NKU Receives Federal Grant

NKU will receive $171,000 during the first year of a federal grant formulated to respond to the needs of non-traditional students pursuing an associate degree.

The money comes from the Carl D. Perkins Education Act of 1990. The grant is distributed through the Kentucky Cabinet for Workforce via the Department of Adult and Technological Education.

The grant is to specifically deal with problems incurred by "special students," according to J. Thomas Isherwood, acting dean of Professional Studies.

Isherwood describes special students as those with financial problems, academic difficulties, a single parent or non-traditional by age (those older than 25 years of age).

It is designed to provide better counseling and monitoring of these students after they have enrolled at NKU, he said.

Isherwood also wants to provide better co-operative education programs and greater placement assistance upon graduation.

"One goal is to let more people know about the associate degree programs offered at NKU," Isherwood said.

The grant will provide funding to the following areas:

- Associate degree, Special Populations Coordinator: This program, called ACES, will respond to the advising needs of special population associate degree students.

- Special Populations coordinator in business administration technology: This person will advise special students in the business program and will assist in the placement of students to the community after graduation.

- Special Student Activities coordinator in nursing: This person will coordinate clinical placements for these students in nursing.

- Guidance and counseling for special populations: Two part-time counselors will offer assessment of students needs and provide individual and group

Justice Studies: A New Degree Option For NKU Students

LISA SPERANDEO
GENERAL MANAGER

The political science department received approval Aug. 26 for a new bachelors program in criminal justice.

The new major is justice studies and is coordinated and advised by Paul Knepper. It includes courses in public administration, political science, justice, law enforcement and sociology.

"All these disciplines have something to say about law and justice and are designed to prepare you for many different careers," Knepper said.

Knepper said he believes the program at NKU is superior to other similar programs in the state such as those at Eastern, Morehead, or the University of Kentucky since it is liberal arts based with a broad focus.

"This is not a vocational program like handcuffs 101," he said.

After the seven core classes, students can specialize in police and public management, law and the courts, or corrections and social justice, according to Knepper.

"The way [the program] is set up, you can do just about anything," said Jennifer Youger, a junior who was majoring in political science and changed to justice studies.

"Even if I don't go to law school," Youger continued, "I still have a legal background."

A student survey was taken by the political science department during the 1990-91 academic year and submitted as evidence of the desire for a justice studies major. Of the 121 students enrolled in Law Enforcement 100 for the spring and fall semesters combined, 85 said they were either interested or would definitely declare justice studies as a major.

"The number of jobs available to justice studies majors aren't even on the books yet," Knepper said. "For instance, many states are opening mediation centers since the courts are backlogged."

Other opportunities include careers in state and federal police agencies such as state trooper, wildlife conservation officer and health inspector; institutional corrections such as jailer and parole officer; or court management such as juvenile court worker, pretrial officer and court administrator, just to name a few.

Paul Knepper holds a doctorate in justice studies from Arizona State University and is an active member of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences (Kentucky headquarters located in Nunn Hall) and the American Society of Criminology.

Why NKU?

Knepper said he chose NKU because it offered an opportunity to teach a number of different courses.

"NKU is a pretty exciting place to be right now," Knepper said. "It is rapidly growing and is one of the best kept secrets in Kentucky."

Why justice studies?

Between 1980 and 1990, the number of inmates in both state and federal prisons jumped from 329,821 to 771,243, according to the July 1991 Bureau of Justice Statistics National Update.

The number of people under the care or custody of a corrections agency has also increased since 1980, according to the same report. People on probation grew by 126 percent and parole by 107 percent.

"The U.S. has the highest incarceration rate of any western country," Knepper said. "The real issue is are we getting anything meaningful out of this?"

"Training a new generation in criminal justice to go out there and change things is my answer," he continued.

Knepper said he spent the last year giving talks all over the state of Kentucky.

"People have the right to make an educated decision on how we should spend our money," he said.

Students currently majoring in political science may be able to apply a majority of those credits toward a major in justice studies since only a few new classes have been added to the program. Students may also opt for a justice studies minor. For more information contact Paul Knepper at 572-5471.

NKU Launches Annual United Way Campaign

MICHAEL BUNZEL
NEWS EDITOR

A large crowd turned out to kick-off the United Way campaign last Thursday, Sept. 12, in front of the University Center.

Speakers were on hand to stress the importance of the United Way campaign, which runs from Sept. 16 through 27, at NKU.

"This year's goal of $35,000 is an aggressive one that I think is achievable, especially judging by the turnout today," said Ken Ramey of Business Services, one of this year's co-chairpersons.

Head of the Diocesan Catholic Children's Home, Bill Miller started the ceremonies by talking of the services his home provides through United Way.

It provides children (ages 6-12) with a home where they try to install values.

"It's a home away from home for them," Miller said. "What we try to do is settle them down enough so they can return to their own homes."

Each of these children entering the home receive both individual and group counseling, until they can straighten out their problems, he added.

After kids leave the program, the home follows their progress for a six-month period. After that period, the home periodically sends out questionnaires to the families for up to three years.

Jim Scott, disc-jockey from 700 WLW, said he was excited at the turnout.

"I'm glad to see this kind of kick-off to the campaign," he said. "It shows a tremendous commitment from the school to take time out and plan something like this."

"NKU's involvement is a very essential part of United Way," Scott said.

Lori Berte, a United Way campaign associate, said NKU is an important part to the Northern Kentucky area campaign, because it touches the community in so many ways.

"The goal of United Way is to alleviate human suffering and to do that it must start with an education," she said. "That's what NKU does, it gives students the knowledge to make the world a better place."

Any student organization that contributes at least $25 toward the campaign will be eligible to win several prizes, said Amy Conrad, public relations director of SG.

To help raise money for the cause Student Government is planning "Penny Wars" where students will give pennies to their favorite on-campus organizations, said Rachel Klink, secretary of external affairs.

The student organization with the most money will have its name engraved on a plaque that will be displayed in the University Center.

Attorney General Candidate Visits NKU

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Democratic candidate for Kentucky Attorney General, Chris Gorman, visited the NKU campus last week.

The campus Young Democrats hosted his visit. He met with a number of students and faculty at a reception in Nunn Hall.

Gorman visited the campus to meet NKU students, answer questions and campaign for the party.

Gorman focuses on a number of issues in his campaign including campaign finance reform, environmental protection, stronger laws on domestic violence, greater consumer protection laws and mandatory sentencing for those convicted of selling a certain quantity of drugs.

Health care will be a primary issue of the 1990's, according to Gorman.

"There are 700,000 people in Kentucky with no health insurance," he added.

Gorman would like to see the United States, as well as Kentucky, find solutions for affordable health care and insurance.

Hospital bills should be scrutinized, according to Gorman. "You need to know exactly what you are paying for," he said.

"You can't deal with the issues without looking at education on the forefront," he said.

Gorman is turned off by the huge amounts of money that candidates must raise to run a successful political campaign.

"The last four Kentucky governor's have been millionaires," he said. "A system needs to be developed allowing a middle class person to run for a political office."

Education could solve many of the states problems, Gorman said.

"You can't deal with the issues without looking at education on the forefront," he said.

Education is the number one issue, according to Gorman. "You can look at drug abuse, child abuse, domestic violence, but if an individual had been enlightened in the first place, some problems could be prevented," he said.

"An educated population increases the labor pool, keeps the crime rate down and more," Gorman said.

"I thought it was a successful visit," said Brian Taylor, president of NKU Young Democrats. "About 30 - 40 people stopped by to see him and he answered everybody's questions."

"I was glad to see him at Northern," said senior Steve Koetting. "It was a good way to learn his views on issues. I didn't know his stance on issues like abortion until I met with him."

Dorm Council Considers Changes

KELLI MILLIGAN

The Student Government Constitution of NKU, Article VII, Section 5 was a main issue at the Residence Hall Council meeting Tuesday, Sept. 10.

The article states: "The Vice President of Student Government shall coordinate all Residence Hall Council actions, and shall aid the council chairperson in the performance of his or her duties."

Active Chairperson Kristi Eubanks would like to see this article amended.

Eubanks has some changes in mind, though she stresses that the council does not want to break away from Student Government.

"(The council) wants to be able to decide what's going on with the residence halls," she said.

As it stands, Eubanks stated, the vice president of SG must approve the money taken out for everything the residence halls do.

"The council would like to control its budget," said Eubanks.

"We want to eventually amend the current constitution, relating to the Residence Hall Council, specifically article VII," Eubanks said.

NEWS BRIEF

Talent Search Grant is Expanded

STAFF REPORT

The U.S. Department of Education recently awarded a new three-year grant to the Educational Talent Search.

The talent search is a federally funded program which provides early intervention and assistance to low-income students. The grant increases the program budget 77 percent over the next three years.

This program offers services such as career information, ACT preparation workshops, goal setting, assistance for students and their parents in completing applications and financial aid forms, and field trips to college campuses.

The program currently serves 800 students in grades 9-12 in Northern Kentucky and Hamilton County.

The increase will allow the program to serve some 950 students, including 7th and 8th grade pupils, plus expand into Clermont County. *

Students Still Fighting Health Insurance Bill

STAFF REPORT

Student Government President David Stringer went to Frankfort Thursday, Sept. 12 to discuss changing the student health insurance bill with legislators.

He met with Whip for the Republican party in Frankfort, Senator Tom Buford. According to Stringer, Buford is relatively sure that the bill will be changed during their next legislative session.

Stringer went to Frankfort with a number of other SG presidents from other Kentucky colleges. Each met with a different legislator.

The group of SG presidents are trying to have the changes brought up at the special session that legislators will have a few weeks from now, Stringer said.

"If it can get into the special session and be changed, we wouldn't have to pursue the constitutionality of the bill in court," Stringer said.

Stringer said he hopes the bill can be changed by spring semester. He doesn't want students to once again be affected by Senate Bill 239.

Dorms from page 2

Student Government Vice President Mike Franke said, "When (the council) comes to us (SG) with a proposal, then we can talk (about a possible constitutional amendment)."

Keep Up With The News?Stay In Touch With the World Around You*DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Who is Clarence Thomas? If you can correctly answer this question, pat yourself on the back for keeping up to date on current affairs.

On Friday, Sept. 13, another editor and I conducted a random poll asking students if they thought Clarence Thomas should be appointed the next justice on the U.S. Supreme Court. I was astonished to discover that about half of the people I asked, didn't know who he was.

This man has been making national headlines for more than a month. Where have these people been?

I suppose I'm one of those lucky students. As a political science major, keeping up to date on national and world affairs is required to get a good grade.

Professors on campus teach students so much, but are they teaching us to be good citizens when we graduate?

I mean reciting the periodic table of elements, knowing the square root of 572 and understanding Freud's Oedipus Complex Theory is wonderful, but keeping informed on current events is important too.

This November, Kentucky residents will be voting for the next governor. I'll bet a lot of students don't even know about the election. Although, in a couple months, television viewers will be bombarded with sensationalized, mud slinging commercials.

Don't learn about candidates through these 30-second scandal spots. Educate yourself on what these candidates stand for politically.

It saddens me to know that out of 11,000 students on this campus, maybe 200 of them will actually read this editorial. But, if it makes one person start keeping up with current affairs, then I've accomplished my goal.

What kind of future leaders are college campuses turning out? Before you start blaming NKU, it's not the university's fault. Nationwide, college and high school students can't point the United States out on a map of the world.

Somewhere down the road, young people need to be conditioned to watch the news on television once a day or to read the newspaper. This has to begin at home.

Upon graduation, these community leaders need to be informed citizens. When you go into the voting booth this November (and I certainly hope you will exercise this constitutional right), know your decision on major issues and who is the best candidate for Kentucky governor.

Don't let people try to persuade you on the way inside the polling area. It's not too late to become aware of the news happening around you.

For those people still trying to figure out why Thomas has been making national headlines, it's because his decisions on the high court could change life as we know it.

Thomas is accused of being 'conservative' and has been heavily scrutinized by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

If he is in fact an extreme conservative, this could upset the balance of power in the U.S. Supreme Court. It only takes one member to cast the deciding vote on a nine member board of justices.

People should be aware of this controversy. A number of previous decisions could be reversed with a shift of power.

One particular decision that the Senate Judiciary Committee is concerned with is Thomas' view on abortion. The decision made on Roe v. Wade allowed abortions to be legally performed by doctors. This is only one example of how things could change.

I'm certainly not lecturing you on the importance of keeping informed. I'm just advising you to do it. You can be whatever sort of citizen you desire.

The next time you're in the supermarket checkout line and you're glancing around at the eye-catching headlines on the tabloids, don't pick up a copy of "The National Enquirer" or "The Weekly World News." Pick up a copy of "Newsweek" or "The Kentucky Post" instead.

However, you may want a copy of both kinds of publications. After all, sometimes those tabloid stories are hilarious and you need to laugh, too!

Students Give Input on Appointment of Clarence Thomas

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR
MICHAEL BUNZEL
NEWS EDITOR

Last week, Judge Clarence Thomas sat in the front of the 14-member judiciary committee and attempted to gain approval as the next justice on the Supreme Court.

The Northerner conducted a random, non-scientific survey last week to find out students' opinions on whether or not Judge Thomas should be appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

He's too conservative. Being a woman, I would have to say no. I have a hard time agreeing with a lot of conservative stances.

Michelle Klink

I think so. He seems to be qualified for the position. As far as the hearings go, he seems to be responding to the questions fairly well. From what I can see, his personality tells me he's a down to earth person, and does not seem to be radical one way or the other.

Elizabeth Goewey

Yes. Having the senators re-phrase the abortion question so many times, I liked how Thomas stuck to his guns and didn't budge. Everyone is complaining he's a conservative, but judges are paid to be impartial. Whether he's a liberal or a conservative it shouldn't matter because it won't influence his decisions.

senior

Yes. Just because he's black doesn't mean he should be scrutinized so much. If he meets all the requirements, he should be entitled to it.

Tim Granger

No. I think they need someone more liberal. I feel if he does get nominated to the Supreme Court, the conservatives will rule the court.

No. Because he doesn't say how he feels on certain issues.

Lisa Scholes
junior

Iffy, for myself his views are somewhat thorted. A lot of controversy surrounding his unknown views.

Ricardo Fishcer

I don't know much about him, but he's qualified for the position and should be appointed.

Kathy Plybon
freshman

I can't tell whether he's for or against abortion. But I still think he should be given a chance. You know he's qualified to be there, so he should be able to do a good job.

Rachel Ward

Yes, I think he should be appointed. He'll change the Supreme Court because he'll add a different perspective, someone with new ideas. He could be a big asset.

Rochelle Starks
freshman

I think he knows what he's doing, but he does have a few flaws standing in his way. But one of his best assets is he has George Bush in his corner.

Kisha Bosan
freshman

I think he should be. My only reason being is that the president nominated him, so he must be qualified.

Ann Reinersman

Absolutely not. I say this for two reasons; civil rights and civil rights! The last thing the Supreme Court needs is another conservative justice. I think the Republican party thinks that African-Americans are so shallow to the point that we will support someone just based on race.

Renaldo Carter

No. I don't think he's open enough, he's too close-minded.

Alisa Dunn

I would like to see someone more liberal. His nomination will change the balance of the court.

Cindy Lawson

The Road to the High Court

Last week, Clarence Thomas stood before the United States Senate Judiciary Committee answering questions that would decide his fate as a justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

They asked his opinion about the "gag rule" (where the administration can cut off federal funding for family planning clinics that provide abortion counseling), affirmative action and constitutional law. All were supposed to determine Thomas' impartiality.

One major concern of the committee was Thomas' views on the use of natural law when interpreting the law.

They should go ahead and put him on the Supreme Court. They are never going to satisfy either the conservative or liberal side, it doesn't matter.

Remal Castleman

No, he should not be on the Supreme Court. Simply because of his non-views on abortion and the importance of the Roe v. Wade decision being brought up again. One vote can change that decision; it's a position of a lifetime.

Cheri Baker
freshman

No. People in government need to be more open-minded to things. They should be able to take all views into consideration.

Student Advises: Look Into Campus Fraternities

Dear Students:

My name is David Stringer and some of you may know me as president of Student Government. However, before I was SG president I was president of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. I am Still Sig Ep president and I would like to inform students about Sig Eps and the Greek fraternity system in general.

The Greek fraternities at Northern finishes fall rush approximately two weeks ago. While all the fraternities improved themselves both in terms of the amount and quality of men, I think that everyone would agree that rush could have been even better. One problem I have seen over my last three years at Northern is that people either don't know about fraternities or have huge misconceptions about them. The first misconception I would like to address is the myth that fraternities are buying your friends. Fraternities are NOT buying your friends! The dues paid for fraternities, for the most part, go straight to the national fraternity. These funds are used for such things as national and regional leadership conferences, scholarships, college loans, and housing. If fraternities are buying your friends, I would like to know where my payments are for the last three years, because I haven't received a cent to be someone's friend or fraternity brother.

Another myth I would like to dispel is the belief that fraternities are like the ones portrayed in the movie "Animal House." Every fraternity on this campus has some type of risk management policy that deals with drinking and driving, rape and substance abuse. Fraternities across the country have had their charters pulled because of "Animal House"-type activities. National fraternities are not putting up with these activities and neither is this university. Fraternities are extremely exceptional organizations in terms of personal, leadership, social, and athletic development. If you look at any national, state, or local organization, many of the leaders will have been members of Greek organizations. Even at Northern, where less than five percent of the student body is Greek, approximately 50 percent of the Student Government is made up of Greek actives and pledges. Greeks also sponsor philanthropies including United Way, Adopt-A-Highway, American Heart Association, Big Brothers of America, Easter Seals and Special Olympics. There is a lot more to fraternities than you have been told.

In closing, I would like to ask you to visit a fraternity or sorority. There is no pressure for you to join, so you will get an unbiased opinion about what Greeks are like. If you join in the spring, that's great. If you don't, at least you'll have a better perception of Greeks at Northern. Greek systems flourish at other universities, there is no reason why Northern's can not do the same.

If you have any questions about the Greek system in general, please call Betty Mulkey at 572-5763. If you have any questions about Sigma Phi Epsilon in particular, please call me at 572-5190 or 344-1804.

Thank you very much for your time and please become involved.

Sincerely,
David A. Stringer
President, Sigma Phi Epsilon

Students Behavior is Appalling

Dear Editor,

It astonished me to witness the harsh and crude behavior displayed by the NKU student body in reaction to a preacher and his wife this past Wednesday (Sept. 11).

Shouting vulgarities and throwing objects, such as pennies, is no way for "aspiring intellectuals" to behave. We as students must keep our minds open to new information; if we do otherwise our learning days are over.

While in the classroom we would not dare shout obscenities or throw pennies at a professor, so why must we do it to others who wish to teach?

It's truly amazing how easily people forget the freedom of speech when other views conflict with their view.

Now don't misjudge me, I myself found many of their ideas and stereotypical thinking offensive, but at least I respected their right to speak.

Campus Crime

Crime reports compiled from the NKU Department of Public Safety from Aug. 22 to Sept. 12, 1991.

Theft - A female student living in the Residence Halls reported the theft of her purse, containing $30 and an assortment of personal papers. The purse was found by an unknown person and returned to the owner, all items were in the purse.

Criminal Mischief - A female living in the Residence Halls reported to Public Safety that persons unknown had vandalized her vehicle by making a long scratch, full length, across the top of the hood. The estimate to repair the damage is $500.

Shoplifting - A Public Safety officer working a shoplifting detail in the NKU Bookstore apprehended a female student for shoplifting. The female student will appear in Campbell County District Court to answer the charge in September.

Indecent Exposure - A female student studying in the Steely Library reported to Public Safety that a male had exposed himself to her. A search of the area was conducted by Public Safety officer with negative results. The male had left the area.

Criminal Mischief - A female student living the Residence Halls reported to Public Safety that persons unknown had thrown a bottle against the windshield of her vehicle. The impact of the bottle cracked the windshield.

Theft - A faculty member reported to Public Safety the theft of three glass decanters, valued at $53, from the first floor of the Fine Arts building. The theft took place over a five day period of time.

Theft - Two female students (roommates) living in the Residence Halls reported to Public Safety that $130 in U.S. currency was stolen from their room. Both students were away at the time of the theft.

Theft - Physical Plant reported to Public Safety that a total of eight cases of paper towels were stolen from two different buildings during a three day period of time. The value of the towels is $120.

According to university officials, approximately half of NKU associate degrees qualify for special population students as outlined in this grant.

What NKU will do is staff people in specific areas to meet these students' needs, Isherwood explained.

"Many of the non-traditional or special students have difficulty adjusting to college," Isherwood said.

"Many people in the community are not aware of the associate degree available to them," he continued. "It could make a big difference to them."

"I think the new grant will draw more students into attending NKU for associate degree programs," Isherwood said. "Expanding these services is real exciting."

This act marks the largest ever federal funding authorization for vocational education. The law went into effect on July 1.

"I think it's great that the federal government is giving money to universities to allow non-traditional students to get an education and gain job skills," said sophomore Krista Wagner, a single parent.

Professor Compares U.S. and Chinese Universities

A Closer Look College in China Provides Different Perspective

ANN ABBOTT
FEATURES EDITOR

In the Chinese province of Anhui, roughly 50 percent of grade school students are not allowed to go to high school.

Only one in eleven high school students are allowed to go to college.

Even a perfect score on a grueling four day entrance exam can not guarantee a student a place in a university. Often times, a student's family history and a political party affiliation has as much or more to do with admission to college than potential or intelligence.

Compare this to the requirements at most American colleges. Think about where you might be if you were in China.

Dr. Chenliang Sheng is a professor in the Literature and Language department at NKU.

He attended undergraduate school in China and did his graduate work at the University of Maryland.

He's originally from the eastern part of mainland China.

He has a great deal of information to share on a culture and educational system that is very different from our own.

"Every year there were some places (in the universities) reserved for those students with 'bad' backgrounds. These students came from families who included perhaps former business men, who had connections with the former regime, or who formerly owned land," Sheng said.

"If your father was a former land owner, you were virtually doomed," he said.

This difference is an offshoot of Chinese communist philosophy, Sheng said.

"The land belongs to the people," he said (according to communist philosophy).

He explained that it was considered wrong by the government to own land or substantial property.

Once a student made it to college, he or she was given little opportunity to make choices for his or her future.

"In the states (the U.S.), students are free to choose whatever classes they want - in China, all courses are fixed. Even majors are assigned by the party," said Sheng.

Another thing very different about Chinese universities is that students are placed in groups when they begin college, and they stay with these groups until they graduate.

"You are assigned to a class that stays together, and learns together for four years," he said.

In charge of these classes is a political commissar, who is to train students and "guide" them in the way of the party. He has a lot of control over the lives of the students.

"In China, the university is not a place for free thinking and the passing of knowledge, the university is a tool to train people for the party," Sheng said.

"Here (in the U.S.) is freedom, but freedom involves responsibility," he said.

Sheng explained that students take for granted so many of their freedoms - even their freedom to drop out of school.

"In China, people do not drop out - it would be like saying you don't want to work for the party."

Sheng said there are certain unspoken social rules a student must follow in China if he or she wants to succeed.

"You have to be cautious all the time, you have to wave the flag in public," he said.

Sheng said there are reasons why education is so tightly controlled in China.

"They have to control the intellectuals - they know what capitalism is and what Marx and Engel really said."

Sheng explained that in the years before Tiananmen Square, the Chinese people experienced more freedom than they had in decades.

He said he thinks the small taste of freedom they did have spurred the demonstrations.

"Once you have tasted freedom, you will not go back," he said.

According to Sheng, students in China have traditionally led changes.

Even on the high school level, change is apparent.

"Many students criticize the communist party in the classroom," said Sheng's daughter, Yisheng Shen.

Sheng emphasized that "American students are very fortunate."

He said the idea that foreign students are somehow smarter than American students is a myth.

"American students are as good as their Chinese counterparts," he said.

Sheng said that the best thing about America is the opportunities provided.

"It's never too late in America - if you missed a chance, there is always another. For example, take the number of non-traditional students at NKU," he said. "This is one of the greatest things about America."

Dr. Sheng's daughter, Yisheng Shen, is proof that many Chinese students are well aware of the meaning of capitalism and democracy.

She said that she and her friends from China were very aware of what capitalism was, and what western culture was all about.

"I wasn't surprised too much by what I saw here (in the U.S.). I knew about the United States," she said.

Shen said that she misses her friends in China - but not the Chinese schools.

"The schools were very boring. You study all the time, and then on your ten minute break, the teacher makes you exercise - if he saw you standing around, he made you exercise more," she said.

Shen said that the young people in today's China dress much like American young people. This is vastly different to the days when her father went to school and had to wear the traditional gray communist uniform.

They have something similar to shopping malls, but she described them as "shabby."

Shen has been in the U.S. for two months and is a freshman at NKU, studying biology. She plans to be a veterinarian. "Of her own free will" added her father.

Shen speaks English very well. "We started English in elementary school," she explained.

Sheng also has a son, Eric, who also attends NKU. He is an athlete who plays volleyball.

Paul Daniels wants to be heard. As a disc jockey at WRFN, the student radio station, he wants you to listen to him - literally.

As general manager of the station, he wants NKU students to hear the message that WRFN is alive and kicking.

"Our main goal is to increase University awareness of WRFN," Daniels said. "We are doing it slowly; more people are becoming aware of who we are."

Daniels said that not only does he want people to listen, he wants people to become involved.

"We always have a need for people to help out. We never turn anyone away."

Daniels explained that it's often hard to keep people on the staff once they realize it's not all fun and games.

"We have an incredible turn-over rate. People stop showing up because it's hard work - and sometimes because it's sunny out."

"We need all kind of people," Daniels stressed. "We need sales, promos, writers, and wacky commercial voices. We definitely need more female voices."

Daniels said he is very excited about this year because it is the first time in a while that all department head positions are filled. This year, they have a full management staff.

"In the past, there has been as little as two or three people running the entire show," Daniels said.

Daniels said the successful filling of these positions is due to his own "personal campaign in Landrum" among the RTF (radio, television, and film) and other communications majors.

"I've always had the opinion that this is the best hands on education," he said.

Daniels said he encourages everyone who is interested to get involved.

He said he thinks many students are apprehensive because they think there isn't a need for them - or maybe they're shy about getting involved.

He also pointed out that he believes NKU students are missing a great opportunity that not every school provides.

"The University of Cincinnati doesn't have anything like WRFN," Daniels emphasized.

Daniels said he thinks that working at WRFN could definitely help you get a job.

"To people who are involved, it's so logical. People on the outside (working in the media) commend you so much - they think it's great experience."

Daniels said he thinks WRFN is definitely worth listening to.

He describes their format as "Rock 40," which means "not all hard rock, or album cuts, but a mix of top 40, too."

"As long as it's popular and it fits into our spectrum, we will play it," Daniels said.

Letters from page 6From SG to You*Penny Wars is Underway

Dear Students:

This has been an extremely busy week for Student Government. On Sept. 11 and 12, Student Government sponsored Gripe Days. Students participated a great deal more this year than they had last year, with approximately 500 gripes being taken. Congratulations to Grievance and Affirmative Action Chairman Mike Clines for doing such a great job on this project. I join him in thanking you very much for taking the time to let us know your concerns!

In addition to activities at Northern, I was also involved outside the university. On Sunday, Sept. 8, I attended a Board of Student Body Presidents (BSBP) meeting at the University of Kentucky. Among the topics discussed were the health insurance bill, residency status for regents, and financial aid for middle class students. On Thursday, Sept. 12, I went to Frankfort to lobby for the repeal of the Student Health Insurance Bill. I spoke with Senator Tom Buford who believes the bill repeal will pass through both the Kentucky Senate and House of Representatives. I was encouraged to tell students to write their senators and representatives concerning this matter. I was assured that the congressmen and congresswomen do read their mail and take opinions stated extremely seriously. So, PLEASE WRITE YOUR SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES. If you do not know who your representative or senator is, please call me at 572-5190.

Thank you for your time and please have a safe week.

Sincerely,

Rush Is Back

PAUL DANIELS
STAFF WRITER

The trio of Alex Lifeson, Neil Peart, and Geddy Lee (the rock group Rush) are up to their old tricks once again: performing unbelievable rhythm tracks and intricate tempo changes, and making it sound easy.

Their latest release, Roll The Bones, marks their second collaboration with producer Rupert Hine, and it's a dandy. The music tracks are more flawless than ever, and Peart's consistently thought provoking lyrics are even more cerebral than usual.

The album opens up with "Dreamline," a fast paced song that immediately grabs the listener and reassures him that Rush is still innovative.

Even though Rush has changed very little about its traditional tight-laced style, Roll The Bones shows that it still isn't afraid to experiment. The album's title track even features an intelligent, satirical rap (with a voice that sounds a lot like the one from the chorus of an earlier hit, "Subdivisions").

Rush's trademark has always been the combination of Lee's and Lifeson's mathematically perfect music, with Peart's thought demanding prose. This release is no different.

However, in Roll The Bones Peart uncharacteristically seems to ask more questions than he answers. It seems as if the sheer confusion of the world has caught up with him. His songs ask traditional questions like "Why are we here?" and new ones like "Do we have to say goodbye to the past?"

The bands wandering train of thought is best seen in the back-to-back songs "Ghost of a Chance" and "Neurotica."

The former is a love song by every definition, touting the endurance and merits of love. The latter is a song addressing a lover or girlfriend which starts out by saying "You just don't get it." Irony at its best, as only Rush can do it.

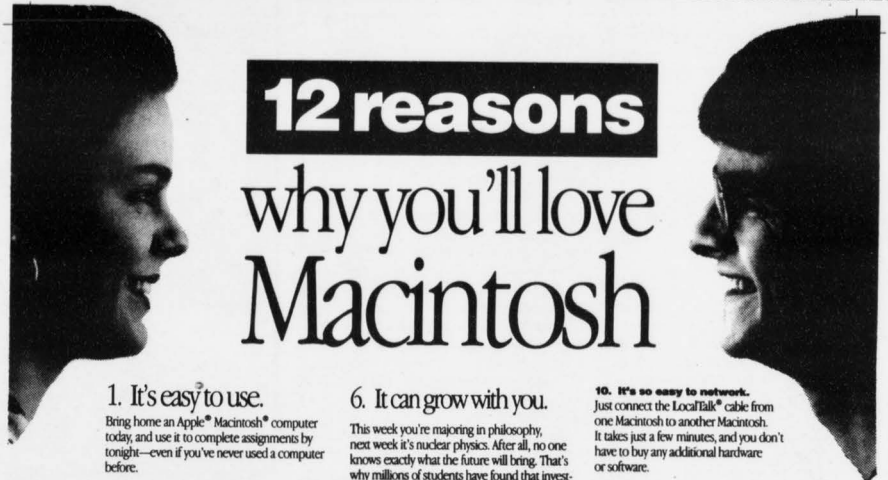

The bottom line? Rush is back. It's shown us time and time again that it can make music that can not be imitated, and Roll The Bones is no exception. Every song is full of music that will knock your socks off, and lyrics that make you go "hmmmm..."

12 reasons why you'll love Macintosh

1. It's easy to use.

Bring home an Apple® Macintosh® computer today, and use it to complete assignments by tonight—even if you've never used a computer before.

2. You don't have to speak computers.

Instead of cryptic MS-DOS commands such as COPY C:\WORK\PROG\GREAT.DOC A:\WORK, Macintosh uses familiar words, such as Copy and Paste, and pictures, such as file folders for storing your documents and a trash can for files you want to throw away.

3. You don't have to be a computer science major to set one up.
Just plug everything together, flip the "on" switch, and you're ready to roll.

4. It's a breeze to copy information and paste it into another document.

To copy this chart, simply use the mouse to choose the Copy command.

To place the chart in another document, just choose the Paste command.

5. All Macintosh programs work in the same way.

Learn to use one Macintosh program, and you've learned the basics of using them all. For example, the commands you use, such as Open, Close, Copy, Paste, Save, Cut, Print, and Undo, are found in the same place—every time.

6. It can grow with you.

This week you're majoring in philosophy, next week it's nuclear physics. After all, no one knows exactly what the future will bring. That's why millions of students have found that investing in a Macintosh is a smart move. Because Macintosh can immediately help you do whatever you do—better. And if, come tomorrow, you find that you want to do something different, no problem. It's easy to upgrade your Macintosh to help you rise to the challenge.

7. It's great for college and beyond.

Doing your work faster, better, and more creatively is also a plus in the working world—and that's precisely why Macintosh computers are used in 74 percent of Fortune 1000 companies.*

74%

8. It's got connections.

To connect a printer, a modem, an external hard disk, or just about any other peripheral to a Macintosh, simply plug it in. That's all there is to it.

9. It lets you work with others.

Every Macintosh is equipped with an Apple SuperDrive™, a unique floppy disk drive that can use not only Macintosh disks, but also MS-DOS and OS/2 disks created on IBM and IBM-compatible computers. With SoftPC from Insignia Solutions, you can even run MS-DOS applications on your Macintosh.

*Based on a survey conducted by Computer Intelligence in February 1991.

10. It's so easy to network.

Just connect the LocalTalk® cable from one Macintosh to another Macintosh. It takes just a few minutes, and you don't have to buy any additional hardware or software.

11. You can connect to your school's mainframe or minicomputer.

With Macintosh, you can send in assignments, gain access to software you need for a class, and receive lecture notes, class schedules, and other information—right from your own room.

12. It's more affordable than ever.

Macintosh prices have never been lower—especially with the student pricing available from your authorized Apple campus reseller. You may even qualify for financing, which makes Macintosh even more affordable.

These reasons all add up to the power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.*

NKU Soccer Team Downs Thomas More In Opener

BRIAN BALLMAN
STAFF WRITER

A pair of freshmen are making immediate contributions for the men's soccer team.

Freshmen Trevor Fugazzi and Kirk Mason each scored a goal as the Norse defeated Thomas More College 3-1 in its season opener.

Coach John Toebben said he was pleased with the performance of the freshmen.

"The new kids looked good. They played aggressive," Toebben said.

Neither team was able to take control of the wet field for the first 15 minutes of the game.

Toebben attributed his team's shaky start to nervousness. Fugazzi agreed.

"I was nervous. I wasn't sure how I would stack up against the other players," Fugazzi said of his first college game.

Once the players settled down, the Norse began to take control of the game.

Toebben said he felt his team's speed gave them an advantage over Thomas More.

"We're a quick team. We have a lot of speed at midfield," Toebben said.

The Norse took several shots on goal in the first half, only for them to be just off target.

With 11:50 to go in the first half, Trevor Fugazzi found himself in the right place at the right time.

He rebounded a missed shot by Kirk Mason and scored to give NKU a 1-0 lead.

The Norse scored again four minutes later when Mason scored off a crossing pass by Todd Gruenwald.

The 2-0 score stood until halftime.

Thomas More changed its attack to start the second half by going to five forwards. NKU still managed to keep the ball at Thomas More's end of the field.

When Thomas More did enter NKU's side of the field, the Norse defense took care of any threat.

This was highlighted by a leaving save by NKU sophomore goalie Tim Yacks.

Thomas More was held to four shots on goal for the game. NKU had 12.

With 9:50 to go in the game the Norse took a 3-0 lead when Tim Lawson scored on a pass from George Senfner.

Thomas More avoided a shutout when Todd Mueller rebounded a Craig Rhodis miss with two minutes to go in the game.

The Norse play its next six games on the road, three of them are against conference opponents.

Toebben said the team must continue to improve to match its success of last season.

Last year the Norse finished second in the conference tournament.

"(The first win) is a good start. We still have some things we can improve on," Toebben said.

Cross Country Set To Take NKU Invitational Saturday

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

Cross country coach Tim Schlotman is confident about his team's chances in this weekend's NKU Invitational.

"I have confidence in my teams, they know what it takes to win," he said.

NKU faces Wilmington College and Xavier in the meet this Saturday at A.J. Jolly Park in Campbell County.

He expects the major competition in the meet to come from Division I school Xavier.

"I noticed some times in the paper and they were good," he said of Xavier.

Although he said Xavier's times looked good on paper he feels they aren't a major concern.

"I don't put a lot of stock in comparing times."

"Because of differences in courses, you have to be careful in comparing times," Schlotman said.

Schlotman said although Wilmington won't be a factor as a team, individually a couple of runners could be a factor.

In cross country last weekend NKU's men's team finished first and the women finished third in the Wilmington Invitational.

The men were led to victory by having three runners take the top three places in the race.

Sophomore Ernie Brooks placed first in the five mile race with a time of 27:52.

Junior Chris Fitzgerald finished second and freshman James Hartfiel finished third.

The women were led by sophomore Becky Trotta, she finished fifth. Junior Amy Wehrman finished sixth.

Men's results:(5 miles)

Volleyball Aims For .500

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

With the team's nine-game season opening road trip behind it the NKU women's volleyball team hopes to have its record at .500 before conference play begins.

"I think we learned a great deal about ourselves on this trip. Our goal is to reach the .500 mark before our conference opener," coach Mary Biermann said.

The road trip began on Sept. 4 at Wilmington College when the Lady Norse defeated the Lady Quakers in the opening match of the season.

The Lady Norse then traveled to the Northern Michigan Invitational where the team lost all five of its matches, including two to nationally ranked Division II powers Alaska-Anchorage and Northern Michigan.

Last week the team began its climb back to the .500 mark with wins against Capital University and Midway College.

The Lady Norse defeated Capital 15-3, 14-16, 15-5 and 15-1.

Senior Linda Schnetzer led the Lady Norse with 13 kills in the match.

Freshman Ann Hicks led the team with 16 digs.

Last Thursday in Midway, Ky, the team defeated Midway College in three straight games, 15-12, 15-11 and 15-11.

Sophomore Tamara Ramer led the Lady Norse with 13 kills.

Schnetzer and sophomore Peggy Ziegler each had 12 kills.

Tonight the Lady Norse open its home schedule against Central State University.

This weekend the Lady Norse are back in action with two games on the road.

Friday the team opens Great Lakes Valley Conference play against Indiana/Purdue at Ft. Wayne.

Saturday at noon the team plays GLVC opponent Ashland.

Soccer Team's Record Stands At 3-1

STAFF REPORT

After opening its season at home against Thomas More College the NKU men's soccer team took to the road for three games last week.

Last Thursday the Norse defeated Lincoln Memorial 2-1.

Junior Tom Derenthal led NKU with one goal scored and one assist.

Freshman Trevor Fugazzi also scored for NKU.

Derenthal dominated NKU's next game against Brescia Saturday. He led the Norse with four goals.

Junior Todd Gruenwald and freshman Jeff Gough also scored for NKU as the Norse defeated Brescia 6-1.

Sophomore goalie Tim Yacks had five saves in the game.

Sunday afternoon the Norse opened Great Lakes Valley Conference play against Kentucky Wesleyan.

NKU trailed the Panthers 2-0 at halftime but forced the game into overtime with second half goals by junior Steve Giles and freshman Kirk Mason.

Senior Tom Ammann had assists on both goals.

In overtime, Kentucky Wesleyan's Jeff Wilson scored with eight minutes left to go to give the Panthers the win.

NKU dominated the game by outshooting Kentucky Wesleyan 35-11.

However, that wasn't enough to win the game.

NKU falls to 3-1 overall, 0-1 in the GLVC.

SPORTS BRIEF

Women's Tennis Team Opens Season

STAFF REPORT

The NKU women's tennis team stands at 1-2 after its first weekend of competition.

The team opened its season at home against Georgetown last Friday. The Lady Norse were defeated 6-1.

The lone victory in the match belonged to the number two doubles team of Terra Teaney and Hallie Hundemer.

Saturday the team traveled to Louisville for a pair of matches against Bellarmine and Kentucky State.

The team defeated Kentucky State 6-0 and lost to Bellarmine 6-0.

Golf Team: 17th Out Of 20

STAFF REPORT

Women's Center Prepares for Annual Candlelight Vigil

STACEY DURBIN
MANAGING EDITOR

Last year, the president of NKU's Campus National Organization of Women heard of the success of candlelight vigils being held across the country.

These vigils were to increase awareness of the problem of violence against women.

Tracy Davis, now a NKU alumni, presented the idea to various groups in Northern Kentucky and to NKU's Women's Center.

Thinking it was good idea, Katherine Meyer, Women's Center director, Northern Kentucky NOW (National Organization for Women) and the Women's Crisis Center in Newport decided to get involved.

150-200 people came to the events last year, according to Meyer.

More organizations were included this year in the sponsorship to increase awareness in both Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky.

Participants in the vigil will assemble at Yeatman's Cove in Cincinnati at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 24 and will march across the Central Bridge to the Campbell County Courthouse in Newport.

Ginny and Paulette, a women's music duo, will provide entertainment for the evening.

Several guest speakers will be on hand to address women's issues.

Judge Nadine Allen of the Hamilton County Municipal Court will speak of the legal matters concerning sexual assault.

Dr. Willie Elliot of NKU's Department of Human Services will discuss date rape.

Sue Dean Guilkey, Victim's Advocate for the Campbell County Commonwealth Attorney's office, will address survivor issues.

Study Tips: There is an Easier Way to Improve Your Grades

IMA SMART CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Are you becoming overloaded with homework? Are your classes getting the best of you? Does the stack of books you have to read surpass your height by at least six inches? Do you have to take an antacid before your calculus class?

If you have answered yes to any of these questions or think you will be in the not to distant future, here are a few ideas to save you from collegiate anxiety.

Let's start with that amazing stack of books that your literature and history professors have so graciously overwhelmed you with this semester. Get over the fact that you will be able to recite "Canterbury Tales" and have amassed enough knowledge to appear on "Jeopardy," let's deal with that monument of books.

First of all, remember that you're not alone. You have at least a whole class of suffering friends to sympathize with your plight. Here are a few suggestions to help you chisel that book monument down to size.

Grab a few of your fellow sufferers, I mean students, and organize reading discussion groups. The way to make this successful is first organize what readings are due, coinciding with your exams. Most professors provide accurate syllabi outlining what the expected readings are for the week.

Then, introduce yourself to those four people that you have been sitting by all semester and ask them if they would be interested in this project. If you can meet weekly or even every other week to discuss the readings, your grades can only improve.

First of all, this method forces you to do you readings before the day of your exam. Secondly, it gives you an opportunity to acquire other perspectives on the reading.

If the discussion group method doesn't work into your schedule, here are some ideas that might. NKU provides students with two real gold mines of help.

The Learning Assistance Center and the Writing Center are there to help you help yourself. The Writing Center provides tutors to help you with the mechanics of creating a good paper. Everything from proofreading to helping with footnotes. These folks know how to help you add the finishing touches that make the difference between "A" and "B" papers.

The Learning Assistance Center will provide you with a tutor to help you find the way to an "A" in geography (and all your other subjects). Both of these services are free!

As your college career continues, one of the best methods to help promote class attendance, homework completion and student support is to take classes with your friends.

The best thing that you can do for yourself is to go to your classes and take good notes. Also, get to know your professors. Most of the NKU faculty is quite friendly and helpful. NKU is lucky enough to have some very dedicated and talented people that are willing to go the extra mile to help students out.

Hopefully, these ideas will save you from midterm disaster. Good luck, and get busy.
