Students take advantage of SG Gripe Day

JARED BARLAGE
STAFF WRITER

Student Gripe Day had an impressive response last Wednesday, November 1, in the University Center lobby, according to Student Government President Scott Kappas.

This was the fourth time that S.G. has sponsored Gripe day. Gripe Day occurs twice a semester and was originated under Susan Nuxoll, secretary of external affairs. Between 11:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., the Gripe day booth received about 85 written comments.

The fourth annual Student Gripe Day is a success.

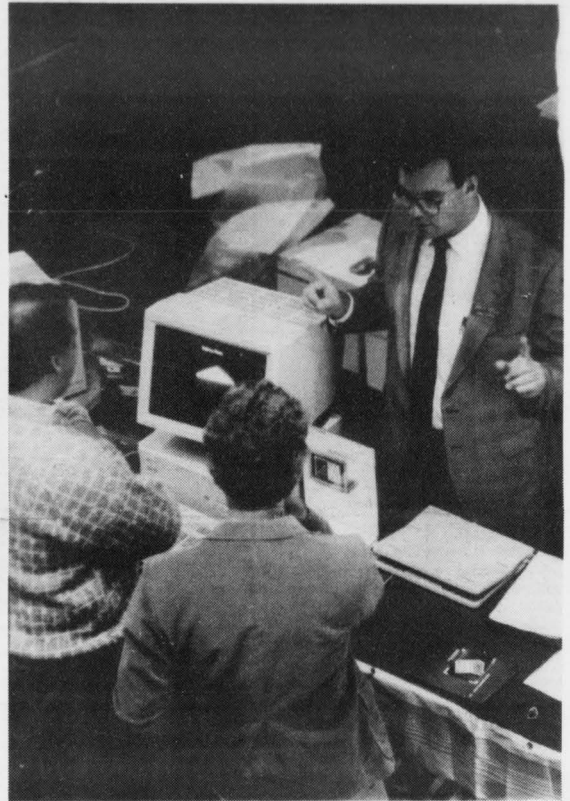

"We are very pleased with the outcome," said John Griffith, grievance and affirmative action chairperson. Gripe day is one event that comes under the Grievance and Affirmative Action Committee. "This was the first event to come under John's (Griffith) office since he took the position three weeks ago, and it was a success," said Kappas.

The comments and gripes filed by the students will be sorted into administrative categories such as food service, financial aid, public safety, academic affairs and athletic program. The committee chair then formulates a summary and sends it to all concerned parties in administration.

"We hope that Gripe Days will allow Student Government to better respond to the needs of NKU students," said Kappas. The last Gripe day was held on September 20. The bulk of the student gripes were about parking problems and prices in the cafeteria.

S.G. helps follow up on the issues and works with the administration by having a member sit on the Food Service Committee, Financial Aid, Grade Appeals and other administrative committees. When the grievance summary sheet is presented to the respective committee, the students' views are represented by the student committee member.

Over the past three semesters, S.G. has been very effective in its dealings with the administration, according to Kappas. "S.G. hopes to continue the tradition of good rapport this semester as well," said Kappas.

Administration decides no change in school colors for NKU

HOLLY JO KOONS
MANAGING EDITOR

"There will be no color change," said NKU President Boothe after a recommendation for no change was made by Vice President of University Relations Peter Hollister on November 2.

Hollister stated three reasons for his recommendation:

¶ The campus was very divided on the issue.

¶ Over $17,000 would be needed for the color change.

¶ NKU needs to preserve its traditions.

Hollister said that there was clearly no consensus on the color change.

"However," said Hollister, "those people opposed to the color change felt more strongly on the issue than those that favored the color change."

Hollister added that since the campus was so divided on the issue, it would be in the best interest of the college to keep NKU's colors of gold and white accented by black.

Approximately $17,000 of new money would be needed for the color change in the athletic department alone, said Hollister. He went on to say that at the present time, NKU is not in the financial position to make this type of change for the university.

Upon talking to Boothe after he made the decision to keep NKU's school colors, he said that NKU has grown and changed with the times, but that the school colors are a tradition that needs to be well-preserved.

The Individual Events Speech Team took 1st place overall at the Heidelberg College Speech Tournament in Tiffin, Ohio, on October 28, announced Durell Hamm, Director of Forensics.

There were 15 schools that competed in the tournament from Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Florida, and Texas.

This was the second tournament of the year and Hamm is "pleasantly surprised" at the team's success.

Individual awards were won by:

Jody Borge, freshman, theater major, 4th place in Prose and 6th in Poetry.

Holly Clevenger, senior, literature major, 3rd in Duo.

Michelle Deeley, sophomore, speech and journalism majors, 1st in Informative Speaking, 1st in Communication Analysis, and 2nd in After Dinner Speaking.

Ted Weil, senior, RTF and theater majors, 3rd in Duo and 6th in Poetry.

Hamm added the whole team contributed to the team's overall standing of first place.

The team competed again on November 3-4 at Marshall University in Huntington, West Virginia.

MAKING THE GRADE FOR YOUR PEAK PERFORMANCE Overcoming the Gottas

by
Robert J. Kriegel, Ph.D.

Editors note: Robert J. Kriegel, Ph.D. — best selling author, former All-American athlete, and mental coach for Olympic and world class athletes — lectures and consults with major corporations worldwide on peak performance, leadership and strategies for dealing with change. Kriegel recently took part in a national tour of college campuses sponsored by the makers of Nuprin Pain Reliever.

To remind you how to be a peak performance thinker, Kriegel and the makers of Nuprin have developed a "pocket coach" of tips for combating pressure and pain. For a free copy of the Nuprin Pain Relief Guide, write to Nuprin, P.O. Box 14160, Baltimore, MD 21268.

The alarm sounds. "6 a.m. I've really gotta hustle. I've gotta finish that outline, talk to Professor Jones, stop by the lab, read 100 pages for my noon psych class and be at work at 3 p.m."

Today's college campuses are pressure cookers. In fact, the Nuprin Pain Report, the first national study on pain in America, documented that more people 18-24 suffer from stress and pain than any adult age group.

As I've toured the country visiting college campuses, students tell me the most common causes of their stress are: too much to do, too little time; exams; money; relationships; interviews; family and career choices.

So, get rid of stress. Right? Wrong. Stress is neither good nor bad. How you handle it can be. Learning to make stress work for you can help you concentrate better and think more clearly under pressure, have more energy, be more creative and make college more enjoyable.

But many of us handle stress poorly.

Some people panic and work too fast under stress. Others procrastinate. Neither response is productive and both are caused by what I call "sabotage thinking" — common reactions to stressful situations that work against rather than for you.

Two common types of sabotage thinking are: "the gottas" and "the can'ts."

Let's look at the gottas and methods to overcome them.

The gottas usually occur when you think you have too much to do and too little time to do it: "I gotta study for two exams. . . I gotta read two chapters. . . I gotta call financial aid about my loan. . . I gotta get a date for Friday night. . ."

The gottas make everything seem harder than it really is. You get into the panic zone, rushing to get it all done. You walk too fast, talk too fast, think too fast, write too fast, eat too fast. You can't concentrate or think clearly. You make careless mistakes, blank out on exams and forget things you already know. Everything seems like a life or death proposition.

I was talking to a junior at U-C Berkeley who had a bad case of the gottas about a forthcoming exam. "I gotta get an A," he said. I asked what would happen if he didn't.

"If I don't get an A, I won't keep up my 4.0 average. Then I'll never get into a really good graduate school, and then I won't get a top job, and then I'll never make a lot of money. . ."

By the end of his discourse, not getting an A on this test was akin to his life being ruined.

When he stopped and thought about what he'd just said — that if he didn't ace this test his life would be down the tubes — he started laughing. "I must be crazy."

He was not crazy, just not thinking clearly or realistically. Many of us get that way under pressure. This type of desperation thinking makes us overreact and causes panic. The cure is to shift from irrational to rational thinking. Do a reality check. When you get the gottas take a deep breath, exhale slowly and ask yourself, "What is the worst thing that could possibly happen?" and "How likely is that to happen?"

This type of reality thinking puts the gottas in perspective. Sure, not getting an A would be a drag, but it wouldn't be the end of the world nor would it land this A student in the ranks of the homeless.

Looking at past wins helps, too. After all, he already had a 4.0 average, and had done well on difficult exams before. Reminding himself of his past success on similar exams helped him relax and restored his confidence.

Gaining control of your thinking will help to turn desperation reactions into peak performance actions. Learning this early in life will be invaluable in the future, because no matter what you do or where you do it, there's always going to be things you gotta do.

Are today's journalistic standards dying?

Recently a Court of Appeals in San Francisco ruled that a journalist quoting a public figure may make up a quote as long as the quote "does not alter the substantive content" of what was said.

Connie Chung is the host of a new show on prime time which reconstructs news events using actors who resemble real people. This is not the first, nor will it be the last show of it's kind.

Recently on the evening news, Dan Rather prepared to show a clip and pointed out that the piece was actual footage, not a dramatization.

Zsa Zsa Gabor's trial was the lead story on local news.

BARB BOLENDER

All these things lead me to wonder what has happened to journalism in this country. News value has taken on a whole new meaning. We are no longer concerned with accuracy. We want entertainment.

Journalists can no longer take pride in being the vigilant watchdogs over government and industry. Why bother to be vigilant when you can make up quotes?

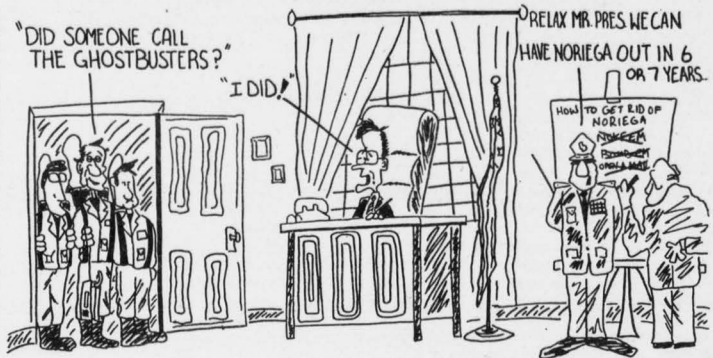

We have entered the age of newsertainment. Dramatizations, reenactments, actors on the evening news. I have a simple philosophy: When I see something on the news, I prefer it to be news, not a play, not a soap opera. If there is no actual footage, there should be no footage at all.

The sad thing about this situation is that you, the public, asked for it. Broadcast news needs ratings and newspapers need readers. When you people get bored, you stop watching and reading. So the new journalism has offered you entertainment rather than news. It is true that the press plays the role of gatekeeper. That is, we control what you see, hear and read. But if you aren't paying attention, we change it.

Journalism in this country was founded on the idea that a free press protects and informs the people. Lives were lost in order to uphold that idea. People in other countries only dream of freedom of speech. People in this country not only take it for granted, they are bored with it. News is no fun.

The fact of the matter is that fabricated quotes, dramatizations and Hollywood leads are what you people have asked for. Well, you asked for it, you got it. When you want to hear the news, the whole news, and nothing but the news, please let us know.

Letters to the Editor

Reader asks, 'Is anyone in there?'

To the Editor:

This letter is written in response to an article in last week's issue. The article was entitled 'Is anybody out there?'

Knock! Knock! Hello, is anybody in there? Just hide if you were the one who wrote the article insulting the NKU student body. Keep in mind that you are out-numbered.

Whoever you are - it was mighty brave of you to write such an article. I hope you feel better now.

I realize that The Northerner is only a college newspaper, but that article was highly unprofessional. I would think that your time would be better spent writing more encouraging articles than articles that try to put a guilt trip on students to do something.

Writing ineffective and insulting articles is easy. Prove your skill as a writer by writing a truly persuasive article. So get off your apathetic (sic) kazoo and think before you write!

Thank you,
Gary Wehrle

Reader objects to cartoonist's views

To the Editor:

I am appalled and outraged at the cartoon which appeared on the editorial page of the November 1 issue of The Northerner. This cartoon portrays Japanese with the classic negative Asian stereotypes of exaggerated physical features, complete with "slanty eyes," wire-rim glasses, and toothy grin.

It is doubly ironic that you choose to rely on an offensive, racist caricature, at a time when NKU is actively pursuing an exchange relationship with a Japanese university, and when your own front page of the same issue featured the need to be more sensitive to Asian cultures.

You owe the University community an apology for this egregious error.

Sincerely,
Timothy T. Serey, Ph.D.
Associate Professor of Management, College of Business

Apology needed, reader says

To the Editor:

I am dismayed by the David Cowles cartoon in the November 1 Northerner. The stereotypic portrayal of a Japanese person is embarrassing and irritating to people who are trying to build bridges to other cultures and countries. Actually, it should be embarrassing and irritating to everyone; stereotypes have no place on a university campus.

I hope printing this cartoon was a one-time oversight. An apology seems to be in order.

Cold showers get cold shoulder

To the Editor:

As a Resident Assistant at the Residence Halls, part of my job is to report any problems to the proper authorities. However, it seems that I have fallen upon deaf ears with a water problem in my wing, A-Wing.

The bathrooms in A-Wing were remodeled over the summer, and they really look great. The problem lies with the temperature of the water in the showers. It takes 5-10 minutes for the water to stop steaming and reach a temperature that is reasonable. During the time it takes to take a shower, the water goes from warm, to hot, to cold several times.

I have reported the problem since the end of August. I have talked to the Resident Director, the Director of Residential Life, and the Dean of Students, all of which have said that the Physical Plant is either working on it, or the parts are on order. I find it very hard to believe that it takes this long to get parts to remedy this problem.

I keep seeing the signs that say, "NKU PUTS STUDENTS FIRST", and I wonder if that also means the minority of Residence Hall students as well. Maybe now the problem will be solved.

Homeless publicity appreciated

To the Editor:

Thank you for the recent front-page coverage of the plight of the poor and homeless in Kentucky. The article was well written and should help draw attention to the needs of many who are lacking necessities that most of us take for granted.

The next step after being informed is to attempt to remedy the situation. The Food Donors Group (a volunteer faculty and staff organization) is again distributing well-marked can to numerous areas on campus to collect cash donations for local organizations that serve the hungry. Any amount of change that can be spared will help the cause and also help the donor to experience a Happy Thanksgiving.

Thanks again for your role in publicizing this issue.

Sincerely,
Connie Carroll Widmer,
President Education Dept.

Charity groups need more support

DEBRA K. PEARCE
GUEST COLUMNIST

Strange cans are appearing throughout campus asking for, what else, your money. Unlike many such collections, however, this money being solicited by the NKU Donor Group will be used to help the needy in our immediate area. There are many agencies in Northern Kentucky striving to help those in need, but none are more deserving of your support than those selected to receive these monies this year, Welcome House and Parish Kitchen.

These two organizations, although totally separate in terms of funding and management, aid thousands of our neighbors annually. Parish Kitchen, 193 Pike St., Covington, a "soup" kitchen that serves no soup, has been operating for the past 15 years. A hot and tasty (I've eaten there) lunch is served along with friendship 7 days a week to over 200 people per day. It is a meal that, unfortunately for many, may be the only one available for that day. Funding for Parish Kitchen comes solely from private resources, primarily from their sponsor, Catholic Charities, and from the community.

Welcome House, 141 Pike St., serves as a center for distribution of food, clothing, financial help, and advocacy to approximately 400 qualified families per month. Shelter and food is provided for a maximum of 25 women and children per night, over 730 people this year. Additionally, Welcome House manages the Protective Payee Program to help administer the funds of the seriously mentally ill and disabled. It is sponsored by the Ecumenical Coalition of Churches and receives some Federal funding but relies heavily on your support.

Remember, neither of these two institutions could survive without the continuing help of people like you

Summer movies set an all-time mark at the box office this year, but the fall lineup may challenge those figures.

In a summer that featured Batman, Indiana Jones, and Lethal Weapon 2, you'd figure that this fall's films would be a weak lot. Well, guess again.

Here's a preview of some hot films premiering soon at a theater near you.

Steven Spielberg has had plenty of success already this year, with Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade and the Roger Rabbit cartoon short Tummy Trouble, and it looks as if this fall could be just as strong. He's involved in three fall releases that all could be potential blockbusters.

• Back to the Future 2 - Steven Spielberg presents the further adventures of Marty McFly (Michael J. Fox) in this sequel to the 1985 comedy smash. Christopher Lloyd, Lea Thompson, and Thomas Wilson all reprise their original roles. Directed by Robert (Who Framed Roger Rabbit) Zemeckis.

• Always - Spielberg directs this remake of A Guy Named Joe as a romance set against the backdrop of firefighting. It stars Richard Dreyfuss and Holly Hunter.

• Dad - Spielberg serves as executive producer in this comedy-drama about family relations. It stars Jack Lemmon, Ted Danson, and Olympia Dukakis. Directed by Family Ties Gary David Goldberg.

Comedies always do well at Christmas, but it'll be tough to top last year's list of comedies. Those hilarious film smashes included Scrooged, The Naked Gun, Twins, and Working Girl.

Here are some of this fall's brightest comedies:

• Harlem Nights - Eddie Murphy wrote, stars and directed this comedy set in Harlem in 1938. It co-stars Richard Pryor, Redd Foxx and Arsenio Hall. Look for this one to make a lot of money.

• National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation - Chevy Chase is back as the bumbling Clark Griswold in the continuing misadventures of America's favorite family since the Brady Bunch. The script is written by John Hughes.

• We're No Angels - Hollywood bad boys Robert De Niro and Sean Penn team up for a comedy about mistaken identity.

• The War of the Roses - Danny DeVito directs this comedy about a and me. As Molly Navin, director of Parish Kitchen stated, "It's nickels and dimes that really feed the poor." So please, next time you pass a Food Donor Can on campus, contribute a bit of your change for those who may be truly hungry. Collections will be made throughout the month of November. Boothe named regional V.P. for IOHE

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

NKU President Leon Boothe has been named a regional vice president for the Inter-American Organization for Higher Education (IOHE).

IOHE, an international non-governmental organization is essentially dedicated to institutional cooperation and to the development of higher education in the Americas. Boothe is the regional vice president representing the United States. He is one of eight regional vice presidents.

The IOHE was established in 1980 and has progressively established itself in almost all of the countries of the American continent. Today it has more than 300 member universities, 250 of Latin American origin. It has laid the foundations for a common union between North and South America by helping to establish bilateral interuniversity agreements and by organizing seminars and symposiums on specialized topics of interest to its members.

World premiere play a hit

MARK ADAMS
NORTHERNER CONTRIBUTOR

Cleverly-written dialogue, animated characters and good stage direction make NKU theater department's The Great Easter Egg Hunt worth seeing.

The play, directed by Northern's Jim Ligon, is special because last week was its "World Premiere." But what's even more interesting is that its playwright, Kenneth W. Jones, is a former theater instructor at NKU.

The Great Easter Egg Hunt performed on Fine Art's Main Stage November 2-8 -- is a thought-provoking comedy set in the small town of Umatilla, Florida that deals greatly with the emotions and deeds of human beings. Greed, envy, love, hate, intelligence, stupidity, cowardice and bravery -- they're all in there.

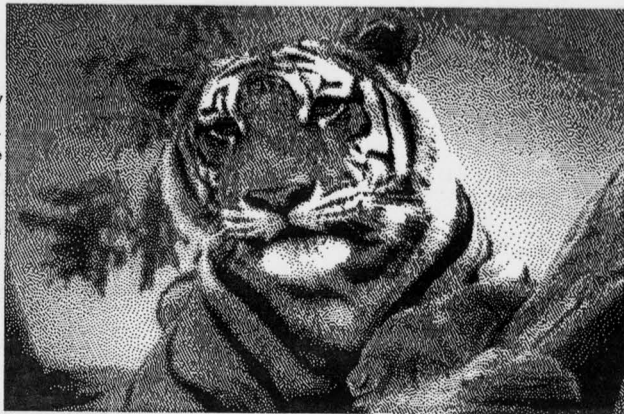

Many of the characters are hilariously stupid, specifically the Dumping brothers (David Rosenberg and Huey Scott Pergrem), whose nutty dialogue and insane rationale and insane bring the audience alive with laughter.

The play takes some risks, but they are appropriate and well timed. Kelly Eviston gives a strong performance as Horvana Dwight, the town floozy. Blatantly sexual, she tackles, grabs and seduces men all for the sake of power.

Scott T. McGee is great as the cider-sloshed judge and MC of the egg hunt. The character of Judge Pulander seems to be the most difficult to perform because of its comedic complexity. (He usually has to play to an imaginary crowd.)

The end of the play presents an ironic twist. It is surprising and sad when

Who says college campuses are safe?

REPORT FROM READER'S DIGEST
By Marie Hodge & Jeff Blyskal

Violent crime, including murder and rape, is rife on America's campuses. Here's how parents and students can fight back.

Jeanne Clery, Lehigh University Class of 1989, would have graduated last June 4. Instead, her dreams and her parents' hopes for her ended forever on April 4, 1986. At 5 a.m. that day, the 19-year-old freshman awoke to find fellow student Joseph Henry burglarizing her dorm room. Henry raped and beat Jeanne savagely. Then he strangled her.

At the University of California at Berkeley in 1987, a gang of teens police call a "rat pack" followed three students to their dormitory. Words were exchanged, and a pack member suddenly smashed the face of a female student with a brick.

Despite the idyllic images college brochures present, violence is a fact of life on the nation's campuses. Last year colleges reported to the FBI a total of 1990 violent crimes: robbery, aggravated assault, rape and murder.

This is a startling number, considering the fact that almost 90 percent of U.S. colleges do not report crime statistics. The incidence of property crime was even greater - more than 107,000 cases of burglary, larceny, arson and motor-vehicle theft at reporting schools alone. Shocking, 78 percent of the violent crimes were committed by students, according to the Center for the Study and Prevention of Campus, at Towson State University in Maryland.

Traditionally most colleges have kept quiet about crime, fearing adverse publicity, they have tended to deal with offenders internally instead of referring them for prosecution.

The Clerys were a major force behind a new Pennsylvania law that requires all colleges in the state to disclose crime statistics. They also advocate federal legislation requiring such disclosure.

The failure of colleges to warn about crime has created a dangerous situation. Too often, parents and students are unaware of the hazards of life on campus.

But concerned parents, students and college administrators are taking action around the country and setting examples for others to follow.

Here's what every college should do to control violence on campus:

Start a campus-watch program.

Lock and monitor doors.

Improve lighting and install emergency phones.

Use escort and van services. Curb alcohol abuse.

Keep students and parents informed.

Clean up bad neighborhoods.

Fight rape with education.

Advice to women for avoiding rape: Date in groups until you get know your dates. Avoid being in any isolate situation. Don't drink with people you don't know well. Beware of men who talk about women as conquests or as adversaries.

To ensure the safety of students, colleges must develop an aggressive strategy against crime. Parents should encourage college administrators to adopt proven safeguards, and students must exercise common-sense precautions. If all do their part, the scandal of campus violence can be ended.

If you want to help keep NKU's campus safe, apply as a student escort in the Student Government office, UC, room 208.

Linda Honigford: NKU's golden girl

DON OWEN
SPORTS EDITOR

What makes Linda Honigford such a unique member of the 1989-90 NKU Lady Norse basketball team?

Is it the fact she's the last remaining player from the 1987 Final Four team?

Or is it because she is one of only four underclassmen in school history to join the 1,000 point club?

Or is it because she has a chance to do something no other player in NKU or Great Lakes Valley Conference history has done ... play in two Final Fours?

A simple all of the above will do.

The 6-foot senior from Cloverdale, Ohio, will end her career among the all-time leaders in virtually every offensive category at Northern, but that Honigford is even a member of the Lady Norse program is due more to luck than anything. Just ask NKU head coach Nancy Winstel.

"I was at an all-star game to watch another player, and I saw this girl get a rebound, fill the lane and score, and it was Linda," Winstel said of the first time she saw Honigford play. "I'd been told to look at her, but if I had a nickel for every player I'm told to look at ... we just happened to follow a lead. Fortunately, no other coaches were around. We were just in the right place at the right time."

Honigford attended Ottoville High School and averaged 19 points her senior year, but Division I schools showed only a passing interest. The size of the tiny Putnam County area could have been a factor in the inexplicable oversight by Division I schools. "My graduating class was only 48 people," said Honigford.

"Our town has around 1,000 people and in that area, it's hard for anyone to get an athletic scholarship. People are really missing out on some good players up there."

They definitely missed out on one. Several schools offered Honigford a scholarship, but after narrowing the choices to Bowling Green and Northern, she decided to join the Lady Norse program.

After sitting out her first year with knee trouble, Honigford became an immediate impact player on the 1986-87 Final Four team, averaging 10 ppg. and five rebounds. But not before she was forced to make her biggest adjustment to the college game—defense.

"In high school, we played no man-to-man defense whatsoever," Honigford recalled. "At the camps I did go to, they stressed man-to-man defense, and I realized the importance of playing it in order to play in college."

"Here at Northern, it was man-to-man, positioning, moving your feet ... it was all foreign to me and coach was about ready to kill me that first year."

Winstel offered no argument. "Linda couldn't guard anybody," she laughed.

"The redshirt year was the best thing we ever did, because she was able to rest her knee and learn the college game. Linda always had confidence in her offensive game and at times, she thinks she's a guard. Linda has really developed as a defensive player and she works very hard at it."

The Lady Norse advanced to the NCAA Division II Final Four that season, losing to eventual national champion New Haven, 77-74, in overtime. Honigford grabbed 14 rebounds in that national semifinal contest. "It was a great experience," she said. "We had great chemistry and senior leadership on that team, and it was unfortunate we couldn't pull that game out. We should have beaten New Haven, but just being there and getting the recognition was great."

Honigford garnered first-team All-Conference honors her sophomore season, averaging 15.3 ppg. and leading NKU to a 25-3 record. The Lady Norse finished as GLVC co-champions, but were eliminated in the tournament by Lake Superior State in overtime. "We worked very hard, but we just seemed to peak too early," Honigford said of NKU's early exit in 1988. "By tournament time, we had seemed to have lost our intensity."

An ankle injury slowed down Honigford's conditioning prior to last season, but it turned out to be an omen of what 1988-89 would bring—an injury-plagued year. Her averages of 13.7 ppg. and 5.9 rebounds would thrill most collegiate players, but Honigford would just as soon forget her junior year.

"It was frustrating because you want to play, but you don't want to come back too soon," she said of her ankle rehabilitation and subsequent broken arm, which caused her to miss five games. "I just feel when I did get back, I wasn't in condition, and it's hard to get your conditioning back."

"I wanted to help out, but it seemed like at times I was just there and not playing up to my potential. That's the worst feeling in the world; You know you can play better, but something's holding you back."

One bright moment did occur for Honigford individually last Feb. 21 against Xavier, when she became only the fourth underclassman to go over the 1,000 point mark at NKU. "I knew my mom was keeping track of my points," inside, you don't stop her. Linda is definitely one of the best to ever play here at Northern."

Honigford explained that her success on the court can be traced back to her parents. "My dad was a bigger influence on me than he realized in high school," she said. "I always thought so much of him. He wasn't one of those fathers who would always harp on me in high school and say, 'you did this wrong or you did that wrong.' One thing my parents always instilled on me was that there is always someone out there who's better than you."

"You can't think you're the best, because you're not. There's someone who can beat you on defense, block your shot or show you up. Both my mom and dad have been big influences on me."

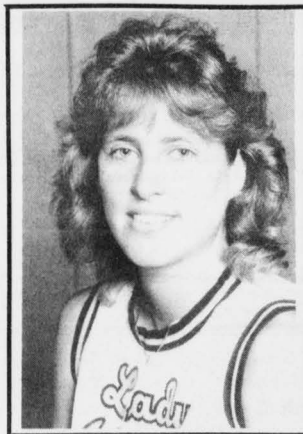

As the last remaining player from the Final Four squad, the versatile senior forward knows about the hard work needed to get there. "You figure you'll be back in the Final Four again after the first time, but you have to be realistic," she said. "We worked very hard to get there, and hopefully, we'll work as hard in practice this year. I'd love to go back."

A history major with a minor in German, Honigford plans to attend graduate school and would eventually like to teach at the college level. As much as she will miss playing, she isn't certain who will miss it more in her family. "My mom and dad love to follow the team, and I don't know if it's going to be more of a problem with me not being on the team next year or with them," she laughed. "They're so used to coming down here and watching the games. I'm going to miss it, but so will they."

Winstel agrees there is something special about Honigford being the last remaining Final Four player. "I always meet with my captains before the season, and I told her, 'You're the last of that breed,'" Winstel said. "I'll hate to see her leave. She's a chip off of her parents, and they are really neat people. They show up at all our games, and sometimes they'll show up at places to watch us you'd never expect to see them."

"We're going to miss her parents ... I'm going to miss them."

Next year, it shouldn't come as a surprise if all NKU fans are echoing those same sentiments about a certain player from Cloverdale, Ohio, and asking, "Where will the Lady Norse be this year without Linda Honigford?"

Linda Honigford

she said. "She's one of those moms who always has the points added up, and it was really a big thrill for her and my dad to see it, because my dad scored 1,000 points in high school."

"She told me the Xavier game might be the night, but I wasn't sure how many I needed. I remember scoring a basket, getting fouled and while I was shooting the foul shot, the whole bench was standing up. That would have been 1,000, but I missed it."

Not to worry, because on a 10-foot turnaround jumper, Honigford recorded the career milestone which put her in very select company. By the end of this season, No. 22 could rank second in scoring to only Peggy Vincent. Winstel considers that quite a feat.

"To be in the same company as Peggy Vincent is an honor," said the NKU coach, who was a teammate of Vincent's in the '70s. "Peggy was quicker, but Linda is stronger inside. Once she gets the ball

Norsemen to play international competition

Basketball team to play SSV Ulm German squad

The NKU men's basketball team will open the season with an exhibition game against the SSV Ulm German basketball team on November 8 at Thomas More's new Convocation and Athletic Center.

The Norsemen will play at 7:00 p.m. and Thomas More will take on the IMT Basketball Club of Belgrade, Yugoslavia, at 9:00 p.m.

Five former collegiate players are listed on the SSV Ulm roster, including Victor Fleming (Xavier), Olaf Blab (Evansville), and Archie Johnson (UAB).

The Norsemen will then take on the Lexington AAU team at 7:30 p.m. on November 11, at Regents Hall. Prior to that game, the NKU Lady Norse will hold the annual Gold/White scrimmage at 6:00 p.m.

The Norsemen finished 17-11 last season, while the Lady Norse recorded their fourth straight 20-win season.

Soccer team advances to GLVC semifinals

The NKU men's soccer team advanced to the GLVC semi-finals with a 3-0 defeat of St. Joseph's on Wednesday.

With the victory, the Norsemen upped their 1989 record to 7-12-1 overall.

Junior Doug Niemczyk and sophomores Tom Ammann and George Senfner provided the offense, each with one goal.

Moving into the semi-finals, the Norse should look to Herbie Kunz, George Senfner, and Todd Gruenwald for some offense. This trio led the Norsemen during the regular season in scoring.

As far as defense, Buntic, the goal keeper, will have to continue his steady play in the net.

The team fared well against the GLVC during the regular season. Their best offense came against the GLVC, averaging 2.5 goals a game. The defense only gave up 1.4 goals. (NKU 18, GLVC 10)

Although the Norsemen finished 5-12-1, they played a brutal schedule, including four division one teams and three highly ranked division two and NAIA teams. Within their conference, they had Southern Indiana and Belleramine, both very good teams.

NKU gives Biermann a sweet win

NORTHERN STAFF REPORT

The NKU Lady Norse volleyball team ended the home portion of the 1989 schedule by defeating Mount St. Joseph in four games, 16-14, 15-4, 13-15, 15-4.

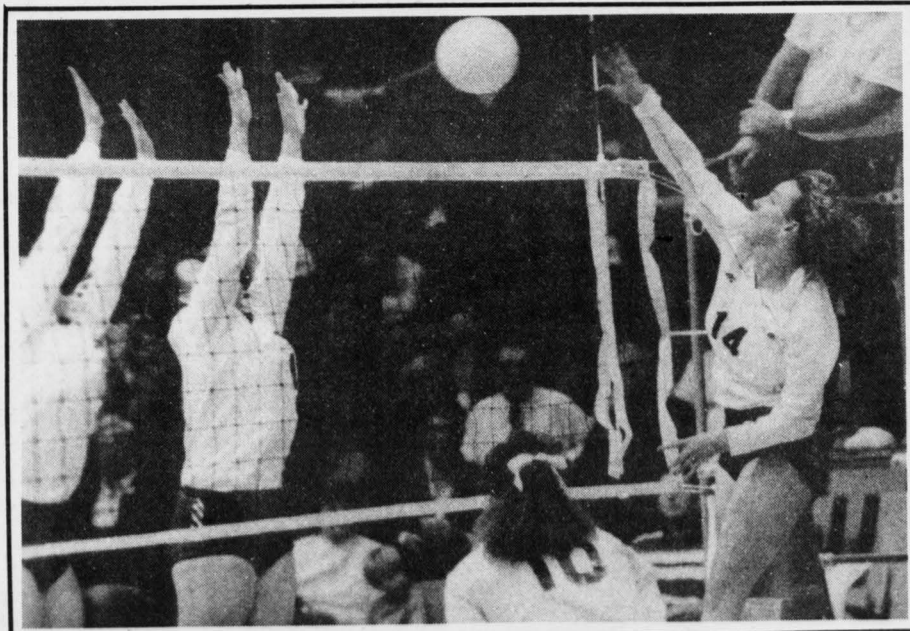

The contest marked the first time Mary Biermann had faced her former team. Biermann had compiled a 212-146 record as coach of the Mount from 1980-88. The Lady Norse improved their 1989 record to 9-11 overall, while standing 6-3 in the GLVC.

The victory over the Mount also marked the last appearance of senior Molly Messmer in Regents Hall. Messmer, an All-GLVC setter, currently ranks fifth in the nation in service ace percentage.

Earlier in the week, the Lady Norse had defeated Kentucky Wesleyan in straight games, 15-4, 15-1, 15-5, and lost to conference leader Lewis, 15-5, 15-5, 15-8.

The Ace Reporter's™ Football Follies Contest has set new standards in the arena of write-in polls, contests, etc., at NKU.

Our office was over-flowing with entry forms, amassing more than five times last week's turn out. Maybe we don't need to give away hats for people to enter. Just kidding. We're getting sick of Melissa trying all of them on.

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all the students who turned in their fearless NFL predictions. It's great to see that people do read our paper and will respond if asked.

Now that all the introductory salutations are done, on with the contest. This week's NFL Match-ups.

Smith Corona presents three products that can help make schoolwork academic.

The Smith Corona PWP 2000 Personal Word Processor is in a class by itself. It's so compact it can fit in the most compact dorm room. Yet, thanks to features like a built-in disk drive, 100,000 character DataDisk capacity, and a crystal clear display, it makes it easy to transform B's into A's.

For those who prefer an electronic typewriter, the Smith Corona XD 4600 is the typewriter of preference. With its 16 character display and approximately 7,000 characters of editable memory, you can have the convenience of word processing features with the simplicity of a typewriter.

Of course, the pocket-size Spell-Right™ 300P also comes with impeccable references. In this case, a built-in electronic dictionary, a thesaurus, a calculator, even a collection of challenging word games.

So if you're thinking Magna Cum Laude at the end of this year, don't forget to think Smith Corona at the beginning of this year.

feuding married couple, played by Michael Douglas and Kathleen Turner. DeVito co-stars as well.

Finally, the popular drama movies. Most movie companies wait till fall to show off their big pictures they feel are worthy of Best Picture honor. Here's a two of the this fall's hopefuls:

• The Two Jakes - The long-awaited sequel to Chinatown finally comes to the silver screen. Jack Nicholson, who also directed the film, returns to the seedy streets of Los Angeles to fight corruption. This could give Nicholson a tight grasp on a Best Actor nomination.

• Born on the Fourth of July - Tom Cruise, in his first film since Rain Man, plays a Vietnam vet in director Oliver (Platoon) Stone's second installment of his personal Vietnam trilogy. Platoon's Willem DaFoe also stars.

Harvard bound Will Ferebee -- one of the few in the town with humanistic vision -- is accidentally shot because of a man's violent stupidity.

The Great Easter Egg Hunt has little to do with finding eggs. The play seems to have a lot more to do with the search for human nature. It is refreshing to see risk-taking, innovative theater premiere at Northern Kentucky University.

The citizens of Umatilla go on a wild hunt to find the golden Easter egg -- the ultimate prize that wins you royal treatment for an entire year. The play is centered around the dialogue that occurs between the townspeople as they greedily search for the egg.

Will Ferebee, the male lead played by Troy Hitch, is the most intelligent person ever to come from Umatilla. Throughout the play, Hitch plays Ferebee's dilemma of deciding whether to go to Harvard University or stay in Umatilla with his love Perry Monroe quite well. However, Hitch sometimes seems to work against the comedy too much.

Perry Monroe, Ferebee's girlfriend played by Regan Forman, exhibits strong emotion as she tries to convince her boyfriend to leave the small town and achieve greatness.
