AS&T building is open for the semester

NEWS EDITOR

NKU's mathematics, computer science and technology departments begin the new year in a new building, the Applied Science and Technology Center.

Construction of the building, which is located east of the lake, began in January, 1988. The building is completely finished, except for the data network. rebidding for the data network will begin in the spring.

According to Mary Paula Schuh, Director of Campus Planning, there are only minor problems to be worked out in the building.

"We're having a minor problem with the heating system which we are working out," Schuh said.

The Applied Science and Technology Center is characterized by a two-story colonnade along the front of the building. The structure, constructed of precast concrete and bronze glazing, reflects the university's architectural design standards.

The building was designed by Godsey

Associates Architects, Louisville, Kentucky with the assistance of Gartner, Burdick, Bauer-Nilson of Florence. The consulting engineers were Maxfield, conference rooms. In addition, the facility includes computer labs for general university use as well as academic computing.

Backer, Schwartz and Lonneman of Covington. The general contractor is the Monarch Construction Company of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Applied Science and Technology center houses 56 faculty offices, 12 classrooms, eight labs, three display areas, and several lounges and

With a total project cost of $10 million, the building contains 110,693 square feet. Project funding includes installation of a new telephone switch for the campus.

The building will be equipped with a state of the art data network system, allowing building occupants direct access to the university's mainframe computers located in the administrative Center. It will also provide extensive networking capabilities within and between offices and labs located in the building.

Computer rooms are equipped with raised floors and special heating and air-conditioning units to better control the environment and protect computer equipment. Another special feature is that all lights in the building are equipped with a special lens to minimize computer glare.

Technology labs are located on the first floor of the building. The second floor houses the technology offices and most classrooms, while the third floor contains mathematics offices and academic computing.

Final decisions concerning the spaced opened in the older buildings have not been made. There are some renovations to be completed.

The next item on the expansion agenda for the university is the Fine Arts Completion Project. This is a plan to add a music wing on to the Fine Arts Center. Plans include a 650 seat concert hall, a music room and a band room.

Bringing on the 90s

The eighties are full of memories, happy, sad, interesting and tragic. These are the things that stand out in my mind when I remember...

The disasters: Mt. St. Helens, Hurricane Hugo, earthquakes in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Mexico City, and Armenia.

The tragedies: We lost Lucy, the Duke, the Skipper, Count Basie, Rock Hudson, Marvin Gaye, Irving Berlin, and John Lennon. We will miss them all.

The world of sports will miss Bart Giamatti, Paul "Bear" Bryant, Joe Louis, and Billy Martin.

Space technology boomed in the eighties with the completion of the space shuttle. The Challenger disaster reminded us that space technology has not been perfected, and is never to be taken for granted.

The causes of the eighties included Ethiopia, anti-drug activity, homeless. MADD, SADD, civil rights, AIDS and democracy.

Democracy won in Czechoslovakia, and in East Germany as the Berlin wall came tumbling down.

Closer to home, 27 lives were lost in the Carrollton bus crash. Concern mounted over the uranium processing plant.

Pete Rose entered baseball immortality with 4,192, and exited the game in humiliation and disgrace.

These are the people, places and events I remember about the eighties. How many things have I forgotten? Countless, I'm sure.

And what do the nineties hold? We have yet to see. Certainly more technology, more tragedy and more triumphs.

SG awards grants to 11 students

STEVE RUCH
CONTRIBUTOR

Every semester NKU's Student Government awards book grants to deserving students. This semester, however, Student Government awarded one full in-state tuition scholarship as well.

* SG's aluminum recycling program is really beginning to pay off for NKU students. Because of their recycling efforts, SG was able to increase the amount of money it awards every semester from 10 $100 book grants totaling $1,000, to 10 book grants plus one $1,585 per semester.

SG has had some help from the bookstore as well. A small portion of every dollar students spend on textbooks is donated by the bookstore to SG's scholarship account, to be given out in the form of scholarships.

Last semester there were 85 applicants for the scholarship. The applications were reviewed by a committee of six people, four from Student Government, and two bookstore employees.

The applicants were rated on five areas: GPA, honors, merit, community service and campus activities.

Since the scholarship is awarded based on merit and not need, the students financial situation was not considered as a main factor.

Parking cost increases

MARK SUTPHIN
STAFF WRITER

The price for an NKU parking sticker starting next fall will again increase as the second part of a two-year plan to improve parking on campus.

John Connor, director of NKU's Public Safety, said the cost for a student sticker will increase to $24 while a faculty/staff sticker will rise to $48. The proposal for the two-year increase was made last year to spread out the act of a large jump in parking costs.

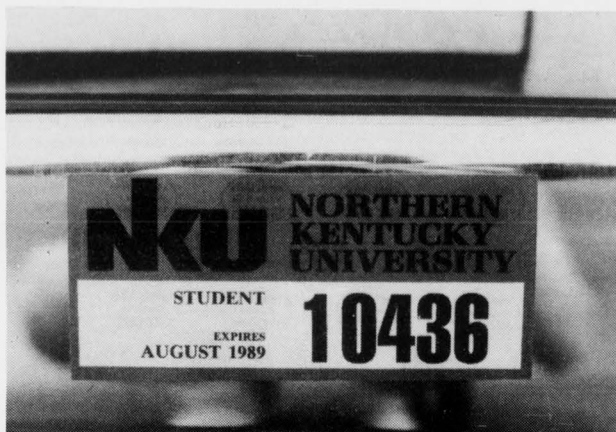

In the past 10 years, NKU had not seen an increase in parking costs. But with increasing enrollment and more students on campus during the morning hours, necessary changes had to be made.

After the Fall increases, fees for parking will be reviewed on a biennium system, meaning that costs will be guaranteed for at least two years thereafter.

The revenues from the increased costs will give preference to the expansion of parking as well as the resurfacing of gravel lots to permanent lots.

When asked about the cost of parking in comparison to surrounding institutions, Connor said, "We still think it is relatively low in comparison to other universities."

In order to place more emphasis on campus and community activities, these areas were more heavily weighted than the others.

GPA is a factor, but was not the main consideration. All of the applicants had excellent academic records and should be congratulated on their achievements.

Choosing the winners was a tough process, since all of the applicants had excellent qualifications.

After three weeks, the decision was finally made, and the winners are as follows:

SCHOLARSHIP WINNER
Linda Talley

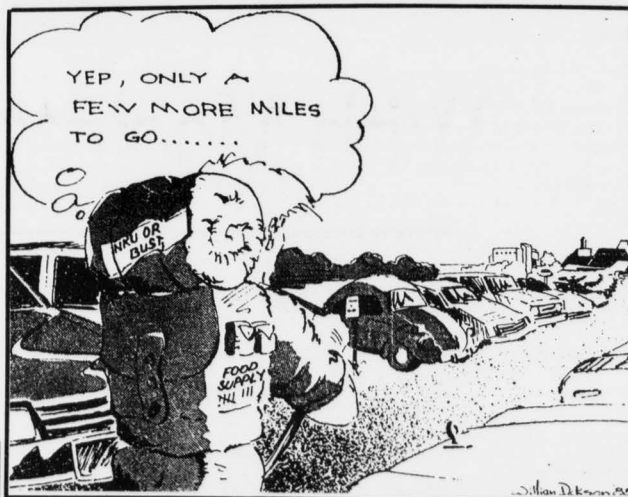

BOOK GRANT RECIPIENTS
Ellen Horning
Aprile Conrad
Jo Ann Roth
Carrie Clifton
Angela McPherson
Diane Bertsch
Maribeth Witt
Melissa Lauer
Mary Beth Geisel
George Smart

...And a Happy New Year

Let's start off the semester by saying welcome back or hello to those of you just starting your college career (do you know how long you're in for?)

The Northerner staff hopes everyone had a nice holiday, and we know everyone is bright-eyed and ready for the semester to begin. Yes, the sarcasm is starting early due to lack of sleep.

Well, let's catch you up on the exciting events occurring here on the concrete campus.

We're beginning a new decade, and with that the cost of parking stickers has risen. Stickers now cost $24 compared to last semester's $20, compared to last year's $15. Lets hope new parking lots are in our future.

The litter on campus seems to be piling up. We're becoming slobs. Concrete isn't beautiful, but it looks better without the gum wrappers and cigarette butts.

Our computers are still missing, but Student Activities has offered to lend us one. Thanks a million, you have saved the life of the Editor.

What else? The Kentucky legislature will be meeting the week ahead, and one topic of conversation is a sports arena at Northern Kentucky University.

Governor Wilkinson promised NKU an arena during his campaign, but the legislatures say this subject has not come before them.

Sound familiar? Stayed tuned for the verdict.

You stil can't find a parking space.

NKU appeared on the front page of the Sunday Enquirer's Metro Section. Dr. Frank Steely is writing history about the university.

Some good news for some. The school colors are still the same as you left them (gold, white and black).

The 90's also bring a small change in staff at The Northerner's office. Welcome aboard.

And Student Government has a few new representatives.

This semester the theater department will be presenting three plays; Wild Oats, Quliters, and Royal Hunt of the Sun. Don't miss them.

What else have you missed?

The computer lab has been moved from the Administration building to the Applied Science and Technology Center. That's the newest building on campus.

And lastly, we would like to express our sorrow in the loss of a friend. NKU Audio Engineer Clarence Woods died last Friday. This one's for you, Woody.

Litter is a problem for the library

Dear Editor,

Empty soft drink cans. Crumpled snack bags. Containers and sacks from fast food places. Candy bar wrappers. Banana peels. Are we describing a too-full trash can near the parking lot? No, we're describing the inside of Steely Library at NKU. Many libraries do not allow food inside because it attracts bugs and rodents and increases chances of damaging library materials. At NKU we understand the need for a snack break while studying and we have a student lounge on the second floor of the library for this purpose. All we ask is that eating, drinking and smoking is confined to that area or to the loggia (lobby).

Instead, snacking is taking place all over the library, and in addition, empty containers are not being thrown out, but are left wherever they are used, one set in the stairwells. This is creating damage to our books, journals, microforms and furniture, as well as creating an atmosphere that is dirty, cluttered, unattractive, and not the inviting image the library wants to present to our many users. Finally, this trash presents an additional burden to the night cleaning crew, who already have a large list of jobs to perform on a regular basis.

How can you help? We don't want to remove all food and drink from the library, though that is always an option. The easiest route for everyone is to snack beforehand and throw containers away before you come inside the library, to take them directly to the second floor lounge, or to go to that lounge or the loggia when you want a study break and a snack or a smoke. When you are finished, please put your trash in one of the nearby waste cans. Or better yet, place your soft drink cans in the Student Government recycling bin.

We think we can continue to meet the needs of the majority of our users by trying to conform to the present policy regarding food and drink in the library. We'd like to keep our moderate policy, which is pro-user, but which still supports the goals of no bugs, no rodents, no spills, no damage. But we need your active cooperation and support in this simple matter.

Acting Director of the Library

Parents say, 'Take a stand on drunk driving.'

Dear Students,

You have plans for your life - goals to reach - a brilliant future....

So did Linda Lancaster, a doctoral candidate at the University of Maine, Orono, Maine. One February 18, 1989, the drunken driver of a pickup truck struck her down as she and a classmate walked along a sidewalk in the campus community. Linda died three hours later.

All her goals and plans for the future were wiped out in one senseless moment of drunken violence - a violence our legislatures have yet to recognize as murder - and our courts of law waiver over justice for the victim.

You have plans for your life - but take a moment as you walk across campus to ponder on your chances of becoming the random victim of a drunken driver. We all carry the same risk, as did Linda. But with your help we can - and must - keep our streets and sidewalks safe.

Take a stand. Refuse to ride with an intoxicated driver. Volunteer to drive a friend who has partied too much. Write your congressman to initiate deterrent legislation against killer drivers: no time off for good behavior - no suspending half a sentence - no plea bargaining.

Do something positive, if not for yourself or for a friend, then for someone who loves you.

Keep your future alive!

Sincerely,

Russell and Eleanor Nicholson
Parents of Linda Lancaster

Reader appreciates the campus newspaper

Dear Editor,

Just a brief note to thank you for an excellent student publication for the Fall 1989 Semester. I enjoy thumbing through The Northerner between classes, and look forward to its weekly arrival.

Unlike last (academic) year, when readers were sickened by a weekly dose of offensive, hateful material, The NEW Northerner is entertaining and informative. Your publication is also better-written, with few of the errors in spelling and print reminiscent of last year's paper.

Pertaining to the November 29, 1989, issue, I would like to add that Tom Handorf's article, "Christmas advice for holiday shoppers" was delightful. I appreciated the light humor during the midst of final exams.

Again, thanks again for making The Northerner a tasteful publication again. The university community should be proud!

Sincerely,

Marvin Craig Connor

1989 was the year for the great movies

TOM HANDORF
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

1989 was the year that people flocked into movie theaters in droves to see all kinds of different movies. The film industry made over $5 billion dollars in revenues, topping last year's previous high of $4.6 billion.

All the films that came out weren't an instant pot of gold, but all movies have something unique to offer. Movies were so popular that people even took interest in Rob Lowe's home movies. There were good films, bad films and enough movies with numbers in the titles to make you go crazy counting them all. So, without further ado, here's my second annual best and worst film list.

1989's Top Films

10) Always - Steven Spielberg's romantic fable about love and knowing when to let go, as told in typical Spielberg fashion.

9) War of the Roses - A movie you should see before you step up to the altar. This wicked Danny DeVito comedy shows how ruthless people can be during a divorce.

8) Back to the Future 2 - Although not in the same league as its predecessor, this Future offers more innovation, adventure and creativity.

7) Dad - Jack Lemmon should get an Oscar nomination as an old man who, through the loving care of his son (Ted Danson), learns to enjoy his final days. Touching film that shows us that love lasts from generation to generation.

6) The Little Mermaid- Disney's animated tale of love 'unda the sea' is one of the best animated films to come from the pioneers in the field. The colorful songs, dazzling animation, and a classic story lead to a film that should enchant all.

5) Field of Dreams- Kevin Costner plays an Iowa farmer who builds a baseball diamond in the middle of his field in order for the ghost of "Shoeless" Joe Jackson to play. This is a fantasy that makes you realize that dreams can come true. "If you build it, he will come..."

4) Born on the Fourth of July - Tom Cruise gives the performance of his young career as Vietnam vet Ron Kovic in this Oliver Stone production. The movie is gripping in its emotions, and Cruise is perfect in the role.

3) Say Anything... Cameron Crowe's fine movie about teen relationships stars John Cusack and Ione Skye as lovers who are forced to keep the fires of their love burning against her father's wishes.

One of the better teen comedies.

2) Lethal Weapon 2 - A sequel that surpasses the original. Mel Gibson and Danny Glover return as the Riggs and Murtaugh, but this time they have to battle the South African government. More action and more humor make this Weapon worth seeing.

1) Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade- The final installment in the bullwhip-cracking archaeologist is filled with non stop action and great performances by Harrison Ford and an Oscar-worthy performance by Sean Connery as Indy's dad. A rollercoaster ride from start to finish.

1989's Flop Ten

10) Loverboy- Patrick Dempsey plays a pizza delivery boy who jumps into bed with all the babes on his route, then goes back to his old girlfriend. Isn't she understanding? And no, Rob Lowe doesn't make a cameo.

9) Fright Night II - This sequel to the decent 1985 film doesn't even come close to being a horror-comedy like the first one. I think it's time for Roddy McDowell to get back in his ape suit.

8) ...s Harry Crumb? - John Candy barrels his way through this "comedy" like he's in a trance. Some of his bits are funny, but Candy can't carry all the weight. He has enough already.

7) She's Out of Control - Tony Danza plays a distraught father who goes through agony when he realizes that his daughter is turning into a woman. Hmmm, sounds like a bad sitcom plot. At least on TV, you can flip the channel.

6) Friday the Thirteenth, Part VIII and Nightmare on Elm Street 5 - You know, I never knew there was so many ways that you could maim a person. Jason and Freddie should just face Mike Tyson and get it over with.

5) Weekend at Bernie's - A guy dies and these two slinks throw a party, and no one notices the dead guy. Kind of sounds like a scenario in the Iran Contra affair. What kind of host is this guy? You just don't throw a party and die!

4) Ghostbusters 2 - Who ya gonna call?! Your local video store to see if the original Ghostbusters is in. The whole film seems to be lacking enthusiasm and fun. Sorry, guys. You're busted!

3) Harlem Nights- Eddie Murphy bites off more than he can chew in this comedy. It does have some funny moments, but it's disappointing because it just doesn't seem like a Murphy film. Murphy should either act or direct, but not at the same time.

2) Star Trek 5: The Final Frontier - The title says it all. The "push em ups" of the Enterprise go through the motions in this uneven film that is like Star Trek Meets the Ten Commandments. It's time to put up the pointed ears, put all phasers on stun, and head to the bathroom for some Geritol.

1) Road House- This bar bashing film starred Patrick Swayze as one of the top bar bouncers in the world. Wow! Bar fights! That's an original and entertaining idea for a movie. The movie would've been over five minutes into it if someone would've pulled a gun on him instead of always attacking with pocket knives.

MEL GIBSON and DANNY GLOVER are back on the beat as detectives

Cruise gives the performance of his career in new film : Born on the 4th of July

TOM HANDORF
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Oliver Stone's newest film Born on the 4th of July casts a whole new light on the Vietnam conflict.

Born, based on Vietnam vet Ron Kovic's 1976 best-selling autobiography, stars Tom Cruise as a gung ho young man who believes and loves America. Nothing can change his opinion about the country that he dearly loves. That is until the Vietnam war starts.

The story begins as young Kovic is playing "war" with his buddies in the woods. He believes that if he joins the armed forces he will become a man.

Things transpire, and towards the end of high school Kovic finally decides that he wants to join the Marines, and off he goes on his first tour in 'Nam. While there, he encounters the mindless slaying of a friendly village, and he ends up accidentally shooting a member of his squad. These events psychologically harm him and have an immense impact on the rest of his life.

An errant gunshot wound from the enemy paralyzes him from the waist down, and ends his tour. He is then relegated to life in a wheelchair.

The hospital he stays in is under-staffed and has terrible equipment. The equipment almost causes Kovic to lose a leg. This is all due to the fact that the government does feel they needed to spend any more money for the war vets.

This is the most haunting part of the film. Upon his return from the war, he finds all kinds of hatred and disrespect from people in his town. They don't give him any respect for fighting for his country.

Alcoholism abuse begins to take its ugly toll. It's his only form of escape from the painful visions of 'Nam that flood his memory every day. Realizations finally open his eyes to the fact that we didn't need to fight, that war, in general, was wrong, and he should stand up for what he believes in no matter what the cost.

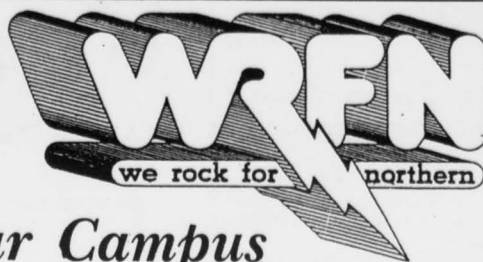

Stone shows us a brutal side of the war. The gritty, non-glamorous side that Hollywood almost never gives us. His Platoon gave us the inside scoop of what went on in the trenches. Born shows us what affects the war had on youths who participated before, during and after.

He uses the camera in order to paint a brutal, breathtaking picture of the war. His use of the camera as a canvas is similar to the work of Steven Spielberg, though Stone makes it more realistic.

The real genius of the film lies in the performance of Cruise. He has come a long way since his Risky Business days.

He has a certain magnetism that allures the viewer to pay close attention to the screen. Cruise transforms throughout the movie in a very realistic manner. It's the role of his career and a sure Oscar nomination.

This movie will do a lot to stoke the fire on the debate whether or not the U.S. should have become involved. But, that's not why you should see the film. You should see it because it's a powerfully intense and true movie that you will be talking about long after the lights come up.

FIND OUT WHAT YOU'VE BEEN MISSING, READ THE NORTHERNER!

Is it foggy in London?

EDITOR

For three years I had been saving for this trip. I've dreamed about going even longer.

The wait finally was over. I made it to London; London, England not London, Kentucky.

Why London? It's foggy. Always raining. The sun never shines, and the tourist paper is awful.

I don't know why London is my dream place. I hope to work there after graduation, but I don't know why.

It's like when you ask a child, "What do you want to be when you grow up, and why that?"

And he replies, "An astronaut, because."

So, why London? Because.

My sister and I hopped on a plane and spent our holiday visiting Big Ben, Parliament, Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, St. Paul's Cathedral and the Tower of London.

It was wonderful, and I can't wait to go back.

The weather was great. It only drizzled one night. It was warmer than it had been here. And yes there was fog, but I would have been disappointed if there wasn't.

The toilet paper was okay, too, except at some of the out of the way tourist spots.

Besides catching all of the tourist attractions, like the changing of the guard and eating fish and chips, I lucked out.

On our way to Buckingham Palace to see the guards switch places, my sister and I ran into this old chap who ended up taking us from one side of London to the other.

Yes, my mother told me not to talk to strange old men, but I think this gent was sent by the gods.

I saw bits of London I didn't know existed. My sister and I had our very own personal tour guide.

His name, Mr. Sawyer, and he took us down the cobblestone streets of London right back into medieval times.

The Tower of London was breath-taking. Standing in the White Tower looking out across the Thames at the Tower Bridge, you can't help but wonder what Sir Walter Raleigh saw while he was imprisoned in the Bloody Tower.

And of course, the tower was where everyone who was anyone had their head chopped off.

England has so much history. It makes you realize how young our country is.

We can visit places in Virginia from 200 years ago. But in London you can visit castles from 1,000 years ago.

Windsor Castle is beautiful. I now see why it's one of the Queen's favorite places to stay.

The real beauty in London can be found in its churches. West Minister Abbey can't be described.

The ceiling, walls and windows all tell stories from the times.

St. Paul's Cathedral wasn't one of my favorite places. I thought it had more beauty than the Abbey. But I decided to climb to the top.

Two hundred steps up a narrow spiral staircase to the top dome I climbed.

I was huffing and puffing all the way, but the view of London was worth it when I reached the top.

It was on the way back down that I missed a step and twisted my knee. It will take over a month to heal, but I had fun.

I guess I'm lucky that I only twisted my knee. My sister threatened to throw me off the dome, but she was too out of breath when we reached the top.

I don't blame her. I made her take a three-hour tour walking in the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes.

I made it up to her though. She got to go to the Hard Rock Cafe and Madame Tussaud's. She also received a special treat.

Madame Tussaud's just opened a new museum in the London Palladium called the Rock Circus. Rock's most famous stars made of wax perform their hit songs as you walk through the museum. If it's successful, I imagine some will be opening in the states.

I had a great time. I had a dream come true.

If you ever have the chance to travel abroad, grab it. Maybe for you it's not London but Rome or Paris, wherever. Go.

Yes, it's expensive, but you'll learn so much about other cultures, countries and yourself.

So, if the opportunity knocks, buy that ticket to anywhere, and who knows what will happen.

Northern teams split in Indy

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

RENSSELAER, Ind.--Rodney Gates scored 27 points, 16 in the second half, while Todd Grace added 19 to lead St. Joseph's to an 86-76 Great Lakes Valley Conference win over Northern Kentucky on Saturday (Jan. 6).

St. Joseph's (9-3, 2-2 in the GLVC) hit 11 three-point field goals in the game compared to only four treys for the Norsemen (4-9, 1-2). Grace connected on five three-pointers and Gates four to help the Pumas overcome a late NKU lead. The Norsemen led by three with just under seven minutes remaining, but St. Joseph's ability to hit from long-range, coupled with a crucial offensive goal tending call against Northern, turned out to be the difference in the game.

"They (St. Joseph's) did a good job of keeping the ball from our inside people the last five minutes of the game," said NKU head coach Ken Shields. "We played hard, we just didn't make the big play late in the game."

each scored 23 points to lead the Northern attack, while Todd Svoboda added 13 and Greg Phelin 11.

On Thursday (Jan. 4) against Indianapolis, the Norsemen dug themselves a 20-point deficit early in the first half and never recovered as they dropped an 80-73 decision to the Greyhounds. Gary Paul scored 23 points to lead the Indianapolis attack.

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

INDIANAPOLIS--Amy Middleton scored a career-high 23 points and grabbed 18 rebounds to lead the NKU Lady Norse past the University of Indianapolis, 72-60, last Thursday (Jan. 4).

For the second straight game, Northern started very slowly, trailing by as many as eight points in the first half before taking a 32-31 lead at the half. Middleton then scored 10 points during a 16-0 run by NKU that helped put the Lady Greyhounds away midway through the second half. The 6-foot-1 sophomore dominated the inside, pulling down 18 rebounds and leading Northern to a 59-28 advantage on the boards.

Middleton was joined in double figures by Christie Freppon with 15, Annie Levens with 13, while Linda Honigford added 10 points before fouling out. Courtney Sands led Indianapolis with 16 points and 6 rebounds.

Yeoman burns Lady Norse St. Joseph's mauls NKU

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

RENSSELAER, Ind.--Jeanette Yeoman. Jeanette Yeoman. And then, more Jeanette Yeoman. For the Northern Kentucky women's basketball team, there was too much Jeanette Yeoman on Saturday night.

Yeoman scored 38 points, hitting on a variety of shots, to lead the undefeated St. Joseph's Lady Pumas to a 97-79 thrashing of the NKU Lady Norse.

"I think Jeanette is the Player of the Year in our conference," said Northern head coach Nancy Winstel, who has yet to win at St. Joseph's Alumni Fieldhouse. "She is definitely an All-America candidate."

The 5-foot-6 senior from Lafayette, Ind., who scored a GLVC record 50 points against the Lady Norse in 1988, helped rally St. Joseph's from an early 10-4 deficit and once she got started, the Lady Norse could find no answers to her. Also hurting Northern on the inside was 6-foot Alicia Dobbels, who scored 23 points.

"I was disappointed in the fact we gave up 97 points," said Winstel. "They really hurt us in the paint, and we're not doing the job defensively inside."

St. Joseph's upped its record to 12-0 overall, 4-0 in the GLVC. Northern dropped to 9-2 overall, 2-1 in the conference. Linda Honigford led the Lady Norse with 25 points. Northern was without the services of 6-foot-1 sophomore Amy Middleton, who may miss the next two weeks because of a knee injury.

Looking ahead to the 90s in sports

DON OWEN SPORTS EDITOR

With the speed of a $100 handshake from a University of Kentucky alumnus, the 1980s have passed us by. And what a nutty decade it was in the world of sports. Olympic boycotts, NCAA probation, Pete Rose and 4,192, Pete Rose and the lifetime ban from baseball, not to mention player strikes in both the NFL and Major League Baseball highlighted the past decade.

Locally, who in the name of Emery Air Freight could forget the Chris Mills episode which helped bring the UK basketball program to its knees. Or the decline of the Cincinnati Reds under both Dick Wagner and Marge Schott? And what about all of the laughs the University of Cincinnati football and basketball programs gave us in the '80s?

Now, the 1990s are here and with them many questions, such as:

-Will college football finally crown a real national champion in Division I through a playoff system, or will the ridiculous corporate-sponsored bowl games continue to rule the hearts and wallets of athletic directors and school presidents?

-Can the Cincinnati Reds afford not to sign Eric Davis?

-Will NKU get a new arena or is political squabbling about to end that dream?

-If Northern does get a new arena, who will be the primary tenant, NKU or a proposed NBA team?

-And that brings up this question: How many seats should the proposed arena hold? If lightning strikes (and I doubt it will) and an NBA team does relocate here, 19,000 seats would be the ideal number for them. But what about Northern? Does a Division II school need 19,000 seats? And who would get first priority, NKU or the NBA?

-Will Sam Wyche and Jerry Glanville become close friends, or will they become bitter rivals in the World Wrestling Federation?

-Can Miami (Fla.) dominate college football in the 1990s?

-When will all of the we-were-just-cheating-because-everyone-else-is-doing-it UK basketball fans come out of hiding? I guess it's just a coincidence they all disappeared into the woodwork right about the time UK was placed on probation, right?

-Can George Foreman really defeat Mike Tyson to become the undisputed heavyweight boxing champ?

-If Foreman does, will Geritol become the official drink of champions?

-Will the hoop fans of Kentucky finally acknowledge the University of Louisville is the dominant basketball program in the state?

-Can Bob Huggins lead the UC Bearcats back to national prominence in basketball?

-Can Xavier keep Pete Gillen from seeking greener pastures in the Big east, ACC or Big Ten?

-And speaking of professional wrestling, will Randy "Macho Man" Savage become the third man in the Reds radio broadcast booth, considering how much Marge Schott enjoyed his appearance at Riverfront this past season?

Honigford sets record

DON OWEN SPORTS EDITOR

Lewis University women's basketball coach Patti Hie will be very glad--make that, relieved--to see Linda Honigford graduate this spring. Especially after the rude Christmas gift Northern's do-everything senior forward presented the Lady Flyers on Dec. 23.

Honigford scored a career-high 34 points--connecting on a school-record 16 field goals--and hauled down nine rebounds to pace the Lady Norse to a 76-67 victory over preseason GLVC favorite Lewis at Regents Hall.

In Northern's last three games against Lewis dating back to last season, Honigford has scored 26, 25 and 34 points (28.3 ppg) and grabbed 31 rebounds. During her record-setting performance two days before Christmas, the 6-foot senior befuddled the Lewis defense with an assortment of inside moves and a deadly outside jumper when the Lady Flyers switched to a zone. Chris Toscas led Lewis with 20 points and 11 rebounds.

Prior to Honigford's 16 field goals, Peggy Vincent and Brenda Ryan had shared the school record with 14. Honigford eclipsed her previous career-high of 32 points, which she scored twice in 1988 against Indianapolis and St. Joseph's.
