Bounce to the Ounce" compared to X-Clan's "Heed the Word of the Brother." These songs contain the same melodic structure (an ostinato of Zapp's "More Bounce to the Ounce.") but because of the two artists' individual messages, styles and interpretations of the music, they produce two vastly different songs. Jazz, which is considered to be America's only original musical art form, is in the previous example, similar to rap. Jazz leans heavily on the interpretation of a melody and the alteration of it, according to the artists' individual style and message. Ironically, jazz was first rejected by most people before it became the most popular form of music at the turn of the twentieth century.

Will it take centennial revolution to broaden the minds of you skeptics enough to include what is growing to be a generation's anthem? If so, you don't have a long wait. It's all here in black and white. Don't be blind.

Student Responds To Letter, Addresses Author's Credentials

In response to the "Open Letter To The NKU Student Body":

First, who exactly is "Steve Koetting"? Isn't he the one, if memory serves me right, that lost last year's election to a write-in candidate? If he thinks that he's such a great supporter of the Student Government, why didn't he have the nerve to run again? Oh, that's right he spent all his money last year on his campaign.

Second, why do Mike Franke, Locke Saccone, Nathan Smith, Ken Smith, and Katie Heywood need a secretary such as Steve Koetting. After all, since they have served on Student Government previously, they have access to the necessary equipment. In addition, it makes no sense to mention that they have served previously—what have they done for the Student Body anyway!

Third, it was rather nice of Koetting to mention all of Steve Rust's statements. Who is he to say what Rust knows or does not know. By the way, The Northerner is not gospel, it is simply someone stating their opinion.

Koetting, can you tell us what exactly that the insurance mandated by the Kentucky Legislature of 1990 declared? Also, do you realize that most of the art produced here by Northern's students is not as valuable as you seem to believe?

Koetting, you're right about two things. There is a parking problem. And Rust does care. Maybe that's the problem with Student Government today as it is! It is evident with your skills in the letter that communication is not your best suit either.

Sincerely,

L. Bush

Student Expresses Election Concern Claims Pollsters Influenced Voters

Dear Editor:

When I went to vote for Student Government on Wednesday, 4/22/92, something totally pissed me off. I looked at the person next to me's ballot and noticed that he put an X by Steve Rust, and erased it and moved it to Saccone. When I asked him why, he said, "They said Steve was winning, and I just wanted to make it a closer race."

My ticket number was 708, for proof check ticket numbers 700-710. I thought people working the ballot boxes were supposed to be unbiased. I am disappointed that NKU allows these types of activities to take place.

Sincerely,
M. Zink

Student Addresses SG Duties

Dear Editor:

I find that the letter that Steve Koetting posted on the distribution boxes of The Northerner, was in poor judgment.

I feel that this editorial should be reported to NKU students because the letter that Koetting posted was also distributed by the certain members of the ticket party consisting of Mike Franke, Locke Saccone, Nathan Smith, Ken Smith and Katie Heywood at the polling stations around campus. Mr. Koetting had the letter available for the Wednesday, April 22 election day. On that day, I observed a few of the above ticket party members distributing the letters to voters as they walked up to vote in the lobby of the University Center. Under the Student Government Constitution, page 30 of the 1991-1992 Student Handbook, this would be considered a violation of the constitution and could be brought to a hearing. The section of the constitution states:

Part 3, section E of Article VI - Election, The J-Council may declare an election void only if there is evidence of fraud or corrupt practice in the voting, counting of ballots or a candidate's qualifications.

This evidence shows that the elections could be void because of the: 1) above ticket party members trying to corrupt the voters by giving them a copy of the letter which doesn't pertain to the elections, which would possibly change the result of their vote for vice-president and 2) Koetting's allegations into Steve Rust's qualifications.

As stated in the Student Government Constitution, Article II - Objectives, page 27 of the 1991-1992 Student Handbook:

The objectives of this Student Government shall be as stated in the Preamble and as follows:

- a) To protect and promote the rights of the individual student.*
- b) To provide for the formation of an official body to express student opinion.*
- c) To coordinate, maintain, and support a well-balanced social and academically-oriented program for the Student Body.*
- d) To communicate ideas and coordinate activities with other colleges and universities.*

LETTERS From P. 5

Nowhere in the constitution does it state that you must be a proven leader, as Koetting continuously stress in his letter to be on Executive Council of Student Government. The constitution does not state that a requirement for an office is only people who have the skills to lobby and communicate with legislatures. This is what we are here for, to learn and gain the experience to help us land a job once we graduate from NKU.

In Koetting's letter, he also states that Rust has no insight into the rules of protocol that the job of vice-president requires. Koetting, the problems that Rust have brought to the students attention can be delegated into committees that the Vice-president oversees and therefore, he is fulfilling his role as stated in the Student Handbook.

In closing, I would like to congratulate the new Executive Council of Student Government for the 1992-93 school year.

Sincerely,
Dennis Hardebeck

VP Candidate Speaks Out

To fellow students and staff:

I would just like to thank the many supportive people who tried to help me in my campaign for Vice-President. I have been here for close to four years, and I have learned many things here at our university and was just hoping I could be the one who could really get some needed changes accomplished. I talked to numerous people before I attempted to run for Vice-President and came across many obstacles in the process of doing so. I would like to mention some of these things now.

When I decided to run I had no idea how underhanded some people become when elections take place. I don't know if am just one of the few people that noticed some irregularities with our very recent election. Beyond the signs being ripped down repeatedly which happens a lot in any election there was much more at work under the surface. I had numerous people come to see me personally and say that they were being coaxed to vote for certain people. That is a place where there should be total neutrality or at least somewhere close to it apparently this did not seem to be the case with some of the people that ran the booths. No conversation is supposed to take place about the candidates running. These incidents above and losing the election is not what really bothered me about the whole election.

The thing that really irritated me was the letter to the NKU student body that Steve Koetting wrote up in response to my memorandum in The Northerner last week. He wrote "this letter in support of Mr. Franke, Rocke Saccone, Nathan Smith and Ken Smith and Ms. Katie Heywood." The rest of the paper was basically a slam to my issues and a personal attack on me. The issues I used were all that were present here at our university and were ideas of our student body. Koetting took much of what I said totally out of context about the different issues such as insurance, parking, graduation, and he gave no solutions, just complaints. I threw issues forward and tried to say what I wanted to accomplish, my fellow candidates did no such thing. He was much too broad in his issues. That's fine if you want to play it safe, but I think most people like things straight out and to the point. Isn't it nice to know if I would have won the people elected to the offices would have been against probably everything I would attempt to do that year? With this in mind probably very little would have got accomplished because the working relationship would not be there.

I just hope our new student government executives know their jobs and follow the regulations of the school to the best of their ability. I would just like to respond to one more thing in the letter and that is that I clearly do know the job of Vice-President and I have more insight to things than the writer of that letter could possibly conceive. Why do you think people don't get involved? If this is the type of behavior that takes place on Student Government I really don't think I want to be part of it. What about you? I feel behavior of this kind should be looked into and not tolerated. (This is not just an issue that should be forgotten by next week.)

Your Student Representative,
Steve Rust

P.S. I spent a lot of money and time in my campaign and I may not have won the election, but I feel like I'm still a winner after all I went through. Thanks again to those who voted for me. I tried my best (couldn't beat the odds!) See ya!

Judicial Council Sees No Foul Play

Dear Students:

The members of Judicial Council of Student Government, the governing board that oversees that SG follows what is outlined in the Constitution, feels compelled to respond to a number of complaints received during last week's elections.

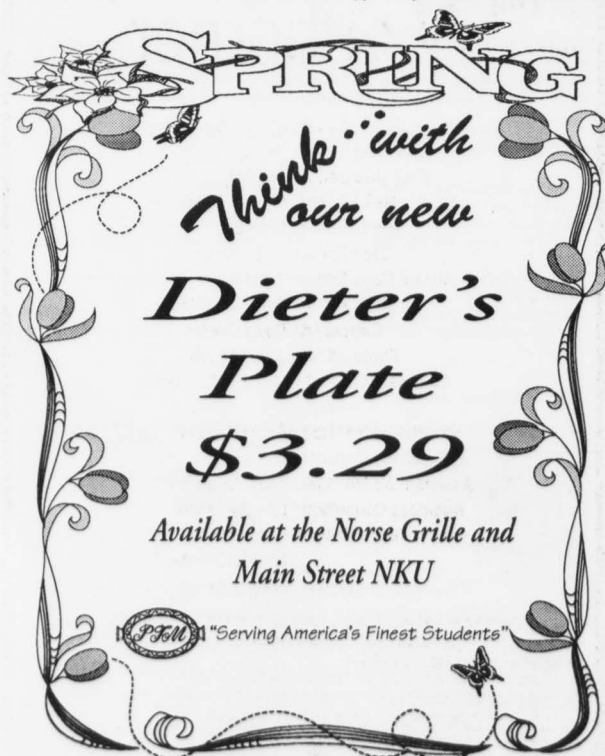

First of all, I would like to point out that we received complaints from both candidates running for vice president. All complaints were looked into and we have seen no evidence of foul play involved in this election.

Candidates are limited to the number of fliers they are allowed to post on the walls to 100 total on campus. Candidates are free to campaign in other ways as long as they do not campaign within the taped lines of the polling area. If seen by the pollsters, the letters and slips of paper for each candidate were taken from voters once they were inside the polling area.

Furthermore, members of Judicial Council and the Dean of Students office oversaw the election. We saw no evidence of those working the polls telling others how to vote.

Any rumors that told students who was winning after the first day were simply rumors. None of the ballots were counted until Wednesday evening.

Sisterhood Has No Age Limits

ELLEN COOPER

After 20 years it is about to happen: I am going to be a college graduate. It took 20 years because I became side-tracked. I traveled, got married, had four babies, divorced, married again, did some more traveling - and worked the whole time. But through all this running around there is one experience that has seemed to evade me. I have never had the opportunity to be in a sorority. The first time I attended college at the College of New Rochelle, the school didn't have one. This time, now that I'm a full-time student, I can't be in a sorority because I'm too mature!

I tried to join a sorority when I came to NKU. I trotted over to the University Center and was told there was nothing surroundings. Both groups would benefit from the knowledge of the other.

Northern would benefit because sororities encourage academic excellence.

The competition among sororities helps students get good grades. Having other sisters around helps when studying alone becomes too tedious. It always seems a person learns more when they study in group sessions occasionally.

Sororities are ancient organizations that are steeped in collegiate traditions. Another reason I have for wanting to join a sorority is for the prestige. When I graduate, someday I will be in a business conference room with "the boys." "The boys" will all have on their college rings with fraternity signets. I want the same symbolism they have. Their rings for me to join because I was too old, except an organization called A.S.T.R.O. (Adult Students Towards Renewed Opportunities). That just didn't sound Greek enough to me.

We have a campus with a non-traditional population of more than 25 percent. I feel it would be extremely beneficial to NKU as a whole to have a Greek organization for these women over 25 who are returning to college. A sorority is a support group for its sisters. Surely these women would benefit from any support they receive. It's very hard coming back to college after a long absence. The emotional support and the sense of belonging these women would receive would be greatly appreciated.

The knowledge and life experience these older sisters have could be shared with younger sisters from other houses, educating them in the ways of the world outside the Ivory Towers and maybe saving them some heartaches. The younger sisters could show their older sisters how to better cope with college life and how to assimilate into the symbolize the power that an education holds and the fraternity signet represents an acceptance by an inner group of that power. I want the power of the ring on my finger too.

It would be wonderful if somehow or some way the "older" sisters had a sorority too. They have come back to complete their educations and it would be nice if their educations were completely well-rounded. I know that I would be proud to have my sorority signet on my college ring. Hopefully, someday, I will have that experience.

Editor's Note: Contrary to the ideas presented in this editorial, "there's no reason that a non-traditional student can't rush or be a part of a sorority," said Student Activities Coordinator Betty Mulkey. Mulkey advises all students interested in the Greek rush process to go to the Student Activities Office for more information.

We at The Northerner would like to wish everybody a merry graduation and a happy summer. It's at this time of year when we reflect on what the past semester has meant to us and how it has enriched our lives. The time spent at NKU and the times ahead come to the forefront of our thoughts and capture the inner most depths of our minds. At this time of reflection, it's nice to have the comforting thought of the hard work behind you and the even-harder work ahead... NOT!!!

Welcome To The Real World

MICHELLE DEELEY
STAFF WRITER

Many college students believe in a myth that as soon as they graduate they will get offered a job.

NKU Speech Communication Assistant Professor Michael Adey said, "As students prepare to graduate, they should also prepare for life after college."

Students may not be seeing their full range of options. Their tasks are similar to an archaeologist. "They must dig, dig, dig until they find the job they want," said Adee, who teaches an interviewing course. "Nobody is waiting with a job on a silver platter when they graduate," said Adee.

Students have to market themselves, and most students don't know how, which is related to the fact they do not see all their options, said Adeo.

Students also tend to go for jobs they know, companies like Procter and Gamble. They don't realize there are other companies because the media only highlights the big ones, said Adeo.

Students often do not realize the need to research the company. Students need to "feel the company out" and see if it is suitable. If a person does not know enough about an employer, they may make a choice they will regret, he said.

"If a factory is making widgets and you don't know about widgets, then you won't get the job," said Adeo. "You have to target each organization."

Some college students want instant gratification, said Adeo. Many college graduates want to be hired in a manager level position. They don't want to take an entry level position because they think they have paid their dues by getting a degree, said Adeo.

"There is no shame in an entry level position," said Adey. "Most people have to work their way up the latter."

Students also need to realize they may have to relocate, said Adee. If a student can find an opportunity in another area to start off with, then they can move back once they have experience.

Adee also said that some students are unaware of the importance of being professional.

Students must have professional materials, such as a resume. Students should also pay attention to communication behavior and follow up with letters.

"There will be dozens that apply for the same position," said Adey. "The difference can be very small."

In looking for a job, students sometimes focus too much on salary, said Adee. "Students often say 'I want a job that pays $30 flat,'" said Adee. "There are several other factors that should be considered."

These factors include the work environment, working situation and the company's values and philosophy.

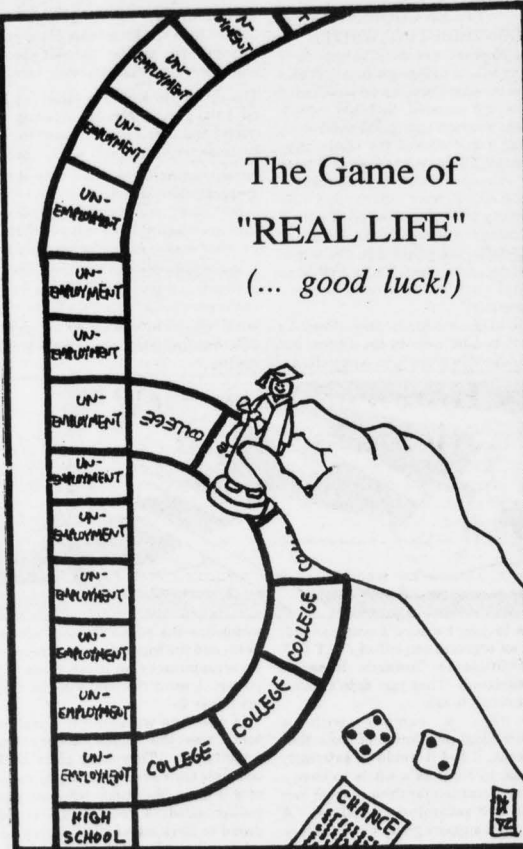

"A person who worked 40-60 hours a week doing something they didn't like would be in tremendous misery," said Adee.

"Some seniors don't even have their resumes ready," said Adee. "They may be finished with school, but they haven't made the transition to the business world."

There are several places that students can go to for advice. The NKU Career Development Center is located in the University Center 320. The Career Development Center has several programs, including a resume service.

"However, students should not wait until the last few weeks to get help," said Adee.

Felty Honored With 1992 Clara Richards Award

STAFF REPORT

NKU graduate Lora Felty, who received her degree in December, was the recipient of the Clara Richards Award. This award is given to the female student who has excelled more than just academically. Criteria are scholarship, community service (within and outside the university), leadership and character. It is named for the first female administrator at NKU.

Felty graduated in December of 1991 with a degree in English. She is a member of Sigma Tau Delta, the English honor society. She was also a Presidential Ambassador, president of LALINK, and member of the Baptist Student Union.

In December of 1991, she traveled to Mexico as part of a joint BSU and Habitat for Humanity program. She has also been a volunteer worker at the Kentucky School for the Blind.

Felty is a graduate of the Kentucky School for the Blind in Louisville. She will begin studying for a master's degree in education for the visually handicapped this summer at the University of Louisville.

Reception Honors NKU's Women Graduates

STAFF REPORT

This year's outstanding women graduates were honored for their achievements at a reception last week.

These are women graduates who have acquired a 3.5 or above grade point average as undergraduates at Northern. The Clara Richards Award is also given out at this reception.

"I fear your (college) experiences could be like mine in the 1960's," said Vice President of Student Affairs Cynthia Dickens.

She explained that there were no women administrators when she was a student except for the director of Women.

"To be a woman is not to be less," she added.

Women need to continue to have challenging and supportive relationships, Dickens said.

NKU graduate M. Denise Kuprionis was the guest speaker at the reception. She graduated from Northern in 1985 with a degree in management. She is currently the Corporate Secretary for E.W. Scripps Company. She told the crowd that she was the first woman elected as an officer to the Board of Directors at her company.

She had three suggestions for those gearing up to tackle the job market and begin their careers - (1) Be honest (2) Do the best you can and 100 percent in everything you do and (3) treat others as you want to be treated.

She also explained that each person has their own definition of success and one must determine what success means to him or herself.

"I can almost guarantee that you will not like every part of your job," Kuprionis said.

"Women have made progress in the workforce, but we are not equal," she said.

Making a commitment to a career may mean sacrificing your husband or boyfriend, she added.

"I believe the definition of success is very personal and it changes constantly," she said. "I urge you to learn as much of everything as you can."

She said that one cannot succeed at everything and that failure will happen. "Learning does not end with your diploma."

Attempting to study for the MCAT alone would be nearly impossible. Attempting to study without Stanley H. Kaplan would simply be a bad career move.

NKU Theatre Students Represented Across United States This Summer

In early March this year, the SETC (Southeastern Theatre Conference) held their spring meeting at the Twin Towers in Orlando, Florida. Theatre practitioners from across a ten-state region gathered for workshops both as participants and observers. More importantly for NKU Theatre, 91 professional theatre companies held auditions and interviews for actors, dancers and designers looking for the very best talent in the southeast to employ for their 1992 summer seasons.

In order to audition at the SETC, university students as well as professional performers must go through a state audition. A limited number of slots are allocated to each state. The KTA (Kentucky Theatre Association) held auditions in Louisville last November, and NKU Theatre students took 50 percent of all allocated slots for the whole state. All of these NKU students went on to the SETC auditions in Orlando and success!

This summer, NKU's Department of Theatre will be represented as far north as Alaska. Student Todd Norris will be singing in Alaska Cabin Night which occurs in Denali National Park at the base of Mt. McKinley. Six theatre majors will be singing, dancing, or working backstage in Gypsy, Big River, and Jesus Christ Superstar at the Amphitheatre of Jenny Wiley Drama in Prestonburg, Kentucky. NKU talent will also be on display in theme parks like Kings Island, Dollywood in Tennessee, Hershey Park in Pennsylvania, and Six Flags in New Jersey. Other students can be seen at Sterling Renaissance Festival in upstate New York as well as outdoor dramas of Unto These Hills and The Legend of Daniel Boone, both in North Carolina.

Some NKU Theatre students have found their way to Nebraska and the Nebraska Theatre Caravan, to Texas in the Galveston Island Outdoor Musical Theatre, or to Theatre West Virginia performing in Hatfields and McCoy's and Honey in the Rock. Still others have had call-backs from Hope Summer Repertory Theatre in Michigan, Arkansas Repertory Theatre in Little Rock, and the Oklahoma Shakespeare Festival.

NKU's Department of Theatre is also a professionally producing organization during her summer months. Summer '92 will welcome audiences to the campus and a Summer Dinner Theatre experience featuring two musicals, A Day in Hollywood/A Night in the Ukraine and Little Shop of Horrors. NKU Theatre will also travel north across the Ohio River to appear on the Showboat Majestic presenting Little Shop of Horrors and the two-man comedy Greater Tuna.

Acting, singing, dancing, and scenic lighting and costume design are alive and well at NKU and proudly represented across the United States during this summer.

Preview*Not Just Another Play: Life, Relationships and HIV Explored On StageLARA KALLMEYER
STAFF WRITER

When students find themselves bogged down with finals, they can take a break and watch the student production of "Just Another Day" in the Black Box Theater.

"Just Another Day" is a play about a man who acquires the HIV virus. It is written, directed, and performed by students, according to its writer and theater student Luther Williams.

He said he named the play "Just Another Day" to show the double meaning of the play.

"(The lead character) realizes this is just another day for him," Williams said. "He prays to God that he'll live another day. He learns to deal with his problem."

"I have a friend who contracted the HIV virus. Writing this play has been an outlet for me, trying to get it off my back," he said.

The play is completely fictitious and has no real relationship to his friend, according to Williams.

The play is not a comment on people who have AIDS, said Brian Cafferkey, who plays John in the production, the man who contracts the HIV virus.

"It deals with relationships," Williams said.

"(John) is just really confused about sexual preferences. He lost his father when he was young and he lives with his mother," Cafferkey said.

"My life in the play is a deception, (like) sneaking around behind my girlfriend's back," he said.

"Brian plays a very promiscuous person in the play," Williams said.

"(John) doesn't know who he will go out and sleep with. He doesn't care," said Lisa Dames, marketing director for the production. Dames also plays the role of Jill in the play.

"It says something about the fact that you never know anything more. You never know what will happen to you, you can get AIDS from someone you know," Dames said.

"This play is being done to create awareness," she said.

Even though the play is written on a serious topic, a lot of humor has been written into the play, according to Williams.

"It's not two hours of death. A lot of comedy has been written into it," Cafferkey added.

The final scene for the play is still in its writing stage and is always being written and rewritten, according to Williams.

"We are still waiting to see how the play will end," Dames said.

Another unique aspect about the play is that its lighting, sound, technical aspects, directing and performances are totally done by students.

"There isn't one aspect of this production that isn't run by students," Dames said.

"There is just as much work in this production as any other production," she said.

The cost of a ticket will be a canned good taken up on the night of the performance. All the food will be donated to the Free Store in Cincinnati.

The play will run May 7, 8, 9 at 8 p.m. and May 10 at 3 p.m. in the Black Box Theater.

Cheerleaders

SeasonMICHELLE DEELEY

The NKU cheerleaders had tryouts for the 1992-1993 squad on April 21-24 in Regents Hall, according to Cheerleading Coach Sandy Hasson.

The cheerleaders returning from the 1991-92 squad did not have to tryout, said Hasson. Returning members are Rachel Wright, Julie Gantley, Pam Baute, Sonya Newman, Rob Woods, Shawn Staggs, Glen Gray, Shane Williams and Jamie Yelton.

According to Wright, there were 12 girls that tried out for four positions and two boys tried out for 3 positions.

Individuals were judged on gymnastics, dance ability, partner stances, motions and jumps, said Hasson.

"I think the girls that tried out have great potential," said Wright. "However, I would like to see an even squad of girls and guys."

"I wish we had a few more guys that are willing to work and just not be here," said Gray.

Hasson said high school seniors who are going to attend NKU were allowed to tryout. "We let incoming freshmen tryout if they have a good high school GPA and an average of an 18 on the ACT," said Hasson.

Cheerleaders have to attend two or more practices a week, work at cheerleading camp during the summer, pay for and attend a cheerleading camp in Tennessee, host a Muscular Dystrophy Fund Raiser at Tickets Sports Bar, give demonstrations and judge local cheerleading tryouts and competitions in addition to cheering at games, said Hasson.

"I love to cheer," said Wright. "I enjoy staying busy."

Hewan To Speak At International Conference

TONY BUCALO
STAFF WRITER

The international spotlight will beam on Northern Kentucky University when political science professor Clinton Hewan steps to the podium at the 18th annual Third World Development Conference May 6-9.

The conference will be held in Kingston, Jamaica, with scholars from around the world in attendance. This year the conference will focus on the post cold-war, new world order.

Hewan will present an essay titled, "U.S. Foreign Policy and the Third World as Seen Through the Jamaica Experience, 1972-1980: Will the Post Cold-War Era Bring Changes?"

The paper examines U.S. foreign policy towards the developing world, using Jamaica as a case example, and seeks to determine if change will occur as a result of the end of the cold war.

"U.S. foreign policy in the third world is more concerned with the bottom line than with human dignity," said Hewan. He said these policies contradict an American people that are humanitarian by nature.

Hewan said U.S. policy is at a major junction and policymakers must decide between policies of "selfish personal interest or humanitarianism."

But if the U.S. would apply ethics and morality to foreign policy, solutions can be formulated that will protect both the long-term interests of both the U.S. and the developing world, he said.

Yet, Hewan said the responsibility to initiate change rests on the shoulders of academia.

"We can either guide students intelligently - to think critically about international politics and the impact these solutions have on the human race or we can continue to have them live in a world of ignorance," Hewan said.

He believes the majority of students look positively toward the international community, but American institutions have not fully followed their initiative.

"If the system will not change through the evolutionary process at a reasonable rate, then it will bring upon itself a revolutionary change," Hewan said.

"Anything is possible, but we must grasp the opportunity," he said.

Just Like Driving A Taxi

"Sportswriting is just like driving a taxi. It ain't the work you enjoy. It's the people you run into." - William Forrest (Blackie) Sherrod

Scott Cook

I found this quote last fall while looking for something else in the library.

For some unknown reason I wrote the quote down and I ended up taping in in my desk drawer in The Northerner.

Day after day this year I've opened my drawer and seen Sherrod's words and never realized until the past few days what they meant.

I've ridden in a taxi a few times and from what I've taken in, driving a taxi sucks.

You do the same things over and over. You drive down the same streets and see the same sites.

A lot of the qualities I found in this job.

You can only watch so many soccer games and sit in Regents Hall for so many basketball games before you start to lose your mind.

And believe me, there were a few times this year I thought I was going to lose my mind.

Especially this semester.

But in the end, the people I've encountered have made the job worthwhile.

Not only have the athletes and coaches, but the people on the staff of The Northerner and every one else who inhabits the second floor of the University Center or Skyline Tavern - depending on the time of day - have made the job worthwhile.

People at The Northerner - and I'm among the group - are always complaining about how much we get paid.

When I think about it, I didn't take this job for the money, I took it for the experience.

And the experience of working and hanging out with the people I've met this year makes up for the lack of monetary compensation.

I'll be back at NKU and The Northerner next year, but not as sports editor. And as my legacy I'm leaving the quote taped in my desk as a reminder to my replacement of what this job is all about - people.

One last thing before I go.

"We have to win as many games as we can."

(Scott Cook was Sports Editor of The Northerner)

Coaches Do The Recruiting Game

ROCKY TYE
STAFF WRITER

NKU's basketball coaches have had a busy off-season trying to land recruits for next season.

Women's coach Nancy Winstel has had the most success - signing three players to national letters of intent to attend NKU next year.

Winstel's top-recruit is Division I transfer Angel Donley.

Donley, a 1991 graduate of Grant County High School, averaged 1.4 points and 3.2 rebounds a game this season at Radford College.

Also signing with the Lady Norse are twins Dana and Dawn Morningstar from Cincinnati.

On the men's side things haven't gone as well.

Men's coach Ken Shields has yet to sign a player, but insists NKU is high on many players lists.

"We still have a lot of irons in the fire," Shields said.

"Of the top five players we have been pursuing, two have signed with Division I schools."

With the Norsemen have to replace six scholarship players, it will be very important to get players signed right away.

Not only must Shields replace the five graduating seniors - David Marshall, Nick Pangallo, Jon Campbell, Kenny Brown and Deron Blasingame - he must also replace his top returning player in 6-foot-8 junior center Todd Svoboda who is transferring next fall to the University of Kentucky to finish his degree in engineering.

"Todd leaving really took us by surprise, and changed our philosophy," Shields said.

"Big people are always tougher to sign than guards."

Softball Ousted From Conference Tournament

STAFF REPORT

NKU's women's softball team lost it first two games of the Great Lakes Valley Conference tournament last Friday to be eliminated from the tournament.

Tournament host NKU opened play in the tournament against Kentucky Wesleyan College.

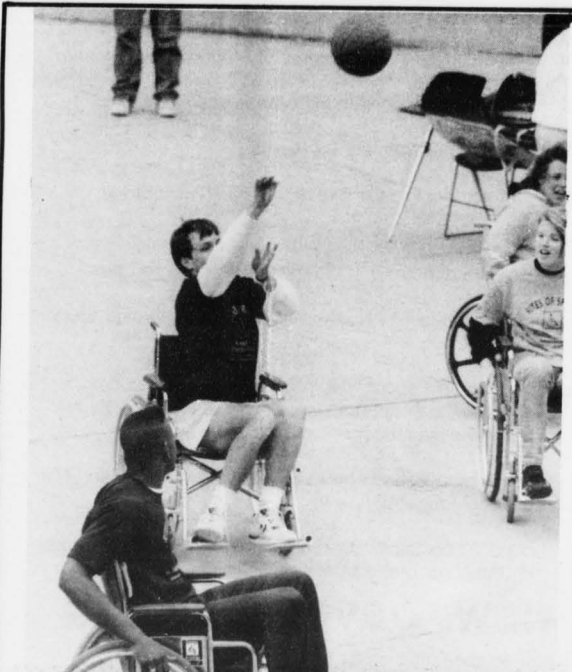

The Lady Norse jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the third inning against the Lady Panthers when senior right fielder Julie Thamann scored on a throwing error by KWC catcher Brenda Mescher.

The Lady Panthers tied the game in the top of the fourth and took the lead in the fifth inning when they scored three runs.

Kentucky Wesleyan scored once more in the sixth inning and won the game 5-1.

The loss put NKU - making its first tournament appearance since 1989 - in the losers bracket against Lewis University.

Lewis defeated NKU 4-1 to knock the Lady Norse out of the tournament. NKU finished the season 20-17.

BEST AND WORST OF NKU

BEST

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

- Alpha Phi Alpha's State Brother of the Year, Jerome Bowles
- WRFN for innovative programming and overcoming the bad publicity.
- The Northerner is of course the very best! After all, if we didn't work each week, you wouldn't have anything to read.

CAMPUS OFFICES

- The Dean of Student's has the nicest assistant in the world. Dottie Gammon knows everything you would ever want to know about this campus!
- Admissions makes incoming students feel more than welcome.
- African American Affairs has friendly and helpful people working there and sometimes they look like they just have too much fun at work!

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

- The Construction! It was greatly needed. More room and more students living on campus next fall.
- Pulliam being awarded the contract to build the dorms and not Ventre One. They are doing a good job and seem to be on schedule too.
- Reconstruction of Residential Life Residence Hall Council. They will have a real voice on campus next year!
- David Stringer winning national Order of Omega Scholarship! Wins NKU national recognition.
- Dr. Boothe as a member of Cincinnati Visitor's Bureau. Now NKU will have a voice in Cincinnati as well as in Kentucky.
- NKU Physics department works with NASA.
- National Forensic League High School Tournament is brought to NKU.
- Norse Force tries to generate student support of NKU sports.
- After 12 years, a woman is once again recognized as Professor of The Year for 1992!

This list was compiled by Diane Goetz, Michelle Deeley and Paul Daniels. This does not necessarily reflect the opinion of the entire Northerner staff.

WORST

STUDENT APATHY

- Student apathy during SG elections.
- Only one person runs for President of Student Government.
- Not even enough people run for representatives-at-large.
- No students protested the budget cuts.
- No students protesting the mandatory health insurance.
- No student support of APB events.
- Norse Force are the only students at basketball games.
- People complain to The Northerner and WRFN than to Student Government.
- Students complain about "poo-poo" words on the student media more than the important issues that really affect them. (Examples: meal plan, budget cuts, etc.)
- No students complained about the mandatory meal plan. Not even the student regent!
- Students don't complain about changes in Tuition Installment Plan. (Probably not until after it passes!)

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

- No new science building for NKU.
- Murray States's Convocation Center will be completed soon!!
- Cynthia Dickens resigns as Vice President of Student Affairs. She will be greatly missed.
- BUDGET CUTS!!
- Mandatory Health Insurance is not reversed and will keep some students from returning to school full-time next year.
- Some dorm students are not returning because of the high cost of mandatory meal plan.
- Administrators propose to change tuition installment plan.
- Reciprocity agreement with Indiana students is cancelled for next year.
- Satan cancelled his appearance in December for breakfast and is replaced by Santa. The heartbreak of the year!

There's More To Preparing For Finals Than Studying

GREG HOLDER
STAFF WRITER

Well, it's that time of year again. Term papers and final exams are piling up and so is the stress and confusion. If you are pulling out the last of your hair and you have bit off your last fingernail, here are some helpful tips to make the end of the semester go a little smoother.

First of all, organize everything you have to do. Whether it is a last minute paper or studying for a major exam, having everything listed in a single place makes it hard to forget items, and also helps you get a focus on all that you have to do.

A second step is to prioritize the items on your list. Naturally, a group project worth half of your final grade is more important than a mere homework assignment. If you are really in a time crunch and you actually do not have time to accomplish everything, you need to make the tough decision of what to scrap and what to finish. Pick those items that carry the most weight on your grade and put a quality effort into them. However, do not use this as an excuse to ditch that assignment you simply dread because a "zero" in the grade book can be devastating to your final grade and your grade point average.

Next, plan time for study and/or work ahead of time. It is easy to say, "I'll get to it when I have a chance," and even easier have different ways of studying, and what works for you may not work for your friend. Some people get the most out of studying when it is in a group setting.

do it. Choosing the wrong method may hamper your efforts to learn and bring about a lot of discouragement.

Finally, one of the most important things you can do this exam season is to get plenty of rest. In the "Land of All-Night Cram Sessions," this may seem like a joke, but it is actually essential to peak performance on exam day. An "all-nighter" can actually do you more harm than good, since your brain cannot function at full capacity when you are exhausted. Try studying two or three days before the exam and leaving the last day to a little review and a lot of sleep. It may seem impractical, but that extra sleep can make the difference between a peak performance or a mediocre effort.

Basically, it all boils down to using good judgement and making studying a top priority (at least for this last week). However, if you still do not get the grades you wanted, remember what a popular book title says, "Straight A's Never Made Anyone Rich."

Good Luck On Finals!!

to never get the chance. By blocking out special time reserved for studying, you can plan the rest of your life accordingly and still have ample time for work.

One of the major mistakes that college students make is studying or working in the wrong environment. Different people

The interaction with other people may make it easier to learn and remember information. Others study better in solitude, where they can focus on the material and learn at their own speed. Be honest with yourself and decide which method is most effective for you and then
