Albright : will be missed

by Jeannine L. Gallenstein

"He has served us with as much distinction as we could expect from any human being," Ken Lucas said after he announced that President A.D. Albright would be leaving Northern Kentucky University.

"It will be a most difficult position to fill," said Lucas, chairman of the NKU Board of Regents. "The person who follows him will have no easy task."

Albright is expected to retire from the university on February 28, 1983, which is within a week of his 70th birthday.

The announcement was made following a closed session of the special meeting of the Board of Regents which was called by Lucas. The "executive session" was called to discuss "personnel matters."

"I'm going to withhold most of what I think and feel because I'm not gone yet," Albright said.

"I'm going to work again," he said. Albright did say that there are "some things I plan to do." There are some "opportunities" into which he is looking.

Albright sees the university as continuing to grow. "The real challenge comes in the 80's, 90's, and 2000's," he said.

Albright also complimented the faculty of the university. "The school has a very good faculty; a young faculty."

Gordon Martin, a member of the Board of Regents, may have summed it up best: "You done good, A.D."

Board of Regents holds special meeting Oct. 7

by Bill Ackley
Staff Writer

The NKU Board of Regents held a special meeting Thursday, Oct. 7.

The meeting began with a fall enrollment report by President A.D. Albright. In his report he stated the total enrollment at NKU for the fall, 1982 semester was 9,404. This is an increase of 6.2% over last fall's enrollment of 8,853

Graduate enrollment and Chase Law School enrollment were held down purposely to maintain the quality of the programs.

The Board authorized $14,900,000 of Consolidated Educational Buildings Revenue Bonds, Series C, dated Nov. 1, 1982. The proceeds of these bonds will be used to finance the construction of the power plant expansion, the Health and Physical Education Center, the materials storage facility and the classroom reconstruction in Nunn Hall and the Natural Science Center.

President Albright reported on an investment program that was begun in 1978 with a beginning balance of $40,000. In 1980 the investment had grown to $235,000. Today the program has a balance of $547,000.

Federal Government leaves President Albright no choice

by Andy Backs
Staff Writer

President A.D. Albright may or may not want to leave Northern Kentucky University, but the Federal Government leaves him no choice.

Under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act Amendment of 1978, the Federal retirement age has been established at 70 years of age. This amended an act passed in 1967 setting the retirement age at 65.

According to a U.S. House of Representatives Committee report mandated by the 1978 amendment, "Raising the mandatory retirement age to 70 from 65...is expected to result in an additional 212,000 workers age 60-70 remaining in the labor force."

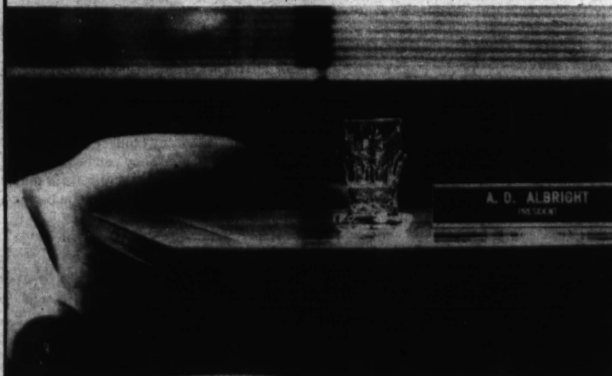

The report also adds that "if mandatory retirement ages were abolished altogether...407,100 workers would continue working, thereby contributing to the economy and lessening the burden on the Social Security system.

Albright, in an exclusive interview Friday, commented that a law will be in effect as of 1984 that will abolish the mandatory retirement age, as recommended in the above committee report. He also added that he is bound by the Northern Kentucky University policies that have established the retirement age at 70.

The NKU Faculty Policy and Procedure Manual states that as of July 1, 1982, the retirement age for the Faculty of NKU will be 70 years of age. Because Albright will reach the age of 70 in March, 1983, it will be necessary for him to retire.

When the retirement age was 65, a Kentucky State Statute permitted the Board of Regents of the Kentucky State Universities to grant individual extensions to persons aged 65-70, but there are no current plans in legislature to permit extensions to persons over age 70.

Who will fill the chair? A nationwide search will be conducted to find a successor.

SG news

The Student Government assembly accepted the fourth and fifth resignations of the semester at their Oct. 11 meeting.

SG parliamentarian Jenny Parrish resigned for personal reasons. Marcus Hon resigned as representative-at-large to spend more time on the upcoming election. Hon is on the ballot running unopposed for the open Executive Council position of Office Administrator.

Two resolutions were introduced on behalf of the Kentucky Inter-collegiate State Legislature by Tony Escamilla, SG Secretary of External Affairs. The first resolution asked SG to allocate no more than $200 for registration of NKU KISL delegates at their convention in Frankfort this weekend. The second resolution asked SG to pay one-half of the cost for the hotel rooms for the NKU delegates, the amount not to exceed $40.

Both resolutions passed unanimously.

Mary Penrod, SG President, announced the first Alpha Chi honorary society meeting. The newly formed society will meet Oct. 28 in the University Center Theater at 8:00 p.m.

Special Events chairman Tom Nagel expressed disappointment with the SG United Appeal drive. "I think we raised about five dollars," Nagel said, "and that was mainly from people associated with this assembly."

Student Government holds its meetings every Monday at 3:00 p.m. in room 108 of the University Center.

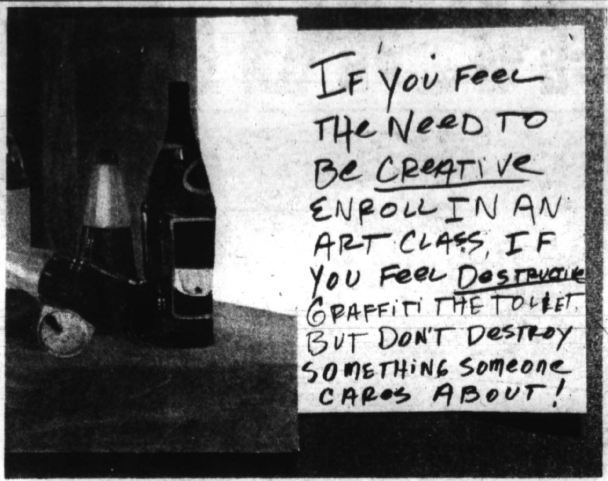

Vandals strike in Fine Arts

Seven pictures and a sculpture were damaged as vandals struck a display on the fourth floor of the Fine Arts Building.

The display, the product of NKU Associate Professor Howard Storm's art class, was vandalized last weekend.

"There was paint sitting out in one of the rooms," said Andrew Hargis, junior art major, "and apparently someone smeared it everywhere."

Hargis created the sculpture which was damaged. "Anyone could have been in here," Hargis said. "One of the things we [students] like best is the accessibility to our department," he added.

Murray highlights SAM meeting

by Bryan Whitaker
Staff Writer

Sylvester Murray, city manager of Cincinnati, and Gerald De Brunner, of Deloit Haskins and Sells accounting firm, were the featured speakers at the monthly meeting of the Cincinnati chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

The first speaker, Murray, spoke from a public management viewpoint. He stated a general definition of management saying it is a "manipulation of people and money." He added that the manner in which management completes this task is the combination of awareness and style of management—quality of leadership.

Murray concluded his address by comparing and contrasting efficiency, effectiveness and productivity. He said that productivity is the sum of efficiency and effectiveness plus good relations between management and employer. "The key to business management is communication and listening to people,"

Murray said.

De Brunner, being in a job dependent on time, centered his talk around "the productive use of human resources and time—employee speed."

He expressed the importance of communication, planning and flexibility through the use of employee input in the accounting field. "Employee input in my firm is accomplished through counselling and evaluating processes with each employee after his or her assignment," he said.

Uncurable VD, Herpes, may cause one-night stands to be a thing of the past

©Campus Digest News Service

One-night stands may be a thing of the past because of an incurable venereal disease reaching epidemic levels in America.

An estimated 20 million Americans now have genital herpes, and as many as half a million are expected to get it this year, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reports.

Risk of catching herpes and fear of having it forever may be making people change the way they conduct their sex lives. "There has been a noticeable shift in the way people are approaching their sexuality and their attitudes toward casual sexual encounters," said Sam Knox, national program director of the American Social Health Association in a recent issue of McCall's magazine.

"In the recent past, the most detrimental things associated with casual sex—unwanted pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases—could be dealt with, so people didn't worry much.

But herpes is different—once you acquire it, you have it for life," Knox said.

Time magazine reports that many people who get herpes go through stages similar to those mourning for the death of a loved one: shock, emotional numbing, isolation and loneliness, and they sometimes experience serious depression and impotence. Almost always there is rage at the carrier, and at the same time, at the opposite sex in general and at the medical profession.

One Los Angeles woman said, "When I first got it, I wanted to pass it on to everyone for vengeance until everyone had it and it became normal." Some people act out their desire of revenge. A Midwestern woman said she infected 75 men in three years. A Philadelphia man said he infected 20 women: "They were just one night stands, so they deserved it anyway."

The two most common types of herpes are herpes simplex and genital herpes or herpes simplex II. Herpes simplex causes small blister-like sores on the face, the most common being cold sores on the lips. Genital herpes causes sores on or around the genitals.

The sores of the two strains cannot be easily distinguished, and they don't always stick to their own areas. Ordinary cold sores may be transmitted to the genitals by fingers or mouth, and become a venereal disease. Because of this, oral sex may be a potent force in transmitting the disease.

A genital herpes outbreak is usually accompanied by headaches, fever, aching joints and pain in the genital area. Once herpes penetrates the skin, it multiplies rapidly. Within two to 15 days after infection, the person may feel an itching or tingling sensation. In genital herpes the first episode usually lasts an average of three weeks.

Because the disease is incurable, the herpes sufferer usually has subsequent attacks with outbreaks of the blister-like sores known as lesions. The subsequent attacks usually last about five days.

Time magazine reports that people who have herpes are not safe having sex with partners who already have the disease. They can be reinfected in different parts of the body or may receive a different strain of the disease.

Although herpes is not the worst venereal disease (untreated gonorrhea and syphilis do far more damage), it cannot be cured. When a pregnant woman has an active herpes infection at the time of birth, her baby has high chance of getting the disease if it is delivered vaginally. A large percentage of these babies will either die or have brain damage.

Women who suffer from genital herpes are five to eight times more likely to develop cervical cancer than those who do not according to the American Social Health Association.

Women seem to suffer more from herpes. However, some women are barely aware of their herpes. They sometimes have internal lesions that may be hard to see. They can be carrying the virus in the genital secretions or may be shedding the disease from the cervix without showing any symptoms.

Residence Halls first chance in SG elections

This is the first time the Residence Halls have been included in the regular Student Government elections.

After the Halls opened in the spring semester last year a special election was held for the Residence Hall Council. This fall nine residents will run for Wing representatives, Commons representatives and Residence Hall representative-at-large.

In the regular election ten students are running for nine positions as representatives-at-large. Marcus Hon will run for Office Administrator on the Executive Council. No formal petitions were filed for candidates for Academic Senators or Department Representative but write-in voting is still available to anyone interested.

Voting booths are set up in the Natural Science Building, Chase, BEP, Landrum, Fine Arts, two in the University Center, the Residence Halls and the University College.

Washington trip

The Resident Assistants of the NKU Residence Halls are sponsoring a three-day trip to Washington D.C. later this month. The tour is open to all Northern students.

The bus will leave the Residence Halls at 12 noon Friday, Oct. 22. Lodging will be provided at the Holiday Inn, College Park, Maryland. The group will visit the White House, the Capitol, the Lincoln Memorial, the Washington Monument and the Smithsonian Institute. The bus will arrive back at NKU at 6 a.m. Monday, Oct. 25.

The cost for the trip is $65, which includes transportation (including in and around Washington) and quadruple occupancy at the Holiday Inn. It has been suggested for students to take an extra $45 for meals and entertainment.

To receive more information or place a reservation, call Dave MacKnight, 572-5812; Joe Schutzman, 572-5801; or Scott Wurster, 572-5944.

Schostakowitsch?

A group of rare Hebrew folksongs by Schostakowitsch will be part of a recital by Northern Kentucky University voice professor Gayle Sheard, Sunday, October 17.

Ms. Sheard studied in Graz, Austria, for seven weeks this past summer and a friend found the songs in Budapest and gave them to Gayle for her recital.

The 3 p.m. concert on the main stage of the Fine Arts Center will also feature music in German, French and Italian by the soprano.

The second half of the concert will feature a combination of solos, duets and trios sung by soprano, mezzo and tenor. Sheard will be assisted by Jane Christeson, Ryan Stephenson, and Ron Matson at piano.

CR's name officers

The NKU Campus Republicans have announced new officers for the '82-'83 academic year. They are: Kay Powell, president; Bob Clements, vice president; Mark Riley, secretary; and Peter Bruemer, Treasurer.

Powell is the first woman president in the club's three-year existence, and also the first resident of Campbell County to hold the position.

Scholarships offered

Applications from Northern Kentucky University students are now being accepted for the Harry S. Truman Scholarships. Deadline is Dec. 1.

According to Dr. Joe Ohren, public administration professor and faculty representative for the program, the scholarships are to be awarded on the basis of merit to students who will be college juniors in the 82-83 academic year and who have an outstanding potential for leadership in any phase of government.

Each scholarship covers eligible expenses of tuition, fees, books and room and board to a maximum of $5,000 annually for up to four years.

For more information, contact Ohren at 572-5327.

Dancercise classes now forming

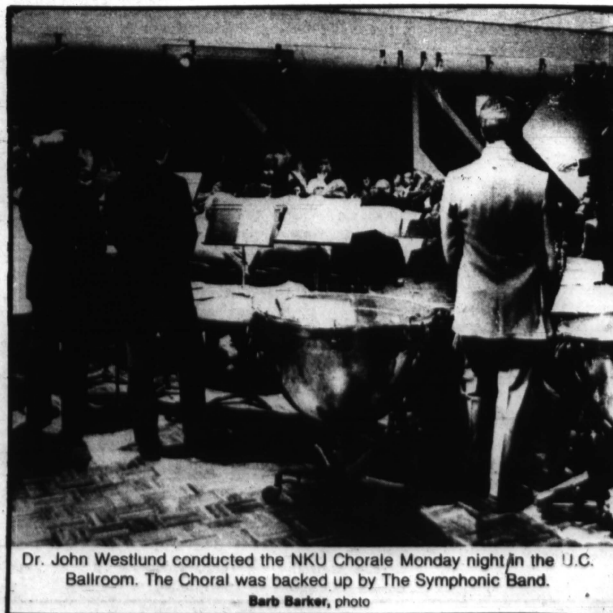

Dancercise classes are now forming. Classes will be held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons from 12:00 to 12:50. Classes are sponsored by the Campus Recreation Department. Sign up: Second floor of Regents Hall, or contact Dan Henry, 572-5728. Last date to sign up is Thursday, Oct. 21. Classes begin on Monday, Oct. 25.

NKU at Expo

Northern Kentucky University was one of the state colleges and universities that participated in the second annual Minority Consumer Expo held October 8, 9, and 10 in Louisville.

The university was represented by Andra Ward, Randy Nichols and Marcia Johnson.

Ward, president of the Black United Students Organization at NKU, was one of nine people to be interviewed on WIOU, a Louisville radio station.

Dr. John Westlund conducted the NKU Chorale Monday night in the U.C. Ballroom. The Choral was backed up by The Symphonic Band.

Who concert: Rock concert can be civilized

It was truly a most gratifying experience.

I doubt very seriously that Oct. 7, 1982 will go down in history as having been significant, and that's great. Unfortunately, Dec. 3, 1979 will go down in history.

Both dates were WHO concerts I have attended. The '79 concert began with disaster; the '82 concert began with T-BONE BURNETTE (whoever they are). Both concerts The WHO played to frenzied full houses. Both concerts the band electrified the audiences with stellar performances.

My point here is not to rehash the unfortunate events of the '79 concert, nor to review the '82 concert. I wish to thank everyone who traveled to Freedom Hall, at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center, for making the evening a memorable experience.

The crowd was large, probably 18,000 to 20,000, but very orderly. As I stood in line to get in I felt very secure despite the visible lack of outside security. Once inside I was asked to raise my pants legs for a quick search. I proceeded to my seat and was pleasantly surprised with the location. Section 222, row K, seat 12, halfway down the side from the stage in the upper level. It would provide an excellent view.

I remember looking for the red exit signs before the house lights were dimmed. After T-BONE BURNETTE came and went (in a hurry—thank God) the lights came back on and I soaked up the view—nearly 20,000 fifteen to thirty-five year-old rock and rollers with an acute lack of red eyes and slurred speech.

It was almost an hour between bands. The time dragged on. After the appropriate stage changes and testing of equipment the house lights once again dimmed and the band appeared, Peter Dinklage, Roger Daltrey, John Entwistle and Kenny Jones.

For the next two hours my eyes were riveted to the stage. The band ripped through "Substitute", "My Generation", "Pinball Wizard", "5:15", "It's Hard" and at least a dozen others. When it was over, I was hot and tired and facing a two-hour drive home. Physically and mentally I was shot but I could not help thinking that there was something very unique about the evening.

What was it? Which song was it that was particularly great? Was it the way Townshend had windmilled on his guitar? Was it the way Daltrey played the harmonica? Was it Kenny Jones' gong?

Then it occurred to me. It wasn't the band at all, it was the crowd that was unique. Never before had I seen common courtesy at a rock concert. It reassured me that rock and roll was not necessarily a den of iniquity but a means for young people to express themselves.

People make an event worthwhile, the event only brings them together.

In response to MADD

To the editor:

In response to the October 6th issue on M.A.D.D. (Mothers Against Drunk Driving), I'm "madd" too. I was the victim of a drunk driver.

Last September, on my way home from NKU, I was forced off the road on I-275. In those few seconds, as my car flipped completely over, I realized I might die or end up paralyzed. Thanks to God, and one very secure seat belt, neither happened. The police officer responding said I'd surely be dead had I not been wearing a seat belt.

Looking at my car, which was totally beyond repair, I couldn't have agreed more. Later, I noticed another officer administering a sobriety test to the other driver. He failed miserably, to say the least. Yet all the while, he kept claiming he couldn't be drunk; he'd had only six beers.

His liability ended with an evening in jail and a DUI record. His car was barely damaged. My problems, however, went far beyond that day—in time, money and nightmares.

It's history now. M.A.D.D. is out there fighting—thank goodness! But, act defensively anyway, wear a seat belt. It may save your life. I know...

In support of Justice O'Hara

To the editor:

One of the frustrations of voting for judges and Supreme Court Justices is that most voters never have a chance to watch a judge in action. There is no way to know which candidate is best for the job.

I served as an attorney on the staff of the Kentucky Supreme Court this past year and observed all the justices at close range as they carried out their duties.

I finished the year with the strong conviction that Justice Jay O'Hara is a particularly capable and much needed member of the Court.

He has been fair and tactful with attorneys arguing before the Court and with his fellow justices. He has an excellent mind and an extraordinary ability to get right to the heart of things, to raise the one key question which brings the case sharply into focus for everyone in the courtroom.

Justice O'Hara is knowledgeable, well-prepared and well-grounded; but he is also humane, considerate, humorous and reasonable. He is willing to listen to the views of attorneys and of his colleagues on the bench.

I wish the voters could see what I saw on a daily basis. Justice O'Hara brings to the Court an element of judgment, clarity and humanity which is critically important in reaching just decisions. It would be a terrible mistake to lose him.

Three solutions to parking

To the editor:

As a part time night student, I find that I have very little if any parking problems at Northern. But, on several occasions I have tried to park during the day. To say the least, it was next to impossible to get within a quarter of a mile of my destination.

With the increasing enrollment, student housing, and more construction planned I can offer three solutions.

The first would be to stagger the student schedule, so classes would end at fifteen minute intervals, and build a parking garage. One would be next to Regents Hall and across from Nunn Hall. The second would be next to the faculty parking lot and across from Landrum Hall.

The second plan would be to build a parking garage for faculty and staff. Since they already have the prime parking facility I would also increase the parking fee for the people using the garage. I would build this garage behind the library and the basement of the facility could house the Department of Public Safety. I would include visitor and handicapped parking in this garage.

The third would be to improve the mass transit system that currently serves Northern, which could include ride sharing and the park and ride theory. The park and ride should be more publicized at Northern, with various stopping points in the Northern Kentucky area. These should include: Highland Heights K-Mart, Newport Shopping Center, Covington Krogers, Southern Lanes, Latonia Shopping Plaza, Ft. Mitchell Shopping Plaza, Florence Mall, and other strategic points.

The last is probably the most acceptable because no extra funds are needed. Hopefully, the administration will see that parking is a very frustrating experience at Northern.

Five years ago: Parking decks promised

Five years ago today...as reported in The Northerner Oct. 14, 1977:

NKU to add decks to parking lots by 1981...

The nearing completion of Interstates 275 and 471 has brought about expectations of an increase in NKU's enrollment. To accommodate the influx, the university has requested from the state of Kentucky $3,370,000 with which decks will be built above five of the campus parking lots, according to John DeMarcus, vice president of administrative affairs.

"We have also done research on compact cars; smaller spaces would mean higher accommodations in our present lots," DeMarcus said. "Presently they are measured for larger sedan cars. These things are being considered now because 100 more students, when we are presently at our parking capacity, would cause problems," DeMarcus said.

Dedication kicks off week of celebration...

Student Government will dedicate the University Center next week in a "celebration to end all celebrations," according to Lynda Cohorn, decorations chairperson.

Beginning Sunday with the formal dedication of both the Fine Arts Building and the University Center, SG will conduct tours through both buildings, as well as sponsor what may turn out to be the main attraction of the week, "Laserworks," an exhibition of laser light with music. Other events include the Pinball Wizard Tournament, the movie Tommy and a Star Wars Disco Dance on Friday.

Theater students present "Guys 'n Dolls'..."

The NKU Theater Department's first production on the Fine Arts Building Main Stage is a fast-moving story set in New York City: about love and crap games. Directed by Jack Wann, the play is a "smashing success."

Kenny Roger's Six Pack: A movie goer's high

by Lisa Due
Staff Writer

At first, Six Pack would seem to be one of those Walt Disney type of movies. Well, it does run on that order. But let's say Six Pack adds a little more spice.

Kenny Rogers, the mellow rock-country singing star, is the leading man in this film. And since this writer considers him a great talent and very nice-looking indeed, I enjoyed the movie.

Rogers portrays a race car driver absent from the circuit for two years (as a result of the evil deeds by the bad guy, "Turk"). With the help of six orphans (thus the title), Rogers manages to overcome his obstacles and become a star driver once again.

The kids are the ingredient, believe it or not, that take this movie from a G rating. They are new faces to the audience, and do a fantastic job of entertaining. We are introduced to them when they steal the car parts from Rogers' newly built race car. This is what they do for a living, forced into it by the stereotyped crooked backwoods sheriff.

If you've ever seen any of the Bad News Bears movies, the kids in Six Pack in about the same fashion. They cuss, lie and steal. What makes this movie special, though, is the way the kids are changed from a group of misbehaving misfits to a bunch of lovable kids. Once they are loved and needed by Rogers (they become his pit crew), they change to become sensitive, honest, and fun-loving. Yes, folks, this movie does have its touching moments.

Of course a movie of this caliber has a love interest, but it is played down significantly in order to concentrate on the relationship between Rogers and the kids.

Six Pack does indeed have everything you would expect: a villain, a seemingly tough hero who melts down, a sheriff whom everybody hates, and a fairytale conclusion. So if you go for movies of this type, then go to see Six Pack. You won't be disappointed.

The Young Doctors in love, with Hope; The saga

by Drue Spine
Northerner Contributor

Like drops through the IV bottle, these are the days in the lives of the staff and patients of St. Belligerent Hospital, that famous fortress of healing in the heart of Kentonsburg. Respected by all for its contributions to medicine, the great red brick tower is always in the forefront of community service. Yet, on close inspection, the tragic and remarkable human drama provides interminable food for the observant and talkative. Digging deeply into the wounds of sickness and emotional turmoil, will find...the rest of the story.

Today we find the members of our cast hard at work in the trenches of real hospital work—the emergency room. Doctor Noel Mandrake, Chief Resident, has been called from an important conference with the third floor nurses to assess a patient brought in by an ambulance from farm country. He addresses his questions to Hope Perkins, RN, the rosy-cheeked, red-haired nurse in charge.

"Who is this patient? What is all this blood? What happened to him? What is that smell? Where is the bathroom? I'm going to be sick..."

The patient's wife becomes hysterical as the doctor leaves the room, "Oh my God, don't let my poor husband die!" the wife pleads. But with a quick slap and a shot, Nurse Perkins quickly handles the situation by sedating the woman.

"Quiet, you fool!" Nurse Perkins says. "Don't mind Dr. Mandrake, he just becomes nauseous at the sight of the ill or injured. Other than that, he really is a fine physician. Besides, it's obvious that this man has a simple case of bilateral lung rupture from trying to blow up his tractor tire, and the tire backfired into his mouth. The blood is only from the lugnuts being propelled through his rib cage."

"But Hope," exclaimed Nurse White while ripping off the patient's bloody shirt, "won't he bleed to death?"

"It's obvious that the wounds have been sealed from the inside with the Fix-a-Flat this man must have used on the tire to repair it," Nurse Perkins says calmly. "Our only problem now is to see if we can get Chief Surgeon Dr. Proctor here from the country club in time to do a lung transplant before the sodium potassium glycostearate in the Fix-a-Flat compound can toxicate the bloodstream. Lucky for us we have the equipment on hand ready to go. This is the third case of this today."

Nurse Perkins efficiently rearranges her disheveled hair, and comforts her semi-conscious patient with her cool hand. "Orderly, call Dr. Quincely in Pathology and tell him to prepare a set of spare donor lungs for transplant, stat!"

After the patient had been taken to surgery, Nurse Hope Perkins finds Dr. Noel Mandrake in the restroom, crying. "Oh, Hope," he says, "I'm no good. I'm going to quit doctorhood and be a gas station attendant with my uncle."

"Come here Noel, and let me comfort you," Hope says as she embraces his face with her hand. "Look, you have blood on your clean white pants. Let me take them off to clean them while I comfort you. And there's blood on your shirt, too...(to be continued)

Northern Lights: more than singing in the shower

by Mary Ann Schwerman
Staff Writer

Some people practice their singing in the shower. The Northern Lights and the Tour Choir practice theirs at Northern Kentucky University. Their singing careers are not all washed up.

Under the leadership of conductor Dr. John O. Westlund, the two select groups tour and perform throughout the Kentucky and Cincinnati areas.

"The group is a natural outgrowth of a developing choral program," said Westlund of the Tour Choir, a new organization he established this year. This group is selected from over 80 members of the Northern Chorale. "The better kids in that group [the Chorale] need a better group to be challenged by," Westlund explained.

"Tour Choir is responsible for all the Chorale music, plus all the Tour Choir music," Westlund said. He said he hopes to get the Tour Choir into the curriculum for next year.

The 13-member Northern Lights has always been a hit at NKU, Westlund said. He said the group is accompanied by a piano, guitar and string bass played by Linda Abbott, Kevin Hill and Bob Holoway, respectively.

"Northern Lights, by definition, limits itself to pop music," Westlund said. Show tunes, pop and jazz pieces are the group's specialty. "This year we've been working up selections from Annie," he said.

Both groups are getting ready for upcoming performances. The Tour Choir will perform at Holy Cross Church in Latonia on Oct. 21 and at a choral festival for the American Choral Directors Association on Oct. 23.

The main concert for the Lights will be a cabaret in January or February, which has in the past been held in the university Grille.

"The kids in the group are mostly theater and music majors," Westlund said. He said it is good practice for music majors because many of them will have their own high school music groups someday, and for theater majors the group is "right down their alley of glitz and glamour."

Dear Pam

A sure cure

by Pam Miller
Staff Writer

Dear Pam,

I like to go out and have a good time, and sometimes that includes drinking. However, sometimes I drink a little too much and then I regret it the next morning. How can I go out and have fun at night and not be so miserable in the morning?

Painfully,
Ed Ache

Dear Ache,

To feel better faster in the morning take two aspirins. The leading brand that has quick, effective results is Extra Strength Tylenol, Lot No. MC 2880. I guarantee you won't even feel your headache after taking a couple of those!

All questions and comments can be dropped off in Pam Miller's mailbox in The Northerner office, Room 210 of the University Center, or sent to Pam c/o The Northerner, Highland Heights, KY 41076.

Commitment, pride and education all part of sports

by Tom Gamble
Sports Writer

His voice rings with confidence, as he firmly states his views on college athletics. He is opinionated, yet speaks as a concerned participant. There is a definite feeling of concern as he speaks. His meaning is true.

The man is Richard "Digger" Phelps, head basketball coach of the University of Notre Dame for the past twelve seasons. Phelps spoke at the Vegas Supper Club in Erlanger last Thursday afternoon to benefit NKU athletics.

Phelps gave the audience of more than 500 a speech filled with various views concerning the recent problems associated with college athletic programs.

He indicated his feelings toward the importance of the college sport and the survival of the educational aspects.

"Sports are a game plan of the time," Phelps commented. "They are a game plan that can definitely work, under the right rules and regulations."

Speaking to a college the size of Northern, he said that each and every college institution contains a great deal of importance.

"Every institution has something to sell," Phelps said. "The particular institution must find an awareness of something to sell and build on that."

During the 30-minute talk, Phelps emphasized the importance of academic fulfillment to a college athlete. He stated the various scholastic rules placed upon athletes at Notre Dame. The Notre Dame athlete is required to maintain a 2.0 GPA each quarter in order to remain eligible to play a varsity sport.

Along with the mandatory 2.0, the athlete must design courses toward a particular major, not just take "cake" classes to retain eligibility.

"Our universities have lost the fundamental structure of education over the past decade," Phelps said. "At Notre Dame we try to make sure the athlete is prepared to step out in the world following his basketball career."

Phelps indicated that a great deal of the burden in this situation rests on the pride of the athlete. The athlete must realize the importance of an education and apply all possible time to strive for excellence, he said.

"Everybody lives for moments, and everybody has their moments, but you have to establish your priorities," Phelps said. "Life is full of options, and you must pick one and make a 100% commitment to it."

Another fault in college athletics, Phelps indicated as being the loss of the desire to compete. The pressure to be No. 1 is too big, according to Phelps.

"We are not born to be No. 1, but we are born to compete and survive," Phelps stressed. "This desire has been lost, and we must come back with a sense of leadership and be committed to our goals. The biggest game is the game of life and you only beat yourself."

Statements like this made Phelps appear to be a philosopher, but actually his enlightening talk was simply the views of a concerned participant in the NCAA. Phelps stressed that the number of schools recently placed on probation should bring alarm to the NCAA.

"There are too many schools under probation and something must be done," Phelps said. "The college presidents should step in and take over the athletic departments."

As Phelps lends this insight, he clearly indicates that the situation at Notre Dame is under control. His tone of voice depicts his desire to stay well within the rules to build his basketball team.

Another concept Phelps takes pride in carrying out is the distinct position of recruiting players with a future in both athletics and the world.

"I look at a person's family and what type of upbringing they have had," Phelps said. "I do not look at the economic situation, or at the living quality. My main concern is not so much for present potential, but a strong possibility for future development."

As for advice to top high school athletes, Phelps once again stressed the importance of being academically sound.

"A high school athlete should be prepared academically, and be able to accept the institution for four years," Phelps said. "If he enters a major program, he must be ready for the challenge and live up to his academic expectations."

Phelps also indicated the importance of having Division I people give insight to the programs at the Division II level, stressing the need for a balance in sports around the country.

"Each school is solid academically, and will pursue athletic success," Phelps said. "This is a necessary ingredient in establishing a balance in sports around the country."

Each line of his speech showed a strong dedication to athletes all around the world. He displayed a sense of protection toward the college athlete.

Without the proper schooling, Phelps sees virtually no use for years of athletic experience.

"A few months ago, Bill Robenzine, a player in the NBA, was cut from his team," Phelps said. "A few days later, he killed himself and left a note for his wife. The note said, 'My basketball career is over,' thus indicating the end of his life. Is this what college prepares an athlete for?"

With thoughts like this, Phelps showed the people in attendance his true devotion to the protection of the college athlete, and his firm belief in the importance of academics.

A closing remark from NKU president A.D. Albright summed up the caring nature of Phelps. Albright said, "Digger is not only a leading athletic figure, but also a top-notch educator."

While women's volleyball coach Jane Meier talks to the team during a time-out, Kim Gunning does the paperwork. Gunning was injured earlier in the season.

Someone said it...

Sylvester Stallone, filmdom's Rocky: "Being a boxer is great exercise...as long as you can yell 'cut' whenever you want to."

Jim Dickey, Kansas State football coach: "Kansas State hasn't won a Big Eight championship in the last 40 years. I told them if I don't win a championship in that same length of time, I'll resign."

Ilie Nastase, on why he didn't report the loss of his American Express credit card: "Whoever stole it is spending less money than my wife did."

Volleyball not at full force, plagued by injuries

by Chuck Schriever
Sports Writer

When the NKU women's volleyball season began, there was a good deal of speculation as to whether the team would have enough power up the middle, and strength in the front line to compete with the Michigan State's and the University of Cincinnati's of the volleyball world.

Well, sports fans, that's a question that may never be answered, as the volleyball Norsewomen never seem to be at full force. Injuries have plagued the squad since the outset of the season, and very well could be the major force contributing to the miserable first half of the season.

The injuries have stricken the heart of the line-up as senior Nancy Berger suffered a twisted ankle, and Kim Gunning, also a senior, pulled a tendon in her knee. These injuries may prove to be more serious to the well-being of the team than they are to the players who suffered them, as Berger and Gunning, forecast during pre-season as the team leaders, are the most experienced players on the entire squad. Both injuries are classified as "nagging injuries" which are trouble to the players who have them, but don't keep them from playing regularly.

In addition, 5'10" freshman Jenny

Fleissner suffered a knee injury early in the season. Fleissner has excellent size, and should prove to be one of the stars of the future, making any injury to her more serious.

Freshman Jackie Botts, 5'9", suffered perhaps the most physically damaging setback, and is out for the season with a knee injury.

Overall, the physical problems hit the team in the worst two possible places: 1) the experienced seniors who carry the team in the tough spots, and 2) the freshmen on which they plan to build for the future. These four physical setbacks are a major part of the problem, but not the only reason for the poor record thus far.

It may well be too late to make the season a total success, or even as encouraging as had been forecast from the start. But there is more than enough time to turn the season around and salvage some good from it, as 13 matches remain on the schedule.

As for the next year, 11 of 13 roster players will return in the fall for at least one more season, and eight of those 11 will be back the year after that.

The future looks good, and the present will only be as good as the players choose to make it. With a little luck, a lot of heart, and the good fortune of staying away from injury, they should be OK.
