$7.4 Million Library Project Set to Begin Next Month General Cable Buys Midwest

By Tina Short
News Editor

Construction is set to begin early next month on the $9.1 million Steely Library expansion project, set to take one and a half years to complete.

Originally designed to accommodate an enrollment of 5,000 students, the expanded library has been designed with 15,000 students in mind.

"It will be a much improved library with adequate user space," said Library Director Marion Winner.

When the project is finished, the library will have a fifth floor to house staff offices, a main floor doubled in size and a new three-level wing. The existing second floor outdoor courtyard will be enclosed to provide more space for the library collection.

Other improvements include a glass passenger elevator and an outdoor fountain.

Winner said a key reason she took the director's position at NKU several years ago was the administration's dedication to expanding the library. Winner was the head science librarian at Miami University during the construction of its central science library.

Every effort will be made to make the transition easy on library users according to Winner. While new space is being constructed the old walls will remain in place. When the additions are complete, the collection will be moved to the new

Some neighbors give coffee, sugar or yard tools - NKU's new neighbor will be giving $40,000 per year to benefit the university.

General Cable Corporation will pay the money as part of a lease agreement signed this summer with the Northern Kentucky University Foundation.

The company has moved into the building on Tessenner Drive (off Three Mile Road) which previously housed Midwest Communications Corp.

General Cable purchased the building from the bankrupt Midwest for $4.2 million. Although Midwest owned the building, the NKU Foundation owns the land, thus the reason for the $40,000 annual lease payment. If an option to buy the land at the end of the first three years is not exercised, the annual lease amount will increase to $80,000.

The NKU Foundation is a separately operated organization established to invest and distribute donations made to the university. In 1980, the foundation purchased 75 acres of farmland around where General Cable will be located. Besides leasing to General Cable, the foundation has also leased to the Kroger Company and the newly built Highland Ridge Luxury Apartments. All proceeds from the leases are used to pay off the original mortgage.

According to foundation officials the mortgage will be paid off in 1995 and lease payments will begin to directly benefit the university.

Jim Schwab, General Cable's senior vice president and treasurer, said the move will mark the first time all of the company's offices have been in one location. Employees will be relocating from New Jersey, Rhode Island, Texas, Indiana, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia and Arizona.

At this time, less than 100 employees are working at the site. Another 150 will arrive before the move is complete, possibly in late October.

"We like the area," he said. "People are very excited about the prospects."

Schwab also said while the company hasn't had time to explore the possibility of hiring NKU students as co-workers, the idea has not been ruled out.

"We have hired students in the past at other locations," Schwab said.

General Cable manufactures insulated copper wire products and cables. Schwab said at this time the company has no plans to use the building, which has 100,000 square feet of warehouse space, for its manufacturing.

Undefeated Norse Down Thomas More

By Kevin Nichols
Sports Editor

Freshman midfielder Chad Scott and senior forward Todd Gruenwald scored two goals a piece to give the NKU men's Soccer team a 5-1 victory over Thomas More last Thursday. The victory improved NKU's record to 3-0.

"On both of my goals the ball was on the outside and I beat my defenders to score," Scott said.

He scored his two goals from just five attempts.

Gruenwald scored his goals in different situations.

"On the first goal Kevin Wolff crossed the ball over the defense and I just tipped it in," Gruenwald said. His second goal was assisted by Larry Hutzel.

The key to the Norse's victory was speed. The Norse's speed combined with their tenacious defense.

"At first we didn't really finish what we wanted to," coach John Toebben said.

"We played the first ten minutes well, then we played flat. The second half we stopped our defensive lapse and played super."

"We're a fast-paced team," Scott said. "We started out slow, but everyone picked up their game."

NKU's offensive attack was a key to its victory.

"Coach warned us about Thomas More's attack," senior midfielder Tom Derenthal said.

"We finally shut them down and sealed it."

"They were physical," Scott expressed. "You couldn't dribble three steps without getting stuck."

"They are our cross-town rivals, so they gave us a better game," Gruenwald added. "They did give us a lot of cheap shots."

Voting Low Among Youth

By Amy Stephens
Staff Writer

Blau and Poore stickers, Bush-Quayle and Clinton-Gore signs dot the NKU campus these days, reminding students to cast their votes on Nov. 3.

Voters have the chance to elect local and state representatives and the 42nd president of the United States.

"This is a crucial year," said Paul Wingate, university affairs chairperson for Student Government. "There are a lot of important issues we, the coming generation, need to be aware of."

Crystal M. Litz, president of the Young Democrats, said she agrees. "Student loans, abortion, health - all these are of concern to young people these days."

However, according to 1991 Kentucky election figures, most young people are not voting.

The general election figures show there were 185,174 registered voters between the ages of 17-24. Of that number 22 percent voted, according to the Kentucky State Board of Elections.

Nationwide figures from the U.S. Bureau of the Census Current Population Reports show that in the 1988 presidential election 44.9 percent of 18- to 20-year-olds and 50.6 percent of 21- to 24-year-olds reported registering to vote. Of those 33.2 percent of the 18- to 20-year-olds and 38.3 percent of the 21- to 24-year-olds actually voted.

Nathan Smith, secretary of external affairs for the Student Government said, "If you don't vote, you have no reason to complain."

Chuck Hollis, former president of the Campus Republicans at NKU, takes Smith's idea a step further.

"Any one vote can determine the swing of things," Hollis said. If H. Ross Perot were to win a state, the state Board of Electors would have to choose a winner by majority vote, Hollis said.

"What is important is that the participation is there," said Hollis, who is currently youth chairman of the Bush campaign in Boone County.

The deadline for registration is Oct. 5, according to the Campbell County Clerk's office. With the date nearing, September is designated Registration Month and Student Government is offering students the opportunity to register.

Student Government will set up a registration booth in the University Center lobby Wednesday, Sept. 23 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Thursday from noon to 2 p.m.

An 800-number set up by the State Board of Elections is available for callers to register by phone. The number is 1-800-92K-VOTE.

"The right to vote is one of the few pieces of power that every citizen is given," Frederick Rhynhart, associate professor of political science, said.

Rhynhart currently teaches a presidential election course.

News Briefs

Speakers Wanted

Faculty and staff volunteers are needed to complete this semester's schedule of Wednesday Lunch Seminars. The seminars are weekly presentations by NKU associates on topics of general interest.

The presentations are held in the faculty/staff dining room in the University Center, at noon.

Any faculty/staff members interested in participating should contact Jeffrey Williams in the History and Geography department at 572-5135.

Staff Awards Luncheon Set

The 13th annual Staff Awards Day program will be held Sept. 30. The luncheon is to honor employees with five, 10, 15, and 20 years of service at NKU.

The luncheon will begin at noon with welcoming remarks by NKU President Leon Boothe and major department heads.

The third annual presentation of the Regents Distinguished Service Awards will head the ceremony.

Reservations are required for the $6 event.

Social to Start United Way

An ice cream sundae social will officially kickoff the 1992 United Way Faculty/Staff Fund Drive on Sept. 17 at 3 p.m. on the main plaza.

NKU President Leon Boothe and Cissy Seibel, director of United Home Care, will be the featured speakers.

The goal is $38,000, which is $3,000 over last year's goal.

Editorials*Last Hope Of Summer Fun

We're in the midst of the third week of school and if you aren't already bogged down with an excessive amount of homework, you probably will be soon. Right now the weather is still beautiful, but before you know it snow will be on the ground and you'll be wondering how it got there. You will have been so consumed with your school work, you will have missed the end of summer. You will have even missed the leaves changing colors and the wonderful odor the process generates.

So to insure you have one last day in the great outdoors, before it goes by, we have a suggestion for you. Go to Musicfest. The annual event, sponsored by the Activities Programming Board, WRFN and Student Government, is the perfect opportunity to enjoy one last day in the sun.

It's that last chance to sit on a grassy lawn (bowl) with a cold drink in one hand and a hot dog in the other, while listening to some great tunes.

It is today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the grassy bowl area between parking lots C and D. So don't hesitate because before you know it, Musicfest, like summer will be gone till next year.

Letters*Leader Wants Student Input

Dear Students,

As elected representatives of the NKU student body, it's our responsibility on Student Government to act in the best interest of those students. The biggest obstacle we have encountered has been your reluctance to communicate your needs to us. I have been appointed to serve as chairman of the grievance and affirmative action committee for the 1992-93 school year. I have accepted the challenge to be your spokesman, I challenge each of you to give me the information I need to improve Northern for all of us. Gripe Day is September 16 and our representatives will be at Musicfest to listen to you. If you cannot be there, our offices are located in UC 208 and you can reach me there.

Thank you,

Tim Settles

Opinion/Letters*Ethics Called Into QuestionBy Kimberly Vinje
Copy Editor

Journalism ethics and victims' rights took a turn for the worse on Sept. 9 when The Cincinnati Enquirer revealed the name of Victoria C, who accused several Bengals players of rape.

As if that were not bad enough, Editor-In-Chief George Blake had to further disgrace the profession with his explanation of the decision.

First of all it is important to note that the Enquirer is run by men.

The president and publisher, the editor-in-chief, the managing editor, the deputy managing editor of news, the associate editor, four of the five assistant managing editors and seven of the twelve department heads are men. That is 16 men of 22 positions. Hum?

Blake wrote the decision was based on the way the case was filed, in civil court rather than in criminal court.

He then proceeded to quote two women staffers who argued for Victoria C's anonymity and then five men who were for revealing her last name.

Blake and Dennis Doherty, deputy managing editor, believe that the public's right to know and beating the afternoon competition take precedence over social responsibility.

Doherty is quoted as having said, "...our story is not believable and complete without the name."

A rape victim does not need to see her or his name in print to make what she or he experiences believable. This decision is not simply about a news story.

Long after these editions of the Enquirer are buried in libraries or put in a bird cage, the person named will still have been violated and again in print.

Blake's message was very clear. Names of persons attacked by anyone the Enquirer boys deem a public figure - or just whenever they get the urge - is subject to print.

It does not matter if that person has four children as Victoria C. does. It does not matter that her boss, friends, parents and strangers are reading about it over their morning coffee.

The only remotely credible argument Blake made was the fact that this was a civil case.

However, the number of people in the circulation area who would go out of their way to obtain court papers are far fewer than those who subscribe to the Enquirer.

Would Blake, Doherty or any of the other men running the Enquirer be so eager to see the name of their wife, daughter or even themselves (yes men, rape is not just a woman thing) in print? They are public figures.

It is reported that one in ten victims report being raped. A woman has to defend herself for wearing a skirt or even makeup in a courtroom. Now she has to worry about if the guy she identifies is a public figure.

Not only did the Enquirer run Victoria C's name under pictures of the accused Bengals, they informed their readers of the number of her children, their ages, how many times she had been married and divorced and even where she has worked. The Enquirer boys neglected to run Lewis Billups prior arrests or whether any of these Bengals had ever cheated on their wives.

I am not saying any of the accused men are guilty, I just want to know why the Enquirer is bent on making sure this sort of thing is not reported again.

It was called an explanation but the only message Blake's column sent was "keep your mouth shut because next time it could be you."

This case will probably end up being dropped or settled out of court. Why? When? When Victoria C's 11-year-old daughter comes home from school crying because of the horrible things people are saying about her mother. When she has to move because she is getting hate mail. When reporters start asking her neighbors questions about her or start hanging out where she works. When either men do not want to be seen with her or want to know why all these men were allegedly so interested.

I do not know why she filed a civil lawsuit. Perhaps she wanted to file criminal charges but was told she would have to prove it in civil court because the lack of physical evidence. Maybe after she saw that Mike Tyson's victim was not named until after she decided to come forward and felt she would be accorded the same courtesy.

What the Enquirer did was the equivalent of rape. They took the power and control and essentially said, "We will do it if we want to, so prepare yourself and enjoy it."

In the future Mr. Blake, Mr. Doherty and the rest of the Enquirer boys if you feel you have to justify your decision then it is wrong.

You Might As Well Face It, You'll Always Have ResponsibilityBy Kelli Milligan
Graphics Editor

Responsibility. That's a nasty 14 letter word isn't it? I think it is.

Sometimes I wholeheartedly wish no one counted on me to do something that needed to be done. I really wish someone else would do it.

However, at the bottom of my heart I know I'll be the one that will have to complete whatever task needs to be performed. Everyone seems to assume I'll do it, so, you see, I really have no choice.

Responsibility is not a new thing to me, I've had it since I was three years old. My first younger sibling was born then and I instantly felt the need to be responsible for her.

There are times I pray for a whole lot of money to come into my hands. I'd be on the first plane to Hilton Head, S.C. and if people wanted to visit me I could fly them over on my private jet!

Hold on, I know what you're thinking - "Kel, we all have responsibilities and we all wish a million dollars would come our way, so stop complaining!" Well, I will stop in a minute, I just have one more point to bring up.

Responsibility is a good thing most of the time.

What?! Yes, you heard me right and you know it's true. It helps us all grow up. It enables us to keep our grades up and do a bunch of other things at the same time. We all need a break from it every once in a while, but it's as necessary as working for a living.

If you aren't used to having any responsibility - wake up, you're in college now. If you are used to it, which most of us are, sure it's tiring, but it'll all pay off someday.

Dental Students Practice Their Craft

Harry Lindle from Northern Kentucky awaits his check-up from student Denise Bachman.

By Lara Kallmeyer
Features Editor

Going to the dentist may not appeal to every student but some students like to have their teeth cleaned, or even better do the cleaning themselves.

The NKU Dental Hygiene Program is now accepting patients for dental hygiene services - if you dare to have a NKU student clean your teeth.

Patients can receive preventive treatment, such as cleanings and examinations, X-rays, and sealants. Any further dental work that may be needed will be referred to the patient's dentist.

NKU dental hygiene students are getting valuable experience by working on these patients, said Yvonne Bishop, program coordinator.

"It is a cooperative program between the University of Kentucky and NKU. It's a two year degree program where the students must work in the clinic for three semesters," Bishop said.

Enrollment in the program is limited. Only 14 students are accepted every year.

"It is a mobile program which means it will not be here forever. Next year, if we do not get enough students in the program, the clinic will move to another university or college," Bishop said.

Susan Berry, an instructor at the clinic, says they would like to accept another class for 1993, but the program is scheduled to rotate. Depending on the amount of interested students next year, the program could remain at NKU.

"Everything is going smooth this year," said Denise Bachman, a second-year dental hygiene student.

"It is a really good opportunity. Not only can you be a hygienist, you can go into sales," Bachman said.

"There is a high need for hygienists in Northern Kentucky and Ohio."

Bishop and Berry also confirm the high demand for hygienists in this area.

A dentist is on hand to help students with patients when needed.

Reading and Writing Help Available at Center

By Lara Kallmeyer
Features Editor

Being a freshman, English 101 can seem a nightmare.

Tom Settles, a freshman elementary education major, is confused about his classes, homework and college life in general.

Settles is learning quickly how to cope as a freshman at NKU.

"I'm worried that the skills I have brought with me won't be enough," Settles said.

"My first 500 word essay is due this week and I wrote it out and knew I needed some help with it."

Settles has found a tremendous amount of help at the Learning Assistance Center.

"I've been to the center twice and it's made me more comfortable with putting my thoughts on paper," Settles said.

"It's pleasant to get help at the center and very personal. After five minutes with the tutor, I felt I had known her for months," said Settles.

When Settles first started classes he realized he had no experience and now after two sessions he said he feels much more comfortable.

"I feel writing is not impossible," Settles said.

The Learning Assistance Center has three departments including, academic tutoring services, writing, reading and study center and learning assistance program courses.

Academic tutoring services helps students in a number of courses, such as biology, chemistry, calculus, history, and psychology.

A peer tutor, recommended by faculty in those courses, can be paired with a student who needs help in that area.

The Writing, Reading, and Study Center helps students learn to write better papers, essays, reports, take better notes and even get through reading assignments faster.

Learning Assistance Program Courses (LAP) are offered to students who want to make a change in their reading, writing or study abilities.

Courses offered include, writing workshop (ENG 090), reading workshop (LAP 091), critical reading (LAP 110), evaluating sources (LAP 120), and learning assistance (LAP 090).

The Writing Center is free to all students who want or need to improve their writing skills.

Tutors are program faculty or junior or senior students who are especially skilled readers and writers or who are specialized in an area of study.

Paul Ellis, acting director of the program, said the center is something all students should take advantage of.

"It's free to all students and they can walk in and sign up for a time and get help with any of their assignments," Ellis said.

Melissa Nichols, a senior

English major, has been tutoring at the center for three years and has helped many freshmen through their first English class.

"People come in when they're freshmen and continue to come in and get help when they are seniors," Nichols said.

"It's really an advantage for the students. You just don't get that one-on-one attention in a classroom and when someone needs help they can come here," Nichols said.

The tutors will help students at any stage of the writing process.

ROTC Members Training for the Future

By Hope Cammareri

People in green suits have been spotted around campus running, sweating profusely and yelling in unison.

While most students do not choose to exert themselves in this fashion at 7:30 a.m., it is all part of being all you can be for the members of Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC).

Exercising at the crack of dawn three times a week is part of their physical training (P.T.).

"P.T. is the hardest thing," said Cadet Andy Konan, a junior.

Members receive training in leadership, basic survival skills and rifle marksmanship. They also have the opportunity to attend camps and schools, such as airborne school.

NKU's ROTC members will attend Camp Atterbury for three days in October to learn small squad tactics, land navigation and M-16 rifle qualification.

"ROTC trains cadets and students to be leaders," said sophomore Cadet Thom Roose. "ROTC has improved my self-confidence, physical and mental being and is preparing me for a future as a leader."

Two-, three-, and four-year scholarships are available.

'Wind' Worth Unraveling the 'Sale'

By Lara Kallmeyer
Features Editor

In more than 140 years of competition, the United States has lost the America's Cup only once. There's only one thing better than winning the America's Cup... to lose it and then win it back.

"Wind" is a dramatic, fictional story about an upstart group of young Americans who are determined to win back the Cup and learn lessons about money, power, love, and ambition.

Will Parker, played by Matthew Modine, is the young helmsman who makes the mistake in the race that loses the America's Cup to Australia.

Parker is determined to get it back and regain his dream of winning the Cup.

Parker starts his campaign in the middle of the Nevada desert, where he has tracked down his former lover and sailing partner Kate Bass, played by Jennifer Grey.

Bass helps Parker design a boat that will win the Cup back along with the help of Bass's new boyfriend, Joe Heiser, played by Stellan Skarsgard and Abigail Wied played by Rebecca Miller, who has agreed to finance the new boat because of her personal interest in Parker and her need to prove herself to her father, the skipper of the boat that lost the America's Cup.

Carroll Ballard directs this Tri-Star presentation. Story and screenplay are by Rudy Wurlitzer, Mac Gudgeon, Jeff Benjamin, Roger Vaughn, and Kimball Livingston. Executive producers are Francis Ford Coppola and Fred Fuchs.

Ballard delivers an exciting film about sailing and team work. The audience is intrigued by Will's determination to fulfill his dream.

Will gains his dream in the beginning of the film only to lose it to a wave. He cannot let go of his dream and is forceful in getting it back.

The film explores relationships and the need to follow one's own dream as well as teamwork.

The footage of the races was excellent and well worth the entire movie.

Matthew Modine and Jennifer Grey star in "WIND".

Norse Defeat Northeast Missouri

Northerner staff report

The NKU men's soccer team defeated Northeast Missouri State 2-1 Saturday to remain undefeated.

Senior midfielder Steve Giles and sophomore forward Trevor Fugazzi each scored a goal for the Norse as they improved their record to 4-0.

Fugazzi scored five minutes before halftime to tie the score at 1-1. Senior Todd Gruenwald assisted on the goal.

Giles put the Norse ahead 2-1 with four minutes to play in the game. Chris Yacks had an assist on the goal.

NKU plays at home today against Division I rival Miami of Ohio. Game time is 4:30 p.m.

Volleyball Team Takes Two Matches

The NKU women's volleyball team improved to 3-0 on the season with victories over Bellarmine and Slippery Rock.

NKU defeated Slippery Rock 15-7, 15-4, 15-8 and defeated Bellarmine 15-10, 15-6, 15-13.

Against Slippery Rock, the Norse were led by junior Peggy Ziegler's 11 kills. Shawn Casey added 26 assists for NKU.

In the match against Bellarmine, Ziegler led the team again in kills with 16. Sophomore Stephanie Carle added 11 kills for the Norse.

The Norse are in action at home Friday night at 7 p.m. and Saturday at Noon.

Sports Briefs

Women's Takes First Match

The NKU women's tennis team captured its first match of the season by sweeping Kentucky State.

Terra Teoney, Laura Harry, Tricia Schuele and Peggy Whalen all won their singles matches then teamed up to take the two doubles matches.

The Norse are now 1-1 overall and 1-0 in the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

Golf Team Finishes Fourth

The NKU golf team finished fourth in its first match of the season last week in the Ashland Invitational.

Sophomore Mark Welage shot a nine-over par 81 to lead the Norse and junior Sean Brenner shot an 82.

Other scores were: Travis Turner, 85; R.J. Foltz, 86; and Bryan Fallis, 88.

Soccer from pg. 1

Toebben was happy with his team's effort. He feels that they are playing well enough to win against conference teams.

"We'll get tested against tougher teams," he said. Derenthal said he believed NKU just outlasted Thomas More.

The Norse will play tonight at home against Miami of Ohio. The game starts at 4:30 p.m.

As for Thomas More the only thing Toebben wanted to change was the score. "I wish we had a shut out for goalkeeper Jeb Snyder, but these things happen."

Freshman Brian Weiler added a goal for NKU.

space while renovations are made.

"Our purpose is to maintain the services as best we can throughout the whole process," Winner said.

Contracts for the construction must be signed by Sept. 25 on the 12 "bid packages" which make up the project.

The university has chosen 11 of the contractors, according to Director of Campus Planning Mary Paula Schuh, with only the bid on air balancing remaining.

The bids will put the project an estimated $60,000 over the construction budget of $74 million. Two possibilities to make up the difference could be to reduce the equipment budget or to take money from the contingency fund, Schuh said.

The most costly portions of the project were the "excavation" package, awarded to Matrix Building Co. for $1.836 million, and the "mechanical" package, awarded to Lagco for $2.093 million.

Dentists from pg. 5

Dr. Kevin Wall, a dentist from Northern Kentucky, says the students are getting good experience.

He says the students he works with are a good group and he is very impressed with their work.

"I think we are getting a good quality student. We have two really good classes," Berry said.

Angeline Macke, a second-year dental student in the program, said she is learning a lot more at the clinic set up in the classroom of Hanks Hall at the Covington Campus than she ever would in a classroom.

"We have a nice facility and it's a great opportunity. There are dentists everywhere looking for hygienists," Macke said.

The program charges $8 for adults, $5 for children and senior citizens receive treatment free. Delta Dental insurance is accepted. The clinic is open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Tuesdays and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursdays during the fall semester.

Those interested in taking advantage of the services can call 572-6620.

ing ideas for a paper, revision, organization, structure, and editing, whatever they are having trouble with," Nichols said.

"We also help students gain confidence in their writing ability. They need to be able to have the confidence to do their writing on their own," she said.

The Learning Assistance Center is located in BEP 230 or call 572-5475 to make an appointment.
